The fleur-de-lys has come to be the sign of the Scout in almost every country in the world. In order to distinguish one nationality from the other the Scouts of their own emblem is "superimposed". That is, placed on the fleur de lys. The Boy Scout in You see this in the United States, where the fleur-de-lys is under the arms of America stand in front, backed by the Scout-lily in front of the world-wide Scout Brotherhood. And long may it so stand!

The Knot—Tying the fleur-de-lys and Motto a little cord depends with a knot tied in it. This knot like the knot you tie in your handkerchief on occasion, is to remind the boy daily that he has to do a good turn to someone.

The Staff—Talking or pointing the way, there is another pointer in use, the most Scout Troops in the shape of the Scout Staff. This is an invaluable implement—in fact almost a necessity for finding your way in the dark and at night. A number of staves lashed together can make a very serviceable bridge over a gap, and can be built as a look-out or signalling tower, or for a stretcher. It can also be used as a railing for holding back crowds or for making stretchers for carrying injured persons or the camp kit of the two Scouts.

Proficiency Badges—Boys are not alone in their love of badges to wear. I have heard of grown-up men who would risk, and have risk-ed their lives to get a medal. So, although it may be counted immoral to appeal to this touch of vanity in the boy, we have instituted badges of proficiency which the Boy Scout can earn by taking the trouble to qualify for them. These badges are awarded for proficiency in such things as cooking, ambulance work, etc., etc. There are nearly seventy different subjects among which every boy can find one or more suited to him. If he is interested to take up a hobby, and a lad with hobbies will as a rule not waste his life. Moreover, there is only one standard by which a boy is judged and qualified for a badge, and that is the amount of effort he puts into his work. With the encouragement to the dull or backward boy—the boy in whom the inferiority complex has been born through many failures. If he is a trier, no matter how clumsy, his examiner can accord him his badge and this generally inspires the boy to go on trying til he wins further badges and becomes normally capable.

Automobile Accidents

The season for accidents is now at hand, and if you have not yet taken out insurance, you should do so. You can purchase a policy for $25, covering $5,000 without additional cost. You can also purchase for $5 an Auto Accident policy. This will pay $1000 in event of your death, and larger sums for serious injury or dismemberment. It is very cheap and very good.

PHYSICIAN SAYS LEPROSY ON WANE

Native Canadian Never Known to Contract Dread Disease

Edmonton, June 21.—(CP)—Leprosy, scourge of the Dominion's early hold no fears for Canadians, Dr. C. P. Brown, chief of the division of quarantine and medical investigation for the Dominion of Canada stated here with the inquiry branch four of the west.

"A native Canadian never has been known to contract the disease," said Dr. Brown, "at present there are only four patients, at the leper colony on the Pacific coast and they are not native born. Lepers number somewhat lower than usual, for we have had as many as 19 patients in the hospital".

The idea a healthy person can get leprosy by touching a leper is "sheer nonsense", declared the doctor or nurse treating lepers has never been known to fall prey to the disease.

Germs of tuberculosis and leprosy are very similar explained Brown. Seen under a microscope, however, little difficulty could be detected. Increased restrictions and severe immigration inspection were responsible for the waning of the scourge.

Board Room Gossip

As reported in the Mail and Empire last week and compiled by Financial Service.

Robb Mines owns 100,000 shares of San Antonio and 250,000 shares of God's Lake as its chief assets. Last year it financed the Manitoba and Eastern and purchased 650,000 shares. Developments there gave tremendous profits. The Company is heavily interested in Allin-Ruther Mines Ltd. Here it has 1,000,000 shares and 500,000 warrants. The present issue is 3,000,000 shares but the stock has always sold at a high ratio of its asset value.

Sudbury Basin is chiefly interested in Bloomfield Mines. Of its present asset value of about $2.10 a share, $2.45 is represented by Bloomfield holdings. Cons. Smelters $22,467 shares of Can. Malartic and lesser holdings. Bloomfield is the company's income from Falconbridge dividends which are 30 cents a share. Sudbury share. Should and no doubt will pay dividends late this year. Information policy is continue. Continue policy of reinvesting funds.

Stadacona—Crosscutting progressing on two bodens levels. Objective expected to be reached in mid-July.

Gunnar Gold — Announcement made of company's intention to erect this fall, a mill of a capacity of 150 tons daily.

Lamaque—Mill now treating 250 or slightly more tons of ore daily. Information policy continues with increase by diamond drilling. Width of 6 feet indicated.

Eldorado—Annual report expected and may be mailed or handed by shareholders. Annual meeting to be held June 29.

Theses in Wall Street who are reiring on Canadian speculations believe the market is behaving well and are not inclined to look for any important setback. Supporting this view is the emphatic manner in which stocks recovered from the late May decline, indicating that a strong underlying demand exists. If the market could respond sharply from fears of unsettlement due to the NRA breakdown, it is argued, the deflationary aspects of the tax proposal should not be so alarming, and the support which only recently made itself felt is not expected to disappear so quickly.

The liquidation in Ford of Canada appears to be over for the time being. Announcement of increased exports. Ford Motor now holds the Franklin patents on air-cooled motors which are said to be a combination of V-8s. The next big development is the 12-cylinder industry is expected to be air-cooled motors similar to those in aeroplanes.

Canada Malting.

Conservative investment houses are recommending the purchase of Canada Malting common at present levels not only on the basis of the yield today but in the hopes that current earnings will be sufficient to warrant paying a dividend of $2.00 a share.

CADET TRAINING IN COLLEGIATE

That from September 1, 1933, the time which has been hitherto given to training cadets in the Public Schools of Belleville be devoted to the continued physical training of cadets, such training owing to the cadet instruction, which received attention in collegiate.

That all arms, ammunition and military equipment now in the care of the Belleville Board of Education be turned over to the Department of National Defence and there be re-instituted.

Previously the report of the Advisory Vocational Committee had been read, including a clause which had been passed by that body recommending:

That the students under their jurisdiction be given a few of the Danish exercises, instead of the cadet training and that they be instructed in same by the Board of Education members instead of military officers as at present.

Mr. Harrison, which

H. J. Allin seconded.

Trustee Robert Foston opposed the deletion of cadet training, saying over the motion until next year for "I had hoped that my last year of membership on the board would be one of peace and that we should be spending our time in cultivating the spirit of antagonism. If this motion is continued or carried I shall resign at the ordinary discussion. It will be a fight to the finish, but I am willing to fight for those matters as appeal to the heart and sentiment. It is purely a matter of interest we can concerns individually or collectively."

Trustee Foston and mover offered to agree but Col. Geen asked why trustees had not been informed of the decision. "I don't think this board will pass the resolution," he said, "I am sure I am correct. Mr. Allin held up a list of towns and cities which had dropped cadet training of them, in which he said cadets had been drilled in collegiate.

Pitchsicle of Parents

Col. Ponton offered an alternative:

"Why should we decide on a matter of such importance as this which goes to the hearts and emotions of the people. Let us put it up to the parents and mothers. Let us ask the council to refer it to a plebiscite."

Through the mover agreed to this suggestion, Mr. Ostrom called for definite action of the motion before which the advocates of the dropping of cadet drill favored.

"I have consulted until 1936 or 1937 let's end it here," he declared "Cadet drill has done its work in the mind and body" which he saw as a result of the war. "Let's get down to the boy needs a change from the desk."

His challenge to state his position called W. J. Harrison to his feet. He said that parents had complained that their children were tired after school hours objected to cadet drill. Besides when cadets were drilling, other students were interrupted in their studies he claimed. "Girls don't take cadet drill. All the boys should do it. It seems to me it is not fair to have anything in the way of cadet instruction."

Value of Drill

Col. Geen said cadet drill took but six hours a week.

Principal MacLaurin pointed out that drill was of physical benefit and would have to be sanctioned by the Department. A statement which Trustee Foston was not a contention until it was made one. "I am heart and soul for it," he declared, "I have carried on here. It is not compulsory. Those who object produce a doctor's certificate or a note from the parents objecting to the boy taking drill. This year I asked those objecting to take physical training.

"As conducted here, cadet training does not interfere with studies. The scholars regarding conflict of nature. It is only suggestion that the boys handle wooden guns or regular rifles sometimes. We have no interruptions and nobody suggests that these are conducive to study. Cadet training is good and there is merely physical training."

Mr. Allin agreed with that physical training, not trying to bring the boys up pampered but to open eyes so that if and when the light comes it may get through. Cadet drill was enough for the physical drill. How can anyone consider it a hardship to be done with cadets?

No Contention, Principal Says

The principal believed, he said, that if the cadet drill were not made a matter of contention, a very modified per cent. of the collegiate boys would be in favor of the abolition of ninety per cent.

"We always had one hundred per cent. until it is brought from the outside."

It would be unworthy as a principal if I advocate anything that would injure the cadets. What type of boys drill? Boys of the best type in the school. Those who object to drill not from physical reasons but from mental. Some of these have dislike discipline and run out when they can.

Trustee Robert I. Deacon, a veteran of the war, said he had no training and when loses went to war who had no training as cadets he thought they made as good soldiers as any cadet. He was in charge of physical drill. He was opposing the cadet training because the boys might have to fight but because if war should come the boys will go whether they were cadets or not, but I oppose it because the physical drill is better." He referred to matters in the Dominion Parliament of National Defence and that he is satisfied.

Previously the report of the Advisory Vocational Committee had been read, including a clause which had been passed by that body recommending:

That the students under their jurisdiction be given a few of the Danish exercises, instead of the cadet training and that they be instructed in same by the Board of Education members instead of military officers as at present.

The principal believed, he said, that if the cadet drill were not made a matter of contention, a very modified per cent. of the collegiate boys would be in favor of the abolition of ninety per cent.

"We always had one hundred per cent. until it is brought from the outside."

It would be unworthy as a principal if I advocate anything that would injure the cadets. What type of boys drill? Boys of the best type in the school. Those who object to drill not from physical reasons but from mental. Some of these have dislike discipline and run out when they can.

Trustee Robert I. Deacon, a veteran of the war, said he had no training and when loses went to war who had no training as cadets he thought they made as good soldiers as any cadet. He was in charge of physical drill. He was opposing the cadet training because the boys might have to fight but because if war should come the boys will go whether they were cadets or not, but I oppose it because the physical drill is better." He referred to matters in the Dominion Parliament of National Defence and that he is satisfied.

Previously the report of the Advisory Vocational Committee had been read, including a clause which had been passed by that body recommending:

That the students under their jurisdiction be given a few of the Danish exercises, instead of the cadet training and that they be instructed in same by the Board of Education members instead of military officers as at present.

Mr. Allin seconded.

Trustee Robert Foston opposed the deletion of cadet training, saying over the motion until next year for "I had hoped that my last year of membership on the board would be one of peace and that we should be spending our time in cultivating the spirit of antagonism. If this motion is continued or carried I shall resign at the ordinary discussion. It will be a fight to the finish, but I am willing to fight for those matters as appeal to the heart and sentiment. It is purely a matter of interest we can concerns individually or collectively."

Trustee Foston and mover offered to agree but Col. Geen asked why trustees had not been informed of the decision. "I don't think this board will pass the resolution," he said, "I am sure I am correct. Mr. Allin held up a list of towns and cities which had dropped cadet drill of them, in which he said cadets had been drilled in collegiate.

Pitchsicle of Parents

Col. Ponton offered an alternative:

"Why should we decide on a matter of such importance as this which goes to the hearts and emotions of the people. Let us put it up to the parents and mothers. Let us ask the council to refer it to a plebiscite."

Through the mover agreed to this suggestion, Mr. Ostrom called for definite action of the motion before which the advocates of the dropping of cadet drill favored.

"I have consulted until 1936 or 1937 let's end it here," he declared "Cadet drill has done its work in the mind and body" which he saw as a result of the war. "Let's get down to the boy needs a change from the desk."

His challenge to state his position called W. J. Harrison to his feet. He said that parents had complained that their children were tired after school hours objected to cadet drill. Besides when cadets were drilling, other students were interrupted in their studies he claimed. "Girls don't take cadet drill. All the boys should do it. It seems to me it is not fair to have anything in the way of cadet instruction."

Value of Drill

Col. Geen said cadet drill took but six hours a week.

Principal MacLaurin pointed out that drill was of physical benefit and would have to be sanctioned by the Department. A statement which Trustee Foston was not a contention until it was made one. "I am heart and soul for it," he declared, "I have carried on here. It is not compulsory. Those who object produce a doctor's certificate or a note from the parents objecting to the boy taking drill. This year I asked those objecting to take physical training.

"As conducted here, cadet training does not interfere with studies. The scholars regarding conflict of nature. It is only suggestion that the boys handle wooden guns or regular rifles sometimes. We have no interruptions and nobody suggests that these are conducive to study. Cadet training is good and there is merely physical training."

Mr. Allin agreed with that physical training, not trying to bring the boys up pampered but to open eyes so that if and when the light comes it may get through. Cadet drill was enough for the physical drill. How can anyone consider it a hardship to be done with cadets?

No Contention, Principal Says

The principal believed, he said, that if the cadet drill were not made a matter of contention, a very modified per cent. of the collegiate boys would be in favor of the abolition of ninety per cent.

"We always had one hundred per cent. until it is brought from the outside."

It would be unworthy as a principal if I advocate anything that would injure the cadets. What type of boys drill? Boys of the best type in the school. Those who object to drill not from physical reasons but from mental. Some of these have dislike discipline and run out when they can.

"Cadet training does not make soldiers," he affirmed. "Less than two per cent. of cadets find their way into the army or militia.

"Military training is the best system of basic training the world has ever known.

"I spent four years of my life for my country and I hate war. I would like to be a pacifist but not in the present state of unpreparedness."

The precision of movement was praised and the acquaintance with the use of rifles necessary in the case of many shooting accidents.

The best value of the training in cadet corps is leadership and discipline, Major Ketcheson said, and good and the youths are taught it.

In the opinions of principals per per cent believed that cadet drill should be abolished. Seventy-six per cent. praised the mass discipline and 24 per cent. called it an asset.

Discipline of Cadets

Rev. W. R. Reid, supporting cadet training, said his experience in school as a cadet and later service declared cadet training did not interfere with studies. What was training. "I speak as a Christian minister and am opposed to war. Here in this school we have shown that the only objection to drill we as a board to be ruled by that small number. And today the spirit lack of discipline and regard for higher authority said he advocating supplementing the lack of discipline.

Rev. Dr. Harrison returned to the issue with the declaration: "In the school everything should be compulsory."

F. B. Lally, having nothing to say on the matter, said he did not think the parents were opposed to it and that the boys were interested. "Should we interfere with what the parents of 600 others want?"

Trustee Allin favored cadet training.

Trustee Brown—"Give us physical training to produce better bodies."

Col. Geen—"Some parents people want to take the leg out of drill. What is the object behind this?" He said he had had any correspondence with the Department of Education Canada Peace and Liberty." No one had written him about any correspondence with that body. "Never heard of them," added Col. Ponton—"Why object to the khaki dear to us in memory, trying to produce better boys, physically?"

Mr. Allin—"You are wrong, Colonel. Cadet drill produces no boys."

Col. Ponton—"Is the band to go too? Do you think they play patriotic airs sometimes? The Argyrs will be the next. Next they will have the Orange because they sing "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Rule Britannia" Pipes."

"God forgive me if I ever take a position that is unpatriotic," said. What will be the result but the development of a class of the boys of cadets that will not be forgotten? That is my motto. I belong to the builders."

"It's in the air insidiously. I am not more sorry that the cadets are conscious of it, but it is there. If that spirit is allowed to grow carried I believe tomorrow morning every cadet will laugh. I will laugh a disbelief laugh, "One more goes."

Mr. Adams did not like what he heard. He had attended the annual banquets of cadet drill were evidently the boys enjoyed it. Another opinion as to what is best for the boys was that of the cadet corps in the school," he remarked.

Col. Ponton—"I do not want to be anything but fair and by having cadet corps is—chivalrous, and I wish other people might and get that. But I said I belonged to the builders."

To Mr. Adams' contention that cadet drill was allowed should be after school hours, Trustee Reid corrected: "Would you deprive the boys of their play after school hours o'clock? Ninety-nine per cent of the boys are interested in the cadet corps."

Then the vote was taken Mr. Allin asked if in future important questions proxies might be admitted. This was not decided and was left over.

TELEPHONE VETERANS ATTEND CONVENTION

J. A. Cakers and F. J. Roach Representatives From City

J. Mr. Jas. A. Cakers and Mr. F. J. Roach, both of this city, were among the Belleville telephone employees who, having 31 years of service who will be honored among the one thousand or more employees of the Bell Telephone Company who are expected to gather at Jasper Park next week.

The occasion will be the 12th annual convention of the Charles Pleetford Slae Chapter of the Canadian Branch of the Telephone Pioneers of America. This chapter consists of six councils, with an membership of approximately 1,900 members and women. The Belleville council is one of the pioneers and pensioners of the Bell Telephone Company. Others are from Toronto, Northern Ontario Company and minor telephone systems.

Mr. Cakers and Mr. Roach will be devoted to a social program as well as the business meetings and committee sessions. Pioneers' work is given over largely to social endeavours on the part of the members, and the activities of the councils are the work of preserving the memory of the deeds of the early phone pioneers in this country, and of assisting the present employees in the communication business.

School Appointments

Joining the staff of the public schools in September to fill the vacancies are Miss Dorothy Mildred Lloyd, Mary Lockhart, Florence Walbridge, and Lauren Smith.

In case of further vacancies Miss Minnis Moorcroft and Miss Marjorie Lashbrook will be appointed to the public school staff.

Mr. James Hamilton of the Collegiate staff has been given a year's leave of absence to study for a degree at Cornell University.

PUMPER PURCHASE IS PROTESTED

"As I understand it, this meeting is called for the purpose of protesting against the purchase of a motor fire pumper," is that right?" questioned ex-Alderman Wm. Donahue, who was answered in the affirmative.

"The thing has come up before city council time after time. This is the past. It's not a new thing and it has been debated before. When I was in council I never could see the need for the thing, and I don't now," continuing ex-Alderman Donahue. "The greatest benefit the thing would be if the city bought it would be to the rural districts around here."

Ex-Alderman Donahue referred to recent accounts of tests carried on by the fire department at the County House of Refuge, "where the stream from the hose weren't supposed to be over ten feet high from the nozzle," he said, "and we didn't tell you though that the hose had been coupled on a hydrant at the dead end of a very small main at the outskirts of the city. And they didn't explain, that even if they had a pumper there they couldn't have got any more pressure."

"If the County wants to build their institutions outside of the city and the townships want fire protection, then why don't they buy their own machine. Often our fire department goes out to the county around here where they can't do the least bit of good at a fire, so they had the machine they might be able to use it by taking water from a well or cistern. But this doesn't help Belleville any."

Not Needed Now

"I'm opposed to the purchase of anything that is going to benefit Belleville, continued ex-Alderman Donahue, "I can't see, with taxes the way they are, assessments as high, how we can do it. We are the money the pay out money in the city, and when we built the property we must have been helping some one, but now you can't get one third of the value for it you could have a few years ago."

"I'm not knocking the purchase of this pumper, except on the grounds that it isn't needed just now. We haven't anything in Belleville, that we couldn't throw into the lake. If the water works department would give the pressure. If the thing is purchased the people who will benefit are their money in the city will be the ones, who will pay for it. The people who are loudest in advocating the purchase of the pumper are the ones it seems to me who would wrap up their belongings and move out of the city the same day. I'm not knocking anything that might help the city, but when the pumper I'd bolding both hands for anything that might be of benefit, but this machine seems to me to be one of the things we can do without for the present at any rate."

Loud applause greeted the conclusion of the ex-alderman's remarks.

"Will the interests of the city be best served by the purchase of this pumper?" questioned ex-Mayor Porter as he took the floor. "If so then all right, if not then don't. The question seems to be a very vital one deal like a good many householders, who beg and borrow to get by, and where they are going to get the money to pay for the Property Protection is getting to be a heavy burden on the owner in this city. Being collected last year in 1934 I am told have reached something like $700,000.00 in the City. Under these circumstances it would be folly to spend, I think, a dollar for a good many hundreds also. It is this policy the Council has followed in other municipalities in Ontario in debt.

Purchase Only Initial Cost

Ex-Mayor Panter produced a tax sale list of property in the city and held it up.

"Many properties are sold for little homes, that some people have worked hard all their lives for. Now they are unable to pay their taxes and they are offered for sale. That is the result of high taxation, that should be very careful in promoting or giving our consent to the municipality going further into debt."

The ex-Mayor reminded that the purchase of the pumper, according to him, was only the initial cost. "Many of the hydrants need changing when we get the pumper and this will cost more than a good many anticipate."

"Do you think it good business, that if you were to spend $13,000.00 or $25,000.00 for a pumper—and do we get any benefit from it—that we will get it? Are the ratepayers, the insurance men in favor of spending any one saking us to get this pumper."

"When I was in council the underwriters were always on our back with the intimation, that if the city suggestions were carried out regarding the purchase of new equipment that a reduction in insurance rates would follow. But we never got it", concluded ex-Mayor Porter, amid applause.

Mr. Herbert Diamond referred to a recent letter written by him and printed in the daily paper in which he requested the answer to several questions regarding the waterworks system. As a member of the committee in here tonight, maybe he could answer the questions he suggested Mr. Diamond glancing in the direction of Alderman McCreary.

In the silence that followed ex-Mayor Bennett pointed out to Alderman McCreary that he was evidently the one, who was meant.

"Alderman McCreary?" invited president Springer.

"There is nothing just at this stage, that I could care to say," finally explained the alderman.

Mr. Cleo. Wootton: "I was just thinking as Alderman McCreary spoke, that he was one of the committee regarding the fire pumper and maybe he could give us some information or a little knowledge regarding the pumper agitation."

President: "Mr. McCreary?"

Alderman McCreary, rising: "Later on when the rest of the audience have aired his or her views I will be very happy to speak. There are always two sides to every story. I believe, that just now you members should be given the privilege of speaking, while I sit and enjoy myself."

President Springer: "Ex-Alderman Donahue and ex-Mayor Panter have laid the matter before you very clearly. The question is whether we need the pumper. The city is not bigger than when I came here thirty-four years ago, and up to the present we haven't actually needed such a machine. Whether we do now or not is open to the question. We should liken the city to a manufacturer, carrying on a business. Often he needs some machine, but he doesn't get it because he can't pay for it. Sometimes he buys a machine, which would be excellent for mass production, but it turns out to be no good for his trade because he has no work for it; the machine can't be turned off. Than it is folly to buy one. It would be nice for Belleville to have this pumper if she could afford it, but where are we going to get the money to pay for it?"

"Do we net it? Can it be proved, that the city is actually in danger if it is not purchased? Maybe there is some one here, who can enlighten us on this matter."

"Before we adjourn I would like to hear Alderman McCreary speak on this pumper matter. As far as I'm concerned I'm dead against it, but maybe it could be shown that the city actually needs the machine," persisted Mr. Diamond.

Given Chas Study

"Mr. McCreary?" invited president Springer again.

"It is unfortunate, that this meeting has developed along these lines" remarked Alderman McCreary arising. "I'm not prepared to speak. If all has been said that is going to be said and you wish me to speak I'll be happy to do so."

"All of you here are ratepayers; well so am I, so who is really interested in the city and its taxation problems. We have served on council many years on the Board of Education and the city council and I have always given such matters very careful consideration."

Alderman McCreary at this point paid tribute to the excellent state of the waterworks' department, pointing out, that careful management in the past of previous chairmen had made this possible. "It is a credit to the past administration, and the department is now in a perfect condition by any means," he reminded.

Continuing: "The engineers who drafted the plans for this plant of course, did not overlook a duplication of filter beds there. They also recommended a new pumping station of one million gallon capacity. Our present filter beds some 300,000 gallons, less than one-third of the supply is used in case of emergency."

"With the water in the bay the condition of the algae becomes serious; when it comes in it passes through the filter beds and we lose them. While the beds can handle four million gallons a day, under those conditions it will only handle about less because twenty-five per cent or later it is used to backwash the beds. Last summer the pressure in the mains dropped to as low as forty pounds because of this. It was even lower at the outskirts of the city or at the hospital. Our normal pressure is seventy-five pounds."

Alderman McCreary, continuing: "The city might ask me for information on the management of the department, but no one could help that trouble. The only way to could have been overcome was to build a by-pass storage basin to double the capacity of the filter beds."

Pointed Out Conditions

To do this work, it was estimated Alderman McCreary, pointed out, that would cost the city approximately $75,000.00 "But I hesitate to recommend this to council," he said.

He pointed again to the conditions which existed in the city as regards fire last summer.

"Last August it was very much concerned regarding the department be heaped upon us for the condition of the city and we were in no condition to cope with it. We could have done was throw the raw water into the mains and risk the chance of a contamination epidemic. This was a responsibility, ladies and gentlemen."

"I'm not here to foist anything or any ideas on the city," continued Alderman McCreary, "I'm only going to do my duty in council as I see it. I am a ratepayer in this city and I'm in this city myself and I'm going to be here in the interests of the greater number in the city."

Mr. McCreary pointed out that the cost of the waterworks system as set was not $15,000 or $16,000 as has been quoted in council, but the cost will be approximately $8,000,000 "I am prepared to recommend to council that the waterworks assume purchase," he added.

In referring to the tests held on Thursday at the hospital and Fairmount Home, Alderman McCreary called attention to his statement that there was no question about the local fire department being antiquated. Compared with other places along the line Belleville would be outdated in equipment he said. "I have no hesitancy in recommending this type of equipment."

Next speaker referred to the little village of Norwood, which had learned its lesson in a recent conflagration and was now subscribing the expenditure of $5,000 for fire protection. "Kingston has two pumpers; Cobourg one—"

Pumper Has Suction

"Yes, but do they use them?" interjected ex-Mayor Bennett.

"When the occasion arises they do."

Ald. McCreary attempted to confer with Ald. J. Miller, K.C., across in the rear of the hall.

Mr. Mikel: "Has this equipment in the other municipalities been in use for a period of five years or so, say?"

"Your own situation of the news the day should inform you in that respect," answered Ald. McCreary.

"What I mean," continued Mr. Mikel, "is have they been found satisfactory over such a period?"

"They are still in use, anyhow."

Mr. Diamond: "You referred to a pumper of some size ago, where does this machine get water?"

Ald. McCreary: "The pumper has a suction that will lift water from a river or well twenty-eight feet."

Mr. Diamond: "What I mean is when you can't get the water there the filter beds fast enough how are you going to supply the machine?"

"The water may not be as plentiful when pressure is low, but it is well known, fact that a little water under pressure is far more effective for fire fighting than if a lot were just poured on," explained the chairman.

"Without the pumper higher pressure for fire fighting could be had by pumping the water direct into the domestic systems in the city which would not stand the extra load. Old water boilers and other weak parts would probably be pounded out by the speaker."

Mr. Diamond: "You spoke of unfiltered water being sent through the mains in case of emergency; couldn't this be filtered also?"

"It's all chlorinated; we have just put in a duplicate chlorinator at the plant at considerable expense," explained Ald. McCreary.

He referred to a test made some time ago of the fire department at the hospital where the water in the city in the neighborhood of one thousand gallons per minute. "There's a lot of things about the waterworks department that could not be discussed publicity," stated Ald. McCreary.

Put Through Every Test

"These are the facts you want to know," remarked Mr. Diamond.

In summing up regarding the pumper, Ald. McCreary pointed out, that the city had been put in the bag, this pumper has been put thru every possible test.

Ex-Mayor Bennett wanted to know if trouble had been experienced at the filtration plant in the first year Alderman McCreary had taken over as chairman. He never had any trouble. We did have a shortage of water, not afraid or fire and we did cut down between one hour. You strongly opposed that, Mr. McCreary. Did you tell the city council anything? wanted the city to get two pumpers?"

"All I is this, a cross-examination!" asked Ald. McCreary.

"Certainly not! I only that two pumpers would be preferrable, or a by-pass storage basin," continued Mr. Bennett. "That would be $16,000 worth."

"Naturally, for two."

Mr. Diamond thanked Alderman McCreary for his explanation of the marks but would rather have had him answer them in the paper as a reply to a recent letter of his he had written to the press.

"I will enter into a newspaper controversy with no one," replied the alderman.

Mr. McCreary again pointed to the fact that the city had the choice of installing duplicate filter beds and a reserve storage basin so as recommend as the issue of the pumper.

"I am prepared to recommend a like issue of the two evils, the pumper, for purchase," he added. "I'm content in my mind regarding it. I haven't heard a thing here tonight that has caused me to change my mind regarding it. You show me how this city can be properly protected without a pumper and I'm all for saving the money."

Purchasing Only One.

Voice: "Where are you going to get the money?"

Mr. McCreary: "We have the money in the bank."

Mrs. D. MacMillan. Isabel street, wanted to know what she it was protecting property that a good many citizens and home owners would have in a short time anyhow, judging by the present tax rate.

Mr. McCreary: "I assure you it is not because of the fact that we have had extravagant councils that the rate is so high, Mrs. MacMillan." He pointed to the relief burden, old age pensions and other forms of expenditure as being the chief reason why the present tax was so high.

Mr. McCreary reiterated that the council did not contemplate the purchase of two fire pumpers, but one only. He added that he had made a thorough examination and investigation of various fire pumpers throughout this immediate district at no cost to the city.

Mr. George Wootton in referring to the matter of fire protection claimed that plenty of pressure was available at the pumping house for the local department in cases of emergency, without the need for the pumper.

"In fifty years or so we have never really needed it, but if the emergency did arise we have the power, Mr. Bennett has told you that they are shown, LEFT to RIGHT—Owen D. Young, financier; Sir Robert Borden, wartime Premier of the Dominion; Dr. Richard S. Sykes, retiring president of St. Lawrence University; Dr. W. Hamilton Fyfe, of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont.

DORIS ADAIR AND BLOOD SWEATING BEHOMETH

Few who see wild animals in cages realize the vast amount of trouble, danger and expense necessary to get them there. The greatest danger lies in capturing the wild animals in their native country. With Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty Circus which will give two performances in Belleville, Tuesday, July 2nd, there are many wild animals, most of which were captured in the forests and jungles of their native country.

"There is no more ticklish or dangerous task than tracking lions in the vast Nubian deserts," stated Clyde Beatty in a recent interview. "The scorching sun pours down with such force that few men can stand it. The effect on the eyes is blinding. There is little or no shade. The wariest and most careful hunter may be tracking an animal, and at the same time be tracked by the animal he is seeking, which may spring on him at any moment.

"For capturing full-grown lions, large traps of various forms are used. One trap is square, one of the older lifting type, a spring like the old-fashioned mouse trap. This trap is baited with a piece of fresh meat, and as soon as the lion has entered the trap the door shuts tightly. It is in just such traps of the lions with our circus were captured in this manner.

"Elephants are generally caught in nooses. A number of men surround the elephant after they have previously formed a circle of fire about the beast. The fire gets closer and closer to the elephant, and finally a noose is thrown over his head He is then securely tied to a tree and allowed to remain there until quiet. Tame elephants are then brought into use, and appear to be sort of persuasive in making the huge animals tractable. Similar methods are used to capture a hippopotamus.

"In catching snakes, various devices are used. One is to set the grass on fire in a circle where it is known that snakes have hiding places. As they rush out they are caught in large nets mounted on wooden hoops, to which is attached a large bag."

Doors to the big show will be opened at 1 and 7 p.m. The performances begin an hour later. At 10 a.m., preceding the initial performance of the world's newest big show the largest and costliest street parade in the history of the circus will be seen on the downtown streets. Many men, women and horses will'ee seen in the picturesque pageantry filled with scores of cages, dens and tableaus burnished with gold. Five bands and two calliopes will furnish music. There will be herds of elephants and caravans of camels from Asia and Siberia.

FEDERAL POWER IS QUESTIONED

Prof. MacKay of Halifax Raises Doubt Over New Legislation

Canton, N.Y. June 21 (CP)—The question of "doubtful constitutionality" of acts on Canada's so-called "new deal" legislation was raised today at the conference of Canadian-American affairs by A. MacKay, Dalhousie University, Halifax.

He outlines briefly legislation which has been introduced recently including unemployment insurance, amendments to bills regulating trade and commerce and measures to establish a grain marketing board, and said:

"It is reasonably doubtful whether all this legislation is within the powers of the federal parliament."

WOMEN INDICATE APPAREL FOR MEN

Frown on Hatless Males And Prescribe Garters

Vancouver, June 21 (CP)—Properly dressed men will not go hatless or wear bow-ties this summer. They will keep their socks up with garters and probably they will wear gloves.

These are a few items gleaned from a questionnaire sent to 13 Vancouver women asking their opinion on the styles in dress. They said the ultimate in men's hats is soft grey felt with snap brim. The crown should be dented in tweed with raglan sleeves and the trousers should be grey tweed, flannel or gabardine and a white shirt are also indicated.

A wrist-watch, signet ring and cuff links are to be the only jewelry worn. Canes are ruled out, but several of the ladies thought Homburg hats would be nice.

"No extreme styles," they warned. "Everything should be tailored loose and comfortable. And no baby blue or pink silk underwear."

Daily Short Story

PROBLEM CHILD

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

When you have one girl and one boy you have all the ingredients you need to mix one heck of a story—with Old Kid Cupid doing the honors as the bride-to-be wanders down the aisle and the happy couple, with that labored expression gone up—

What you say about the girl and boy before you send them to face the preacher is the story—simple like that. And that is the way nine out of ten real life stories happen. Which gets us to the point of naming Gloria Johnson. She was pretty, part and in love—by love with two men. That, as you and and you and you know, is impossible. Gloria knew it, maybe she did, too, but there you are—Jim Mitchell and Jack Lorrey were two men.

Gloria wished that she could have one of those simple love stories — with one girl and one man involved. Everything would have been so delightful—whether the one man happened to be either Jim or Jack. The Doubts was there wasn't much to choose between them.

Jim was slightly taller, but both were good-looking, athletic and had jobs that would mean a little bit of luxury for Gloria, when and if she decided on the man. The two men were quite certain that Gloria loved—for each was only a mild infatuation that would wear off as time went on. So, to make matters more and more complicated, they arranged their dates with her so that one saw her one day, the other the next and the two together the third day. She had Sunday off.

Grand—but

In some ways, it was a grand courtship—it would have been except that Gloria was nearly pulling her head to decide whether she loved Jim more than Jack or Jack more than Jim. Each attempted to outdo the other in entertainment, and she didn't like that—much. Obviously, each was spending more money than he could afford on his night with her. She was not a gold digger, and that rather irked her.

When she protested, Jack said: "Ah, honey, it won't matter a bit when you've named Jim into the discard."

And Jim said: "Darling, to win you, I'd look my future for life."

What can you do with a pair of men like that? Gloria didn't know, but managed to make the threesome an economical evening. Generally, a picture, a supper and a subway trip home. The boys figured up what each spent and split the bill down the middle.

Now, Gloria couldn't sleep nights trying to decide between Jim and Jack. Jack fearful when she made him stand out—until she considered Jack's and then Jack's manifold virtues made him stand out, until her head was in a whirl and she pondered herself the heart of a very ill-humored fate.

The next step, of course, in a problem like this is to ask for advice. People are always so sure they can solve any problem of the heart for anyone, that they volunteer advice without being asked—and when they are asked, they sound like Dan Cupid himself.

"Send them on a mission," she said. "In days of old, fair ladies sent their knights on quest—and when the quest was completed, the ladies could see which loved them most."

At that, Gloria twitched her eyebrows.

"Can't be done," she said. "Sending them on a quest would make them lose their jobs, and, besides, it isn't a matter of finding out which loves me more. It's a matter of finding out which I love better."

Many Advice

The aunt offered more advice, equally ingraciatical.

Others in the family and friends, were free with ideas, but Gloria wasn't satisfied with what they offered.

"Pish," she said.

Only Gloria's mother was unconcerned.

"Don't bother your silly head, child," she said. "One of these days something small will come up which will decide everything for you. Just wait. And when it does, the light will sound crash and Broadway, you'll know."

Matters went along like this for several months. The words of her mother soothed Gloria somewhat, but still she pondered and puzzled.

"Don't move polite than Jack," she told herself hopefully. But that didn't seem to be such a snob. You don't marry a fellow just because he happens to be more polite than somebody else. You take a modest amount of politeness as a matter of course.

And then so far as this story is concerned, the story, broke one evening. It was a night for a three-some and Jack and Gloria and Jim were riding home in the subway. She was keeping up a round of chatter with each of them, while the car got more and more crowded. They had seats.

Then Gloria, dawned on Gloria whom she loved the more.

Her fingers fastened in Jack's arm.

"I'm glad you didn't have to get up," she said.

Donkey Shows Paris How Jumping is Done

Paris racing fans have stared agape when Mon. Beio, the trained donkey, appears on the track. He has been entered in numerous steeplechases with more than mediocre luck. The clever donkey can jump fences handily though, as the photo shows, he takes the barrier with more ease than ability or grace.

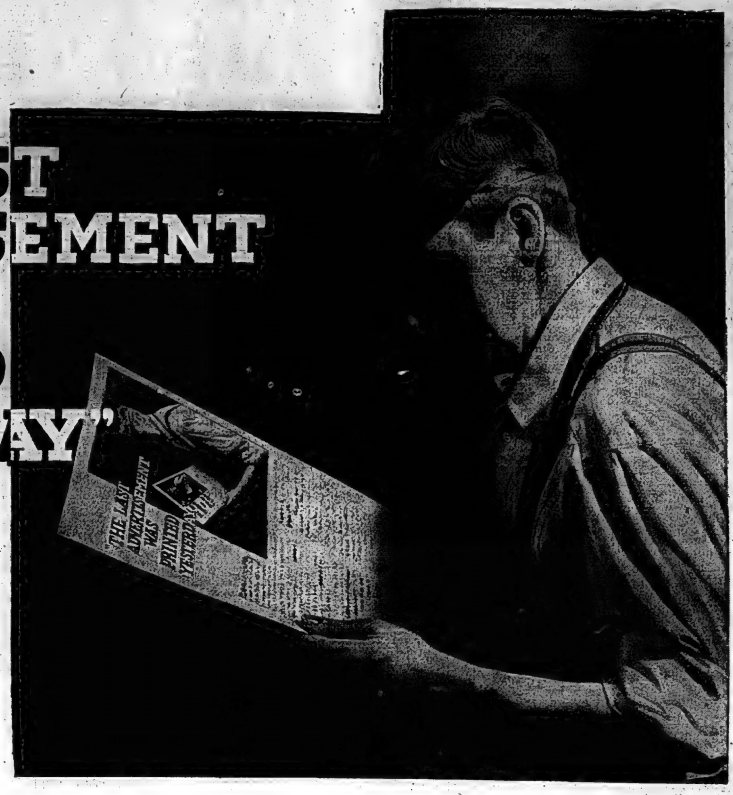
TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)



Many weeks the tribes of Turcomans moved slowly over the grassy steppes, grazing their animals. The English girl with them grew used to the nomadic life, of days spent tending herds and unsheltered nights in the open.

There came one sundown when the tribe with whom her lot was cast, encountered a caravan journeying to Persia. It lingered to barter cheap goods with the Turcomans in exchange for food and like stock.

And when the camels moved softly along again, one of the caravan's merchants had bought, together with the goats and donkeys, for a piece of gold, the dark-eyed girl who had caught his wicked fancy. Unprotected, she now had a brutal master.

He intended taking her, with other white slaves, to the Bagdad market. In vain she protested, pleaded; her words fell upon hearts that did not care. Westward the caravan wound, toward the sun. Ever was seeing on the girl's hopes. . . .

"THE LAST ADVERTISEMENT WAS PRINTED YESTERDAY"

What Would the World Be Like If It Were TRUE?

THE last advertisement was printed yesterday. You have cut it out and put it away to show your grandchildren. With it, a way of living as you knew it, has passed forever.

Tonight you will want to see a movie. You pull up to one—saw it last week. At another—but no, you don't like So-and-So's acting. Let's go home. It's too much gas and time to waste on a show. Next month half the theatres will close. Poor attendance.

Tomorrow you will want some groceries. You will go to the nearest grocery store and buy some. Rib roast, perhaps, and lima beans. You won't hear until tomorrow night at the bridge table that the store just next door was having a "special" on rib roast and lima beans. Pretty soon your husband will wonder why the food bills are so high. The last advertisement was printed yesterday.

Next month is Aunt Jane's birthday. Well, if you think I'm going to spend half a day tramping from store to store looking for a gift that I used to find by turning a page—can't afford gifts anyway. We're spending money like water and living like poor folks.....

Old Car's wearing out. Can't afford a new one.... Low priced cars now $1600....demand's fallen off....they've had to put up prices to meet plant expenses. Most of the others have closed down....don't know how the government will feed all the new unemployed.

Fellow in Winnipeg is inventing an air conditioner to sell for $50. No one will hear of it. You will never see it. What is air conditioning anyway? The last advertisement was printed yesterday.

Advertising has brought us many things. Finer cars, better homes, silly fads and wonderful inventions that have made life easier—and longer. Advertising is no unmixed blessing. But it has helped give Canada a standard of living unmatched in any other place and time. That standard of living should persist as long as people have wants to fill and money to spend and eyes to read with.

It will persist only so long as the presses keep rolling.

TILFORD POISON HEARING OPENS AT WOODSTOCK

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Jamestown, N.Y., June 24 (CP)—Three bullets chosen even more militated for the perverted "gold brick" when a Jamestown bootblacker was arrested in what he thought was a "good deal." Two men offered "rare old Indian pieces" at $4 a piece.

They clipped off a sample. It tasted good. The victim ordered three. He sent one and water spurted out, he sent another, and again water spurted out.

All three were hollow shells filled with water.

Kingston, Ont., June 24 — (CP)—Arnold G. Herbert, 60, of New Britain, did not live to hear that the fish he caught in Bert's pond on Sunday.

His body was found standing upright in the water, one hand clutching a cigar and the other thrust in his pocket, by two young members of a picnic party. They saw Herbert's line, which he had attached to a stake on the shore, thrashing about with a fish on the hook.

Medical examiner M. H. Griswold said he believed Herbert had suffered a heart attack.

Milwaukee, June 24 (CP)— If this city doesn't have a murder today a streetcar probably will run on a day after it has ended. The homicide spread was called out last on Commercial street, when a negro was shot to death.

Capture of desperado Frank Prehoska said there were 11 homicides in 1934. Of the last 12 slayings in Milwaukee, he said, only two remain unsolved.

Washington, June 24 (CP)— William H. Stayton, Chairman of Repeal Association, today urged arrests for drunken driving were more numerous during the last four "typical years" of United States prohibition than for the first full year under repeal.

Stayton, founder of the Association Against Prohibition Amendment, said the average number of arrests for the four prohibition years was 54,396, and the average for the beer and repeal years, 93,951.

Tientsin, North China, June 24 —(CP) — Municipal authorities here have banned opium smoking by order of General Chiang Kai-Shek requiring them to effect a cure of 200,000 addicts in the city before 1937. Addicts in Tientsin are said to number habitual opium smokers, and the city government is taking the funds to finance new clinics.

Kitchener, Ont., June 24 (CP)— Kitchener will be among the first cities in Canada to use radio in traffic, gas leaks.

A radio set is attached to gas pipes by a special apparatus and if there is a leak, static indicates its presence. By changing the sound along the pipes the escaping gas is located.

Kitchener, Ont., June 24 (CP) — A death of understatement is credited to a Kitchener woman. She walked into a service station and inquired, "could I get some water please?"

"Do you want the water to drink, if you do, I'll get you a glass or a bucket," answered.

"No, not exactly," said the woman, "do you see that car there and its on fire."

$800 CASH STOLEN CHEESE IS TAKEN

HULL, Que., June 24. —(CP) — Thieves absconded with $800 in cash, an equal amount in cheques, and a quantity of cheese from the safe and storerooms of a cheese company were robbed here over the weekend.

Using acetylene torches to burn a large hole through the combination of the office safe, the safe-breakers set fire to the premises. Firefighters set to work with the plant hose and extinguished the fire. Damage from the fire, it was said, will add about $200 to the material loss in the robbery.

DRINKS POISON AND CUTS THROAT

MONTREAL, June 24.—(CP) — There is little chance Moise Desjardins, 67, will recover from throat wounds police say he inflicted upon himself last night after attacking his wife with the same razor.

Detectives say Desjardins drank poison and then cut his throat after his wife had fled screaming from their flat with a gash about her throat and shoulders.

Sits Up in Bed Unconscious After 11 Days of Sleeping

Aurora, Ont., June 24.—(CP) — Seven-year-old Robert Walker, unconscious for eleven days with sleeping sickness, sat up in bed yesterday for the first time and looked about the room. His condition is much improved, Dr. C. J. Irving stated today.

"The lad is still unconscious, although he looked around the room last night and sat up by himself," Dr. Irving declared. "He wasn't able to recognize anyone as his ming is still blank but we believe he will regain consciousness in a few days. He ate a small quantity of ice cream last night, the first food he has taken in a non-liquor form."

SALE OF CHINESE GIRLS REPORTED

Stated 20 Millions Are Suffering Drought and Famine

Shanghai, June 24 (CP)—Reports of drought, famine conditions and the sale of girls are coming to Shanghai from six provinces. The number of people included in suffering and want is nearly 20,000,000 and if rains do not come quickly the total will swell.

In Northern Kiangsi, the province from which the Communist armies were finally driven late last year, pretty girls from 15 to 18 years are selling at an average of $80 each in Chinese money. Girls from 10 to 13 years of age bring only $50 each while girls less than 10 sell for around $30. These sums are equal respectively about $25, $21 and $16 in Canadian money.

ECCENTRIC MAN SHOT BY POLICE

One Constable Hit by Bullet Before Action Taken

Weeks, Sask., June 24 (CP)— Anton Klinski, Russian settler, became somewhat belligerent attracted the attention of farm neighbors in dred today, victim of shooting by Royal Canadian Mounted Police who sought to question him.

Three constables approached his one-room shanty on a small farm near Percy. Klinski retreated into his cabin and refused to come out until a gas bomb was tossed through a window. Soon he reached for his rifle and came out shooting.

Possibility of a further attempt being made to storm the relief camp strikers visit to Ottawa is suggested by their interview with the government at the week-end. The delegations are returning home with much encouragement, and it is said that some member may attempt to bring the matter to the house. The last time the attempt was made however, it did not get very far.

Parliamentary estimates are expected to be brought down by Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes today or tomorrow, and, in its present mood, the house should make short work of them. The government appears to be that the session will close by the end of the week.

ELECTRIC CRADLE SINGS ROCK-A-BYE

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—Termed by their own President as "nuts", the gadgeteers of the 14th annual National Inventors' Congress brought to Chicago today a strange array of thingamajigs, doodlebugs and doodads.

Among the things which attracted spectators were a "baby basinet," a pneumatic ladder, disposable diapers and a "bed" in which separates flyers from liars.

If Biddy lays an egg she automatically releases a latch which allows her to stroll out into the chicken yard where she lays her own egg! The only door open to Biddy is the one which permits her to enter another where a big bad man gathers eggs for market.

In the home life the chief invention was the "lullaby bassinet" which at the turn of an electric switch, provides remote control rocking for babe.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT NEAR

Expect All Business Will Be Completed by End of Week

Ottawa, June 24—(CP)—With the Commons program almost completed and prorogation of parliament in the air, members gather today to deal with the few remaining items of business for the House of Commons. The Senate will meet tomorrow.

Were it not for a couple of items, adjournment could conclude its final session almost immediately. The grain board legislation, however, now before a committee, is scheduled to sit today, may cause appreciable delay. It is an important bill, and the speed with which it goes through depends to a certain extent on whether or not the government is able to satisfy Liberal demands for information about operations of John I. McFarland, head of the Central Selling Agency of the Canadian Wheat Board, since he stabilized the market with government credit.

Decision to be Given

A request for detailed information from Col. J. L. Ralston, Liberal member for Cumberland-Yarmouth and member of the Grain Board Committee was taken into consideration by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett before the committee rose last week. Tomorrow a decision may be reached as to how far the committee may go into details of these transactions.

Possibility of a further attempt being made to discuss the relief camp strikers visit to Ottawa is suggested by their interview with the government at the week-end. The delegations are returning home with much encouragement, and it is said that some member may attempt to bring the matter to the house. The last time the attempt was made however, it did not get very far.

Parliamentary estimates are expected to be brought down by Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes today or tomorrow, and, in its present mood, the house should make short work of them. The government appears to be that the session will close by the end of the week.

Mrs. Eva Coo Near Collapse Awaits Execution Thursday

Orgining, N.Y., June 24 (AP) — Mrs. Eva Coo, native of Haliburton County, Ontario, wasted and nerve-wracked after nine months in Sing Sing prison's death house, was near collapse today as she awaited her execution Thursday night.

The State says Mrs. Coo, former city of Haliburton County, Ont., must die for the "insurance murder" last summer of her handyman, Harry Wright. Only executive clemency can save her from becoming the fifth woman electrocuted in New York.

The nine months in the death house have turned her hair from gray to grey. She has lost from 25 to 30 pounds and complains of intense headaches and sleepless nights.

WOMAN ORDERED ARSENIC, SNYDER TELLS HEARING

TILFORD CASE OPENS

Woodstock Druggist Says He Recognized Mrs. Tilford's Voice

Woodstock, Ont., June 24 (CP)— Tyrrell Tilford knew he was being poisoned with arsenic from a concoction he heard one night when he was thought to be asleep, his mother Mrs. Mary Tilford, testified today at the preliminary hearing of Mrs. Elizabeth Tilford, charged with the murder of her husband.

Tilford told her about the arsenic and he overheard conversation on the morning when he returned to some of his friends from his own home, the mother said.

"Mother wanted to do it, went to die at home," her son had said when he reached her house, Mrs. Mary Tilford told the court.

Tilford in answer to her question of who he was, him poison said "Lizzie is giving it to me. She has killed two husbands and I'm the third, but I'm sure she'll kill no more" Mrs. Mary Tilford stated.

The next day, Mrs. Tilford testified she had heard her son accuse his wife of poisoning him and "you can have your man with the two farms," he was said to have told Mrs. Tilford.

Dr. H. E. Livermore, St. Thomas, is presiding with C. L. Snyder, assistant Crown Attorney of York County, acting as crown prosecutor and Frank Regan, K.C., Toronto, as defence counsel.

Charge Amended

The charge was amended to read that Mrs. Tilford was charged with the murder of her husband "on the year 1935" whereas the original specified the month of March. The new charge was read in the accused's dock as she was not asked to plead or elect.

The first witness, Hutchenson Keith, druggist, was then called but before he could testify Mr. Regan commented on the fact the authorities had kept silence on the inquest that the body of the late William Walker, Mrs. Tilford's second husband had been exhumed for some reason that he did not know.

The authorities had the result of that examination," Mr. Regan declared, "and I intend to have it what it is."

Mr. Snyder objected that counsel for the defence had no right to address the court at the opening of the hearing and asked he could not give the required information.

Order For Arsenic

Mr. Snyder elicited from the witness the fact he had received a prescription for arsenic from Mrs. Tilford. She had ordered two ounces of arsenic, saying some dogs around her home were getting into the place had been overrun with rats. The person was given on March 2,3? last, by his clerk, Victor King, who left the prescription with him for signature, witness said.

LAW AND ORDER TO BE ENFORCED STRIKERS TOLD

Premier Bennett Turns Down Demands Made By Delegation

MARCH TO GO ON

Policies of Premier Called Bourgeoise By Speaker

Ottawa, June 24 (CP)—The delegation of eight men from British Columbia relief camp strikers today were on their way back to Regina, where 2,000 men they represented in meeting the Dominion cabinet are encamped.

The delegation left Ottawa at 1.40 a.m. (E.S.T.) today and will arrive in Regina Wednesday at 7 a.m.

They take back to the strikers Prime Minister R. B. Bennett's rejection of their demands for a work and wages program for the camps of 50 cents per hour minimum for unskilled workers and a non-contributory social and unemployment insurance plan, which was also advocated before the cabinet by Conservative and Quebec delegations. Who represented "the National Council of Unemployed of Canada."

Mr. Bennett advised the delegation, he told the men, that it would be their own responsibility if they further unemployed if any other disturbance developed last night as a meeting in an Ottawa theatre presided over by the Workers Unity League. He said he was British Columbia, sympathetic to the league had organized the relief camp workers union.

Addressing an audience of 1,000 who jammed the theatre that "2 cents" Bennett said later when he said I embezzled my union's funds in Alberta."

Bennett admitted he had fraudulently converted the funds "to feed starving people" when he was a cook in Princetown, B.C., penitentiary.

The march on Ottawa's would go on as soon as the delegates get back to Regina, Evans shouted. He predicted that 10,000 men would attract 30,000 to 50,000 men. The movement would then begin number about 2,000. Less than 20,000 men are in relief camps throughout the Dominion.

Tom Evans of Toronto, who said he had been sentenced to a year in the same platform with Evans last night.

"Bennett policies are bourgeoise policies," he declared.

Speaking in French first Heutenant, said the B. C. strikers would try to reach Ottawa next month with aleps at Brandon, Winnipeg, Kenora, Fort William and Toronto.

Tom O'Neil, a member of the delegation, shouted from the platform that "thousands" are coming to Regina and the West to clip us."

The delegation's expenses to and from Ottawa were paid by the government.

Evans charged the government had had their secret meeting with Minister of Railways R. J. Manion by request, and the Canadian Council of Police reinforcements to the West.

MASONS PARADE ON ANNIVERSARY TO DIVINE SERVICE

CHAPLAIN IS SPEAKER

Rev. Bishop Marshall Delivers Sermon on "Responsibility"

The anniversary of St. John the Baptist was fittingly observed by the Masonic brethren of this city along with sister lodges of the district, when more than 250 masons attended Divine Service at John Street United church. Rev. Bishop George Marshall, District Chaplain, delivering the sermon for the day. The Masons in full regalia, met up in the Masonic Temple, Front Street and marched in a body to the church, Wor. Bro. Adaline being the marshal of the parade. Rt. Wor. Bro. W. C. Mikel K.C., District Deputy Grand Master was in attendance as well as Rt. Wor. W. J. Ponton, K.C., a former Grand Master of the fraternity in Ontario and one of the oldest Masons.

Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of the church welcomed the guests of the day, singing the hymns under the direction of Miss Leona Riggs with Alec Gordon as accompanist gave an anthem entitled "Bro. A. F. Sullivan rendered a solo "Open the Gates of the Temple". The anthem "Glorious is Thy Name" by Mozart was greatly appreciated by the congregation. Bro. Bishop Marshall gave a solo. At the conclusion of the service, the brethren sagin marched to the Temple where they were joined by other citizens, where they dismissed, During the service favorite hymns as "Glory to God in the Highest", "Blest be the Tie that Binds", and "Crown King Day of Reign Victorious" and the service was closed with the National Anthem.

District Chaplain Speaker

Bishop Marshall chose as his text the story of Cain and Abel and based his sermon on the subject "Responsibility" under the "I am a sad subject", said Bishop Marshall "that the first crime that the world would become a murderer and even in his guilty conscience he presented Mr. Cain with a proper responsibility."

"Times have changed somewhat that time and God and nations have multiplied but God's requirements are the same universal brotherhood. If we claim Adam as our progenitor we are all brothers all. We hear plenty about brotherhood but we put little in practice and where we do see it it is not as deep as it should be."

Wor. Bro. Adaline was thanked by the Grand Master M. W. Bro. F. Hall, Grand Chaplain and Grand Bishop Marshall remarked that it would have been well if all could be here to hear the sermon, instead of the 800, that were present. Wor. Bro. Adaline speaker said "that in these difficult times, the right to fight the wrongs and rights wrongs" but the speaker of the day was of the opinion, that there was another way of attending to say. The Masonic fraternity is the most fraternal and charitable of all the organizations, but if it wants to be beneficial it can be and Bishop Marshall believed the time had come for Masons to take an active part in fighting the wrongs now besetting the world. He stated the priest and the Levite missed their opportunity. "In this Dominion we should show gratitude for provident and protection of its inhabitants", the speaker said, "and we do not have earthquakes or famines and our granaries are filled to overflowing, the soil is abundant, the lakes and rivers full of fish and the air is filled with wingy fowl but I am humiliated to know there are many living in our midst, that are in discontent and that the lack of intelligence to know there is enough for all."

Scrap System Urged

Bishop Marshall was against those who advocated destruction to boost prices because it only makes the rich richer, and the poor, poorer. "It is no mystery, when unemployment is rampant that the standard of our Dominion is deteriorating and that the streams of wealth are flowing into streams of wealth", said the speaker, "Wealth seems to find way to those, who have plenty", and at this point, Bishop Marshall remarked, that our hall of commercial and industrial wealth is constituted by the resources of the Dominion according to figures released and that one man has control of four billions of dollars which holds forty-two salaried positions, which if divided would find employment to 100. This condition is unsound and unchristian", said the speaker. "Possession of wealth is not wrong but it is a crime to misuse it in against the advancement of others."

The speakey pleaded for a change in the economic system, for if the system is wrong as claimed, then let it be scrapped and a new one formed. "It is my mission I feel we have turned from God because the only economic system that is workable is the one laid down by Moses and ratified by Jesus Christ. In closing Bishop Marshall requested the brethren and all to respect the Sabbath Day and keep it holy instead of going on picnics and having pleasure and to remember, "I am my brother's keeper".

Adjutant and Mrs. Martin Promoted to Rank of Major

RETURN TO TORONTO

Adjutant and Mrs. Martin received word this morning from Commissioner John McMillan, Territorial Commander of the Salvation Army in Canada, that as a mark of appreciation and long years of service Adjutant Martin has been promoted to the rank of Major. This word was received amidst the congratulations of their many friends. Major Martin goes on Thursday to North Toronto Corps as commanding officer. At one time he was ensign with the corps.

A large congregation filled the citadel auditorium last evening for the final farewell service of Adjutant and Mrs. Martin, who presided over by Sergt.-Major W. Hart, who gave opportunity for the following representative speakers to voice the local feelings of appreciation of the officer's work in Belleville.

Mr. George Hilerby, Mrs. A. Ayling, Bandsman Fred Wardle and Corps Secretary, Irene Young all spoke highly of the character and work of the officers who have commanded the Corps for the last two years.

Mrs. (Major) Martin spoke in reply for the family, and to all who had shown kindness and given support and reviewed happy days in Belleville. The Citadel Songsters sang an appropriate selection entitled "God, my strength" and also there was rendered by Mrs. Martin, Grace Kennedy and Eileen, a quartette entitled "I am thine, O Lord and Master."

The new Major arose to speak his valedictory remarks and spoke of his pleasure during two years in Belleville in seeing many phases of the work of the local Corps prosper and advance, including fine, verified statistics, he stated 39 Salvationists and Recruits had been added to the local roll. 43 junior members of the Army enrolled, and the weekly attendances in the Sunday School work nearly trebled. 12 young Salvationists have been transferred to full adult membership, and same now occupying places in the Senior Citadel Band. Reference was also made to the organization of the Y. P. Band and Y. P. Singing Company, formed last year, and proving their worth.

The farewelling officer was particularly pressed to point to the fact that a wide circle of new adherents had been ndrawn to make the Army Citadel there spiritual home, and a number already having been enrolled as Salvationists.

A very sincere expression of thanks was tendered to the local officers, the Bandsmen, Songsters and Corps Workers for their help in their work during the two years. It was also stated that very happy associations have been enjoyed by the officers with Ex-Captain and Mrs. T. Hudson, who are former day officers of the local Corps.

In concluding his remarks Major Martin made due references to the public side of his work in the city saying tribute to His Worship Mayor Tice for his friendship and co-operation, also to Chief Inspector Gay-Reid, for faithful interest and help. In referring to the local press work of the Army, warm appreciation was expressed of the association of Governor and Mrs. H. French and other officials.

The co-operation of sister churches and realationship with local clergymen was mentioned, as was the Ministerial Association and in for hearty recognition.

Hope was given to the parting of the ways," said the Major, "it urges us to continue, as you have done, on in God." Receive Major and Mrs. Jordan into your hearts and continue your rally to help them in what you can. I have known Major and Mrs. Jordan for many years, and I warmly recommend them to you.

The Bible address was also delivered by the outgoing officer, the text for his text "What will you do with Jesus, which is called the Christ," and stated that the notes of address were taken from the last address delivered by the founder, Wm. Booth, just prior to his fatal operation. The band rendered a fitting selection entitled "The Founder's Song."

The congregation rose and sang "God be with you till we meet again" and as the people retired, shook hands with Major and Mrs. Martin at the door.

Mr. Mott's View On Cadet Work

Trustee M. W. Mott, debating on the question of extending the cadet training in the collegiate at Friday night's meeting of the Board of Education when cadet drilling in the schools would be abolished that he did not think the instructors who were engaged in cadet work did so for drilling but they were getting out of it. He also remarked that the public school instructors were in his opinion doing their work just as efficient now without pay as they were when they used to be paid for drilling.

Cadet instructors in the public schools used to be paid but for some years these instructors have not been remunerated because of a change in the regulation which does not affect the remuneration of instructors of high school and collegiate corps.

OLDER BROTHER IS SENTENCED

Younger Given Suspended Sentenced by Magistrate Butler

William Weldon, 19, of Hungerford Township, was sentenced to serve two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking, entering and theft of the premises of Thomas Gilbert, Rednersville. Later pleading guilty to a similar charge his brother, Carman Weldon, 17, was given a suspended sentence by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., this morning.

The Weldon brothers admitted stealing a quantity of cigars, cigarettes and other articles from the premises of Mr. Collins. They were apprehended by Provincial Constable Hayes of Tweed, who informed the court that Hungerford was in his opinion the Weldons were incorrigible, being the oldest of a family of nine. The elder brother had a poor record in court on their behalf, stated Constable Hayes, but there is hope you can. I have known Major and Mrs. Jordan for many years, and I warmly recommend them to you.

The Bible address was also delivered by the outgoing officer, the text for his text "What will you do with Jesus, which is called the Christ," and stated that the notes of address were taken from the last address delivered by the founder, Wm. TWO ARRESTED IN FRUIT WAREHOUSE

Walter Hedger and Edward Below Plead Guilty as Charged

Apprehended in the premises of the Belleville Fruit Warehouse, Albion Street, after having broken into through a side window, Walter J. Hedger and Edward Below, both of this city, were arrested by local police at 1.10 a.m. today. The pair appeared in the local police court, before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, and pleaded guilty, sentence being reserved in each case until Friday of this week. During the court proceedings it was established, that Hedger had just recently been released from the Ontario reformatory, where he was serving a three months to one year sentence for the breaking and entering of the Belleville Creameries. Hedger is at present out on parole.

Shortly before 1.00 a.m. today P. C. Arnott accompanied Mr. Frank Donnelly, proprietor of the Belleville Fruit Company, to the warehouse on Albion Street where information had been received that burglars had gained entrance. Upon their arrival Constable Arnott apprehended Hedger in the act of breaking a rear window in an effort to escape. Hedger's thumb was cut as he broke the glass in the window. Later Sergeant Booth joined the hunt and apprehended Edward Below behind a pile of packing cases in the rear of the fruit warehouse. Both men admitted gaining entrance through a side window which they broke open.

After accepting Hedger's plea of guilty this morning, Magistrate Butler was reminded of the fact by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., that Hedger had broken his parole, he having been only recently released from the Ontario reformatory. "Donnelly the parole board will want this man back, so that he is better, that I remand these two men for sentence and notify the board," stated His Worship. The pair will come up for sentence on Friday of this week.

POLICE COURT

The absence of a certified city by-law caused a slight commotion in the police court here, this week before Magistrate E. J. Butler, when Nicholas Piscion, of this city pleaded not guilty to a charge of allowing his cow to wander at large contrary to a city by-law. The case was enlarged until Friday at which time it was decided that the City Clerk would have to be present to swear to the validness of this particular by-law. A fine of 50c per day on the oldest by-laws in the municipality's record was seldom referred to.

A large number of cases were disposed of before His Worship, with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., acting as Crown prosecutor. Fines were meted out ranging from $5.00 and costs for driving his automobile at 25 miles per hour along Dundas Street. "I had to speed my car up to nearly 50 miles per hour to apprehend this offender," stated Chief Kidd to His Worship after being asked had he pleaded guilty.

Dennis Healey, Stoco, pleaded guilty to a charge of illegally hunting on a Charge laid by Chief Kidd. His Worship fined the accused man pleaded guilty, paid ten dollars and costs and had his driver's license suspended for one month. Chief Hayes informed the court that Healey had crashed into a telephone pole while endeavouring to elude the police officer, and that his vehicle was completely demolished. "It is dark and I got into trouble but hard to get out of it", commented Healey as he enriched the court's coffers to the extent of the fine and costs. A pair of drunks paid the minimum fine and costs while still another local motorist was deprived of his driver's license, given a suspended sentence and ordered to pay costs, for operating a motor car, while under the influence of liquor.

"This practice of operating motor cars while under the influence has got to be stopped. In the future I understand, that the police have instructed magistrate to suspend sentences in such cases will be revoked and the accused will be prosecuted on a charge of a motor car will have to pay in jail, according to information from the Attorney General's department," stated Magistrate Butler to a large gathering in the police court rooms today.

SOON APPREHENDED FOR THEFT OF COAT

Walk Into Home and Pick Up Article Lying on Bench

A few minutes after they had walked into the home of Mrs. P. C. Martin, 319 Church Street, and stole a coat from the hall, constables were arrested by the local police on Saturday afternoon, in possession of the coat. Upon their arrest the men gave their names as John Howard, Cleveland O., and Joseph Martin, Montreal, but on their first appeared in the local police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, when it was learned both men had assumed aliases, as their real names are Frank Hagan Gerow, while Martin is none other than Jacques Berlinque, both 19-year-old residents of Montreal.

The pair were charged with the theft of a coat valued at $40, but Worship deemed it advisable to enlarge the charge against them, in order to check thoroughly their past records and activities. According to Mrs. Martin, who witnessed the theft of the coat, the pair boldly walked into the Martin Funeral Home and picked up the coat, bearing a hasty retreat. Mrs. Martin at once notified the police and supplied them with a full description of the men. They were apprehended in the matter of a few minutes by Detective Fred Laird and P.C. Peter Thomson.

More About Bermuda!

Article No. 2.

By G. M. JAMES

Travelling Representative of THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

The Bermuda islands are named after Juan de Bermudez, who discovered them about 1510. In 1612 they were colonized by the Virginia Company, later succeeded by the Bermuda Company. St. George is the oldest settlement; many of its streets and houses are old and quaint.

Bermuda is the oldest self-governing colony in the British Empire and its parliament the oldest law-making body with the single exception of the Mother Parliament in London. The Bermuda Parliament consists of the Governor (also Commander-in-chief), nine members of the Legislative Council appointed by the Crown, and thirty-six members of the House of Assembly, elected by vote, four from each of the nine parishes. This parliament was in session during our visit to Bermuda, but they were discussing matters of local interest and not important enough to report fully. We have already mentioned two of the most interesting topics of discussion:

1. How to reduce the birth rate among the blacks;

2. How to provide regular airplane service with New York.

At date of writing these matters, so important to the colony's future, are still under discussion. It requires much time and talk in Bermuda too before laws are passed.

There are all the usual churches in Bermuda, including the Salvation Army, and they are run in much the usual way.

GOVERNMENT INSPECTION OF EXPORTS.

The chief exports of Bermuda are onions, cabbage, celery, potatoes and tomatoes at times of the year when they are not otherwise obtainable in a frozen condition, and the Northern States. Some of the people here explained Bermuda soil, (less than a tenth can ever be cultivated) produces three profitable crops a year. All vegetables for export must be packed under the direction and supervision of the Department of Agriculture, a wise government control. The writer saw this great building in Hamilton, Bermuda, where vegetables are employed in sorting, grading and packing for export. In this way quality and standard are maintained; such government packed vegetables are sold under the Colonial Trade Mark which is a pink oleander, the chief island flower. Could Canada not learn a good lesson from this paragraph? Why could Canada's cheese, butter and bacon be as a discount under similar methods and standards? The writer is not scolding but seriously desires to help.

SENTIMENT OR SELFISHNESS.

Our revered King George V often expresses a desire that he may be considered "first of the yeomen of the British Empire." Is there not a shade of a doubt he wishes the implication to be taken at its full value. A father not only loves and protects his large family, but he expects each member will love and make sacrifices when necessary for all the others. Only on these conditions can a large family survive and prosper, because a house divided itself cannot stand.

Until the Roosevelt regime, Bermuda sent her vegetable exports in huge volume to the United States when they were prosperous. But Roosevelt put on heavy taxes for vegetable imports to encourage United States farmers with the result that much Bermuda land went out of cultivation. Canada was British and not so much farther away, hence surplus Bermuda exports came to Canada by sea through the portals of Halifax, St. John, and Montreal. To-day Bermuda's harvest tell the writer that things are not too bad and perhaps the good old times will soon return if Canada keeps on her friendly way.

Now the picture changes and perhaps King George is not so happy. The writer was amazed and dismayed to discover that Bermuda imports her butter and cheese from New Zealand, but bacon from Denmark, hams from the Argentine and other things from wherever they are cheapest and best. Does this paragraph fill the cup of King George's loves so much. That Bermuda buy hay, oat and flour from Canada not only because it is cheapest and best. Is this the spirit of family love and sacrifice, each for the other?

The writer tried hard to get Canadian butter, cheese, bacon and other foods in Bermuda and most emphatically failed to secure most of the above replies. 'Are we the ideal King George Empire or are we not? The writer has been very patient, painstaking and thorough in his investigations and without hesitation declares that Canada is not the ideal Empire member that Bermuda worships the golden image and gives no thought to the strength and prestige of the Empire. Could the writer was not even more disappointed nor disillusioned in all his life, because for forty years he told thousands of young Canadians about the glory and the destiny of the great British Empire. Is it really true that we are not a great family as King George loves to think of it, and shall we be compelled to tell Bermuda and other parts of the Empire from Canada she must sell her vegetables to us? It is just too bad but what can you do with a hard-boiled sister anyway?

TOO FEW RECRUITS.

Students at the great public schools and universities of England more than once in recent years have stated emphatically and publicly that they will never fight for any cause or reason again. Strange to say Bermuda feels the same way. Bermuda's share recruits were supposed in the most alluring way but very few responded. What does all this mean? Is the Empire dying? Is it really a fact that the people do not like things are going? The writer is loyal, loves the Empire and all it should stand for, but he is deeply perplexed and very uneasy concerning the future.

The most outstanding fact in Bermuda is the climate and the ocean blue bird, which are exactly like our own in Ontario. Their beauty and their songs are the same.

Business in Bermuda is from 9 to 5 and nobody is ever tired. At noon the big stores lock up, and go away to lunch, leaving a sign on the door which reads "Back at 2". You never know what to expect in Bermuda.

Most of the buildings are constructed by darkies, who do almost everything else that requires effort. They are always cheerful, and always see with a smile.

Some corpulent visitors learn to ride bicycles in Bermuda to reduce. A very corpulent lady slid awkwardly to the street from her bike as she met a friend and lamented mournfully: "I've been riding this wretched bike for two months and I have not lost a single pound." She was beautiful but of course the willow wand type would be more appealing.

The only drug in Bermuda is imported and expensive. When attacked by a dog, it sprays a liquid in his face with the result that instantly he becomes blind and foams at the mouth. No one dies a terrible death of paralysis unless a glass of whiskey is poured down his throat. Mike, a black and tan dog, at the home where we stayed was similarly attacked and treated but he is still partially blind. We have often heard of whiskey causing trouble but never of removing it.

As previously stated no cancer diseases exist to Bermuda coincided with our own going and coming. This great man wrote something entitled "Relativity" which nobody understands but which made him famous from pole to pole. He visited the public parks and schools and by his discourse humble cottage in Bermuda to rest and he alone but reporters track him down and annoy him greatly. Professor Einstein, a Jew, found it convenient to leave Germany and go to the United States. He was welcomed at Princeton University and given a high class job. Einstein wears such long, gawky grey hair that the irreverent whisper, "Johnnie got your hair cut". Surely, there are many penalties attached to greatness!

One of the finest things we saw in Bermuda was the new naval dockyards. Several warships were at anchor as we passed on our way to Hamilton harbour. It was a splendid and inspiring sight because Britannia rules the sea.

Then we met some more Belleville people residing in Hamilton:

1. Mr. Joseph S. Wallis and wife who have a large real estate and floral garden. Mrs. Wallis was a Miss Latta well known in the vicinity of Belleville and one of Bermuda's best entertainers. Mr. Wallis is a graduate of O.B.C., 1905, and is one of Bermuda's foremost business men. Mr. Wallis is a genial and wonderful host.

2. Miss May Wood, formerly of Melrose near Belleville. The writer was very pleased to meet all these charming people and wishes them much happiness and prosperity.

At last the time came to sail back to New York and bid good-bye to the many kind people we had met and some of whom were at the dock to see us off. Others sent us flowers, fruits and cake. How can we ever prove our appreciation? We returned by that palace of ocean liners, the Queen of Bermuda, and found her loaded to the limit. Not only were Professor Einstein and wife on board but an immense crowd of the Noble Order of Lions, who were returning to New York after a week-end visit to Bermuda. It was a huge, holiday party with all the fun and noise imaginable; no person had a chance to sleep for two nights. "No sleep till morn when youth and beauty meet." This voyage we were told is always rough while crossing the wide Gulf Stream either way. The writer became dizzy and missed a meal, but it was worth the discomfort to see the great display of waves and whitecaps in the world, and to watch the clouds of spray break over the bow like a tornado. The voyage from Montreal to England is not nearly so grand and inspiring.

In our next letter we expect to relate some new experiences in New York where we arrived safely on June 3.

A COLORED PASTOR'S SERMON.

One of the most applauded vaudeville features on Broadway this summer was a sermon in imitation of a southern colored pastor. A white man was duly blackened and he wore a black pastoral suit with long Prince Albert coat and conspicuous brass rimmed eyeglasses. He stood before a green pulpit and turned the leaves of a large magazine as he spoke:

"Are you listening my brothers and sisters, because as the pastor of this flock I am going to speak briefly on charity; I am in dire need of financial stability."

But for your edification, glorification and spiritualization I shall also explain to you the mystery of the creation of man. Who was the first man? He was called Adam. How did it happen? The good book says the Lord took some dust and created Adam. We do not know what dust now because it came from the dust man has been dirty ever since. Then Adam played around with the serpents in the garden of Egypt but became lonely, very lonely. The Lord said "You are not right, Adam" and we will soon fix that.

When Adam was asleep the Lord made Eve, the first lord speaker and the only mistake He ever made, not out of dust because it rained the night before and there was no dust but out of Adam's rib which he took from him while he was asleep as Delilah stole a march once on Samson.

Then trouble began in the world as they tried to take Cain and Abel and it has lasted to this day.

The first man was not a colored person because the good book says that a rooster crowed three times as Adam and Eve went about the garden of Negro. If the first man had been a colored person, that rooster could have crowed only once.

No brothers and sisters, the colored people entered the picture after loading days were over, when there was charcoal and coal-dust for the Lord to use. The darkie was born because there was work to do, because there were seas to be driven away with a scow and a shovel, and because the good Lord wanted to have His gospel train for heaven well filled.

On another auspicious occasion, I shall tell you more about the glorious destiny of the colored people if you now relieve my monetary embarrassment."

The above is a mere summary of the sermon and lacks accent, gesture, costume and emphasis, all of which add much to the perfection of the act.

There are hundreds of lonely, discouraged hearts in the world to-day, who yearn for a few moments of laughter and fun that they may forget themselves for just a few moments. If the writer were now beginning life again, he would strive in some form or other to cheer and entertain, because the world needs it more than ever before and it will need it still more in the strenuous days that must soon come. We would not forget that a great artist entertainer must be big in some way; Charlie Chaplin and Greta Garbo have big feet, Joe E. Brown a big grin, Bob Hope big ears, Crawford has big hips, Durant has a big nose, Brown has a whale's mouth and Mae West has a smile and swagger that is simply irresistible. But there are a few big things left and I would grab one of them, just as Oracle Allen did.

Believed Ross an abundance of talent that would make both fame and fortune, and at the same time make sad people happy. If you require a manager, just call on yours truly.

Best wishes to all.

HOMAGE PAID TO FALLEN COMRADES BY LEGION POST

Trenton, June 24 (Special)—Hundreds of Trenton citizens gathered at Simcoe Park this afternoon to pay homage to the fallen heroes of the Great War on the annual Decoration Day, sponsored by the Canadian Legion, Trenton Branch 110.

Rev. F. Arthur Smith, pastor of St. Andrew's United Anglican Church. The opening hymn was "O God Our Help In Ages Past," followed by prayer by Rev. W. E. Kelley, M.A., B.D., minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Capt. F. Poulton, of the Salvation Army, read the 37th chapter of Isaiah. "Fight the Good Fight" was the next hymn before Rev. A. E. Corp. Burr of the R.C.A.F. sounded the "Last Post" which was followed by two minutes' silence before Padre Smith pronounced "Reveille" was the closing hymn. Rev. F. A. Coutts—Fiddick

A quiet wedding took place on Saturday at five o'clock in the afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, when Ina Cecelia, daughter of Mrs. Fiddick and the late Frederick C. Fiddick of Brighton, became the bride of Lavergne M. Coutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Coutts, Cedar Street, Trenton. Rev. Garrett of the Brighton United Church performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, G. C. Fiddick of Cobourg. Her attendant was her sister-in-law, Mrs. Gerald Fiddick with Mr. G. T. Solomon of Stirling as groomsman. The wedding music was played by Miss Frances Solomon while Mr. Ralph Solomon sang. After the ceremony a reception was held at Rene's at Presqu'Ile Point. Mr. and Mrs. Coutts later left by motor for Copper Cliff and other points in Northern Ontario. Upon their return they will reside in Brighton. Mr. Coutts is a valued member of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission staff.

Councillor LaBrash Loses Sister

The sympathy of the community is extended to Councillor George LaBrash in the loss of his sister, Mrs. E. J. Walsh, of Pickering. Mrs. Walsh was before her marriage, Minnie LaBrash, and had lived in Pickering for many years where she was highly respected. She was a member of St. Francis de Sales' Church and an active member of the Women's Institute of Pickering. Her husband, one daughter, Gertrude, and two sons, John and Tom survive.

The funeral was held Friday morning at St. Francis de Sales' Church with interment in Pickering.

Motion Picture Studio and Property Given Town

After much negotiating between Mayor Harry Cory and the local members, Hon. Dr. J. S. Faulkner, Minister of Health, over the old Ontario Motion Picture Studio, and a trip to Toronto last week by the Mayor, the deal was finally closed when Premier Mitchell Hepburn gave Trenton the deed to the property. It will fill a long felt need as Trenton has never had a Community Hall. The new property is well suited for such a purpose. Park Alterations will commence at once to put the building and grounds in shape for use this summer. Both young and old will be able to make use of our new community hall and soon Trenton will boast a club that does not bar an ounce of beer or parts. Maybe in time a club may be planned in Hanna Park and the building used as a club house for the athletes of Trenton that have not had a chance to show their real worth as they never had the opportunity to get into the limelight. Trenton could be enjoyed as there is a large and roomy room for the boys to relax on the first floor. It may also see the time that a swimming pool will be put into the building. We could go for sometime telling of the possibilities that will come out sooner or later in addition to the badly needed Community Hall.

West Weather unveils Bridge Plaque

Workmen had to tear up the wooden block floor on the swing span of the town bridge on Saturday morning. The continued wet weather all week had swelled the blocks until they heaved up several inches. This has not happened in many years and for awhile traffic was slowed down considerably. By noon the necessary repairs had been made. The swing span is the property of the Dominion Government.

Expression Lines Etch Wrinkles

Jean Muir

She avoids expression lines

By HELEN POLLETT

One way to keep the countenance young is to beware of "expression" lines. It won't do to tie the humbug countenance into tight knots or to put a permanent pleate in the serious coating.

If there is an inclination toward wrinkles, massage around the eyes, use your lips for expression, but don't crinkle the brow muscles and soul orbs.

Too bad feature can't riot when life appears to be amusing but it is a joy to the woman who can smile right in the severe supervision. She is likely to beat old Pepper Time with her merry mien.

She can't even afford to be surprised at anything. She is likely to lift her eyebrows, arch irrigular-shaped arches her noble brow. Life is like that. Always something.

Relaxation, fresh air, and plenty of sleep are the best preservatives of the young lady who is under the standard weight.

Exercise she must have, but in moderation, just enough to create appetite. She needs plenty of sugar and cream on her breakfast cereal, which she should never miss. At bedtime she should sup up a bowl of crackers and milk. If she's on the stout side she may simply go without.

Correct Manners

The Plate

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me all about serving plates? I'm a bit puzzled by salad and dessert courses!

Perplexed

A service plate (called also a "place plate" or "cover plate"), which is about one inch larger than a dinner plate is a "background" plate. Its function is largely decorative. It is used to mark the cover when the table is set for luncheon or dinner, for formal and for informal service. No food is served directly on the service plate. One first places the plates containing the first courses of the meal, such as fruit, oysters, and soups. The service plate is removed when it is exchanged for the plate of the first hot course after the soup is served.

Let us say, for instance, that the first course is soup and that the next course is fish. The soup plate is removed after the soup is finished, exactly on the service plate. When the soup plate is removed the fish is made room for the fish course, the waitress removes the service plate with the soup plate on it. With one hand the waitress removes this soup plate, and with the other hand immediately substitutes the heated fish plate which she has just brought from the serving pantry. Sometimes the fish plate is merely having a plate before the guest until the table is crumbed for the dessert course.

Since the function of the service plate is largely decorative, it is usually a very handsome plate. It is often made of silver, and when it is sometimes it is of gold or silver or silver plate. Often, too, service plates are of glass. But, whether the service plates, of some interesting sort, or crinkle bad something similar to the rest of the table decor, are not. Usually they are of china, they are of china, they do not match the rest of the china in design, certainly being more ornate.

Service plates are used only for luncheon and dinner, and not for breakfast or for informal entertaining. It is usually inconvenient to use them in luncheon when there is no service, or in homes where the food is served at the table by the hostess or host of both. But this depends on the choice of the house and what are the finds convenient.

After the service plates have been removed from the table with the first course, they do not again appear during the meal. They are not used under the salad plate. And a dessert plate is used for the dessert course.

WEDDING BOUQUETS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our friends have been discussing who buys the flowers for the bridesmaids, and the bootonniere for the best man. Also if is the custom to give the bridesmaids and the best man presents? If so, would you give me a few suggestions for this gift?

Catherine.

Usually the bride's family buys the flowers for the bridesmaids and maid of honor, except for the flowers which are part of the costumes of the bridal attendants. Sometimes the groom buys the flowers for these bouquets to his bride's attendants, and it is the order for him to do this. If this is done, the bride tells the groom what she wishes for these flowers, or they go together to the florist's to order the flowers. The groom buys the boutonniere also for his best man and ushers. They do not usually buy the flowers for the ushers. If you will be so kind as to send me a self-addressed stamped envelope, I shall be happy to send you lists of suggestions for these gifts.

BLACK SHOES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son graduates from High school this year. What is the most appropriate for him to wear while receiving his diploma? A dark blue suit? The girls are wearing white dresses and white shoes.

Mother

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright 1935
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Sis and I used to be the best pals in the world. We told each other our secrets, and I always got most clothes on occasions, helped each other out of every little scrape and had a bully time together."

"Now Sis is 18 and I'm 16, and the girl six months ago and is so happy that she wants to marry me and the entire world. I hope to be married some day myself, but I want to wait until I'm 21 and especially until I think at 18 I've got plenty of time to wait."

"Every time I go to her house she is there, and I feel that she has brought someone home, either from his office or from somewhere else, and I'm introduced to them. I am left in the midst of some such conversation as this: 'Mr. Jones, let me her husband will go off to the movies, and will you please escort her home?' Or 'Mr. Smith, I'm sure Sis will be romantic. They hunger and thirst after love.' And so many delightful variations of that theme as could as possible. And if they can have a little fun with me in connection with it, even a discreet and innocent one, they are happy as a clam."

"Don't blame your sister; she is probably trying to see to it that you and every other woman is as happy as she is."

"I don't seem to be a girl with a mind and a head of your own, and you are the only one I can confide in, and turning of the eternal wheel, I suppose I'll have to get over it myself, my dear, and think of all this poor, lonely, bashful girls who cannot confide in their highly-organized office for themselves — and forgive your sister.

Keep Child's Mind Free of 'Omen'Habit

By LISA GRENELLE

"Oh, mummy, throw some salt over your left shoulder, quick, or something awful will have an awful fight," cried eight-year-old Wilkie considerably excited. Willie, you don't see it, it's superstitious little boy.

Children pick up superstitions as readily as bad words, and I think they do them far more harm. You can break a child of using bad language, but once let him become superstitious and you have a job on your hands indeed. Superstitions appeal to children because they seem romantic, magic and mysterious and they like to feel their glamor, as I have robbed two of my acquaintances of the fear that his will no longer be interested. You can find the origin of almost all superstitions in any library.

No matter what you do, your children always will be guided too much by their emotions, too little by their reason, to be the masters of their future. So spare them of the fear-complex which is being developed by superstitions, bad luck forecasting tellers and omens.

Such superstition has its practical origin. At one time it was a wise precaution not to walk under ladders. They used to have criminals on ladders, and if you walked under one it was possible that you were intended to interfere with the law. It was possible to fight three times against a match in the trenches, because the three successive flares gave the enemy an accurate aim.

But we are not soldiers in the trenches, and we no longer string ourselves on ladders to commit crime, why clutter up our minds with appalling superstitious precautions when there is no longer any danger? Why teach our children to defend themselves against a danger that is only in a bygone era, instead of teaching them to concentrate on defending themselves against present day calamities? Why fill their minds even by large monster tricks, as being kidnaped?

Just Excess Baggage

Superstitions are excess baggage and are of no use to anyone. Don't visit them on your child, for he will have enough to struggle through with mementoes of another period. If you find he has picked up a curse, don't rest until you have rid his mind of it.

Superstitions appeal to children because they seem romantic, magic and mysterious and they like to feel their glamor, as I have robbed two of my acquaintances of the fear that his will no longer be interested. You can find the origin of almost all superstitions in any library.

THE RED TIGER

By ALANSON CROSBY

"LEAVE MY HOUSE"

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Judith caught her breath. It was like a blow in the face, that brutal though reluctant, statement of Ralph that Randall Spencer was suspected of being the head of the notorious "Red Tiger" gang. It was absurd, of course. Randall Spencer was a pattern of crime, the very highest up", the invisible leader of an aggregation of thugs and variegated criminals? Ridiculous! Judith laughed—a bit hysterically.

Bob looked at her—rather shamefaced.

"I don't blame you much for laughing," he remarked. "I did, too —at first."

There was an ominous emphasis on the last two words. A little pain seemed to shoot through Judith's heart. She was convinced, or almost convinced, Bob, who had thought Spencer "a prince". It must be damaging evidence, indeed, that had made Bob changing against Randall Spencer. But she would not believe it—no, it wasn't it couldn't be true. She would put up a bold front to hide the pain in her heart.

"Have you all gone crazy?" she said.

"Maybe," said Bob. "I hope so. But there's more to it than that. If this thing isn't cleared up soon—"

"It is too ridiculous for words," said Judith. She tried to appear very calm, but she knew that Bob was not deceived. Something in her quivering lip that she could not control.

"Of course it is," Bob agreed, but you—"

"And yet what? Tell me, Bob!" McMahon came, unexpectedly, upon some papers in Spencer's room."

"What is it?"

"I cannot tell you. I am pledged to secrecy."

"Nonsense Randall—Mr. Spencer could explain it if he were given a chance." There was almost an appeal in Judith's voice.

Bob shook his head.

"I don't know," he said. "McMahon talked to him. He refused to answer questions that he could not bring himself to answer frankly if his conscience were clear. That's what shakes my faith in him."

"But it's all so impossible," Judith insisted. "Why, I've had dinner at his wouldn't have done it if he thought him a leader."

Bob smiled, almost pityingly.

"You don't know much about leader is.

"But the men who took him away from the house—he knew what he said us—you know they shot at him from the car. I know that, and I know that is true—I heard the shots. They took him away to kill him, and he knew it. He was certain of it. Why, he would have given us information when they had a blowout. He knew that if he told us anything he would have convinced them of his innocence. He gave his life—"

"Maybe he did. Maybe those men you feared were all a bluff. We don't know."

"It doesn't ring true," said Judith, with a little stamp of her foot. "It's her protest didn't either, in Bob's face. "I'll not believe it. It's too absurd, too ridiculous."

"I wish I could," said Bob, "but I can't. I'm sure Spencer is not the head of the gang!"

"Then why have been so obvious thing for him to do in the circumstances," Bob replied. "He knew that if he accused the real leader, of course, and he wasn't, he would be released with profuse clutches, naturally. If he is the innocent victim of the gang that would be more cunning than to appear in the eyes of the police as the horrible example of innocence in distress?"

Bob left her, Judith, if that phrase is not too strong, was thoroughly and all artificially. We all know you are perfectly innocent in all this business and I think you know that —if he's the rogue they now think you are. Spencer is not that. I'm afraid he has fallen in love with you. And you—well, of course you're impressed—any girl would be. But I'm sure that your natural charm and good looks. That's the main reason why I'm terribly distressed about this mess."

"Nice of you to think of me," said Judith, with a little bitterness. "And a failure of it. "But we'll leave my feelings out of it. I'm not a child, Bob. Spencer's engaged, and I'm engaged only a minor incident in his life. But I'm not interested in him, and I'm not going to be unfaithful if I didn't—at least sympathetic—to my fiancé's engagement. I'm sure it will come out all right, and you will be convinced McMahon and all your marvelous sleuths will be wondering how you could be such dummies." She tried to speak lightly but Bob's grin annoyed her, because she knew it wasn't fooling him a bit. A thought occurred to her, and she turned almost fiercely on the reporter.

"Mr. Spencer has arranged for you're intimated with the gunmen who took him off in that touring car to fire those shots in the air that I heard, why hasn't McMahon, third-degreed them, and got the truth out of them?"

"They've been questioned," said Bob. "And I'll stick to the story that Nanny told—a blow-out, and his chauffeur and their wild shots after him. That's a point in his favor, Judith! I'd give you any comfort to know it."

"It proves his innocence to me," said Judith firmly. "I never doubted it, though—"

Bob looked his head wisely.

"I'm not trying to shake your faith," he said. "Of course, though, it would be the best policy for them, to stick to that story. They had plenty of time to agree upon it before they were pulled in. And Spencer's wits and clever methods are nothing to write home about—he's not trying to be brutal. Anybody who would weaken under his questioning would be too chicken-hearted for a gangster—"

Judith would not concede the point—for Bob insisted.

"It seems to me you're overanxious in looking flaws in Spencer's defense," she said. "Just what Harold Stokes? What does he say? Surely he is the one to look upon Randall Spencer by lying he would do it."

"Not that all you can tell me?" Judith demanded.

"That's all, I'm afraid, Judith. As I've told you before, I've my word of honor to McMahon not to discuss the matter. Stokes is the main ground of this sudden suspicion. I'm afraid. It may all be clearing up. I hope so. Don't worry too much about it, old girl. There's nothing to it. It's my life on it!" She gathered up her handbag, which she had left on the table, and rose to her feet.

"I'm losing your loyalty—I said Bob, also rising, "and sincerely hope it will be justified by future events. But I'm not losing your friendship—he is a gentleman, no matter what else he may be. I'm sure of that, though he might have gone too far, he thought he was doing his duty. I'm a gentleman in every context I've had with him, and I'll stick to that."

Bob glanced at his watch.

"Quarter to five. Going home? I'm going to stay here for Sally, and I'll take you both home in a taxi when she comes back."

"I guess not, Bob," said Judith, "Sally's rather inquisitive. She doesn't know what I'm doing this afternoon, and I'd just as soon she didn't. I'll walk home. I'll run along home alone, and unless you hear from me to the contrary, you needn't tell her about this little affair."

Bob grinned.

"Sally, Judith. I understand perfectly. A fine thing it would put red hair out in handfuls if she knew you were going to be so generous innocent instead of the spy you were supposed to be. I'll keep mum, and you can tell her about this little affair yourself."

Judith pouted, Bob sauntering to the First National Bank building, Bob turned toward the Stokes' residence & Stokes' offices, and Judith hurried home.

Mrs. Heath heard her open the door and came scurrying into the hallway. "Judith, you're really excited. Her sallow face was red and her eyes bright. She seemed to have absorbed some of the fire which was in her heart.

"Now then, Miss Bates," she said in a raising voice, "I'd have you to understand that I'm not a respectable house!"

Judith paused for breath and Judith answered wonderingly:

"I never doubted it, Mrs. Heath."

"But you were out all night, right here in this house, and with a broad daylight with a young man, too well dressed to be interested in. I know about this man's purpose—"

She paused for breath again, and Judith felt like slapping her.

"She must have blimed right you will," shrieked Mrs. Heath. "A police-man, and I'll have no wenchin' your room as though I was runnin' a house of ill repute. You've blimed right you'll leave —and now!"

Judith, too astonished and angry to reply, ran upstairs and threw open the door of the room she shared with Sally. Bureau drawers and the closet door were standing, sad clothes and toilet articles lay in a disorderly heap on the floor of the room. Judith threw herself on the bed and cried with vexation and shame.

SHOWER IS HELD TO AID NEIGHBORS

Stirling — On Thursday evening June 20 a reception and miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Mrs. Alfred Fleming and Mrs. Ward at St. Andrew's Church West Huntingdon. About a week ago the home of this family was totally destroyed by fire caused by lightning which struck the house and barn at the same moment. The baby was out alone in short order but the fire was far beyond the control of man in the stiff breeze that was blowing at the result that house, barn, pig-pen and driving shed were completely lost. Only a few bed clothes that were thrown out the window were saved of the contents. Three houses have been constructed upon this same foundation and all were destroyed by fire. Only twelve years ago the house in which they lived after a fire. A large number of friends gathered in the church and many lovely and useful gifts were on display. Mrs. Fleming addressed Mrs. Fleming and her family on behalf of those present and explained the purpose of the social meeting as being an opportunity for the friends and neighbors of their family to extend their sympathy in a tangible way. Feast of Corpus Christi Observed at St. Michael's

Open Air Benediction of Blessed Sacrament is Held

Fully two thousand people assembled to participate in the open air Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament held on the lawn of St. Michael's Church yesterday afternoon. It is an age old tradition of the church to hold this service in this manner on the Feast of Corpus Christi. The ceremony began with the blessing and enrolment of the Scapular in the church by the pastor of the children who had made their first Communion in the morning. A number of adults were also enrolled.

Procession Formed

The opening hymn of Benediction was sung by the choir and the procession, consisting of the children, the Sodality of the Holy Angels, the Children of Mary and Holy Name Society with their respective banners, the Sanctuary boys and Monsignor Micholson bearing the Monstrance assisted by the Rev. R. M. Leacy, P. P., Deseronto, deacon, and the Rev. J. J. Collins, subdeacon and the Rev. C. E. Baker, Master of Ceremonies, wended its way to the beautiful altar which had been prepared on the church lawn.

The fourth Degree Knights of Columbus provided a guard of honour and the canopy was borne by P. Hayes, T. Scanlan, W. Smith and P. Barrett.

Out-Door Altar

The white and gold altar with its background of red velvet hangings was artistically decorated with masses of colourful blossoms, making a striking picture in the brilliant afternoon sunshine.

During the service, the choir under the direction of Mrs. James Grant sang "O Salutaris" and "Tantum Ergo." Mr. Edward Brown sang a solo "Panis Angelicus" and the children's voices were heard in a hymn in honor of the Blessed Eucharist.

Significance of Feast

Benediction was given and at its conclusion the pastor delivered a sermon dealing with the significance of the feast. He spoke of the duty of adoration that man owes to God which has been performed by prayer and sacrifice. Religion is the tie that binds man to God and his relationship to his fellowman and the obligations will follow as a necessary corollary. Many in this century have been blinded by temporal prosperity and did not recognize the voice of the tempter, but these things will if give thee if falling down thou will adore me." They are too real indeed they were an Ocmount of temptation till they recalled the words of Christ, "Get behind me Satan, the Lord thy God shalt thou adore and Him only shalt thou serve."

Man adored God by prayer. Down the centuries prophets and saints were raised to the Father of Light in worship. He appealed to religion. And no matter how an individual may differ from the spiritual religion, the stress of danger, the sword of grief will cut through the barriers that he has built around his heart and bring forth from the cry of David "Have mercy on me, my God according to Thy great mercy."

Men have adored God by sacrifice. This is a recognition that God is the Master of all life. The Greek Science has made great strides and we pay tribute to its progress but still men die. As the gladiators of old saluted Caesar with the cry of "Morituri te salutamus" the human race from the days of Adam has chanted the mournful dirge in their Maker in acknowledgement of the great truth. They have offered sacrifice.

Sacrifice Universal

As with prayer, sacrifice has been universal through time and space. As sin is the wage of death, so sacrifice was associated with the remission of sin. The Almighty had promised a Redeemer who would redeem man by the shedding of His blood. This promise was fulfilled when our Divine Lord died on the Altar of the Cross. The sacrifice of the old law were but the types and figures of the perfect sacrifice offered once for all in blood on Calvary.

Our Lord had triumphed over the grave but it was necessary to apply the fruits of His victory to each individual soul. At the Last Supper Christ instituted the Christian sacrifice. He changed the bread and wine into His Body and Blood, saying "This is My Body, this is My Blood" and commended His Apostles to do likewise. The Mass is in commemoration of Me." On our altars the priest offers the sacrifice of the Mass and at the solemn moment of Consecration, fulfils the command of Christ. He believes in the real presence of our Lord in the Holy Eucharist and as we do we believe in the existence of God or of ourselves. Hereafter people will call the Benediction of God on this feast of Corpus Christi "The Body of Christ" might descend on all present, on the city on our beloved country.

The procession then returned to the church where the service of Benediction was concluded. Two of the first communicants, Patrick Hurley and Kathleen Mulvihill, received an act of Consecration on behalf of the children.

First Communion For 44 Children

Forty-four children received First Communion at 8.30 Mass at St. Michael's Church yesterday morning. The main altar which was recently decorated was used and was admired by the large congregation present. The pastor said Mass and distributed Holy Communion to the children. He addressed them and spoke on the significance of the feast of Corpus Christi—Body of Christ—instituted to honor the real Presence of our Divine Lord in the Blessed Eucharist. On this day they had received Holy Communion for the first time and it would be called the happiest day of their lives. He stressed the responsibility of parents with regard to the spiritual well-being of their children and expressed the hope that the graces and blessings these little ones had received on this occasion would be a precursor of the joys of life eternal.

Nature Builds Your Body—

but you supply the materials.

Health suffers if you run short of Iron

Your food and drink are the only materials Nature gets to maintain your bodily strength and health. But the tragedy of modern foods is their shortage of iron. Sooner or later this has an effect upon the health. It causes, at first, a run-down condition and then anaemia, which develops into serious ailments, if not checked.

40 out of 45 people in a recent test were short of Iron

One month's treatment helped them back to health and vigour

A tiny drop of blood from each individual in the above group was examined under a powerful microscope. In each case the blood was thin, watery and paler than it should have been, due to the shortage of iron. The authority who conducted the tests recorded the exact amount of the

When an authority counts the number of red corpuscles and finds the exact amount of iron in the blood . . . no one can deny it because the results speak for themselves! And the gains made by the 40 persons during their 30-day treatment were all recorded! By definitely increasing both the red corpuscles and the iron, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills proved a most reliable tonic and blood builder. This test is a demonstration of what this fine old remedy can do for you. If . . . as is likely . . . you need iron, why not? Wouldn't you like to feel really strong and vigorous again? Wouldn't you

Iron is essential to health. Without it the blood cannot carry sufficient oxygen to the tissues. Iron is the principal constituent of the red corpuscles which are the oxygen carriers. Iron is the principal mineral contained in the blood. Iron is the principal mineral required to maintain health. Iron is the principal mineral lacking in the modern diet.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic and blood builder. They increase the number of red corpuscles in the blood and thus increase the iron. They are a most reliable remedy for anaemia, indigestion, nervous troubles, headaches, backaches, rheumatism, neuritis, sciatica, lumbago, St. Vitus' dance, colds, influenza, grippe, hay fever, and the after effects of these diseases. Oliver-Gleason Team Solve New Crime in Clever Comedy Thriller

Edna May Oliver and James Gleason, that inimitable screen team, mix hilarious comedy with tense melodrama while solving the newest in their long list of detective thriller, "Murder on a Honeymoon," coming to the Belle Saturday, as a smart two feature program.

Miss Oliver plays an angular, snappy schoolmarm of the 1890 vintage who is suspicious that sudden death is a murder, while Mr. Gleason portrays a fast-talking, but rather dull-witted newspaperman.

"Murder on a Honeymoon" is a rapid-action mystery, which is played out against the beautiful background of the blue Pacific and lovely Catalina Island. The mystery of who killed a man in a seaplane flying between Los Angeles and Catalina is solved by Miss Oliver and Gleason, in a series of laugh-provoking episodes that alternately thrill and chills with the comedy.

The solution of the crime comes in a surprise denouement. And before the final fadeout every passenger in the death plane has been caught in the web of suspicion, even the officious Miss Oliver. She had given the dead man a whiff of smelling salts, somebody passed him a drink, another had proferred some chewing gum and the victim smoked a cigarette.

Lola Lane, as an ambitious newspaper writer, is an excellent performance and Dorothy Libaire and Harry Ellerbe are delightful as the honeymoon couple. George Meeker is convincing in a role of unwelcome suitor and Mischa Auer is good in a heavy part.

Mixed in with the exciting comedy is furnished by Chick Chandler, Matt McHugh, Spencer Charters, DeWitt Jennings and Arthur Hoyt.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Great Defender"

Matheson Lang in

"The Great English Parson"

"The man's a liar, but I don't believe he's a murderer"—as quoted the noted K.C., who was instrumental in getting the parson acquitted of the charge.

Matheson Lang, the Canadian born actor, has never before been cast in such a powerful and dramatic role as "the eccentric but Great Defender" the feature that today begins a two day engagement at the Capitol Theatre.

Almost the entire action of this screen story is laid in Number One Court of the Old Bailey, that honorable and famed court of jurisprudence.

Enacting the role of Sir Douglas Rolls, the parson who defended criminals, Matheson Lang is faced with the formidable task of defending a cast-iron murderer, and by far more disturbing, he had to contend with a most unsympathetic woman whose side were ranged the tools and liars. Yet Sir Douglas succeeds in his task and Mr. Lang has laurel to his already weighty crown, for his unexpectedly tragic denouement, upholding the fair name of English Justice.

In "The Great Defender" Matheson Lang is ably supported by the attractive Margaret Vyner, playing a favorite on the English speaking stage and Screen here. Others in the excellent cast include such popular players as Jeanne Stuart, Richard Bird, Arthur Margetson and J. Fisher White.

An unusual program of short subjects has been booked to supplement the feature, more prominent in it will appear a series of dazzling and seemingly impossible stunts as a motorcycle in which the police of different countries participate; a travelogue takes the patron through the awe-inspiring Grand Canyon; comics; mystery reel in which is revealed the secret of ventriloquism; a musical comedy comprised of two pretty girls and a man.

Starting next Wednesday and showing for one day only is the hilarious mad hatters comedy "Sing and Like it" in which the droll Zasu Pitts, the inimitable Guy Kibbee, Tom ed Ned Sparks and the hard-boiled Nat Pendleton assume leading roles. Delightful Peggy Conklin, Broadway Ned Sparks and the hard-boiled Nat Pendleton assume leading roles. Delightful Peggy Conklin, Broadway capitol will dispense the attractive Mr. Barry dinnerware that is proving so popular with Belleville housewives.

KING OR LUNATIC

PRINCE GEORGE

Political circles in Jugoslavia were thrown into confusion by reports that Prince George, one time heir to the throne, was the centre of a plot to seat himself on the throne now occupied by his nephew, 12-year-old King Peter, who was made ruler following assassination of his father, King Alexander. Prince George's physicians, however, spiked the rumors by his announcement that the prince was a hopeless lunatic.

TENTH YEAR FOR ACROSS BAY SWIM

In That Time 300 Men, Women, Boys and Girls Take Part

The Y.M.C.A. Across the Bay Swim which will take place for the tenth time on July 1st, this year, had its origin back in 1926 and has proceed continuously since that time. Organized by the Y.M.C.A. under the direction of the Physical Director, Ralph Morcom, the event will celebrate its tenth anniversary by passing the three hundred mark for competitors taking part in it, including men, women, boys and girls.

With one exception, last year, the swim has always been held on the 1st July. In order to fit in with the centennial celebrations it was held on June 22nd and on that occasion new records were established in all Divisions. In the Ladies' Division Miss Gladys Gardner clipped off 8 1-2 minutes from the previous time of 39 minutes which had stood the stretch from Rossmore to the Government Dock in the fast time of 34 minutes and 30 seconds. Mr. Harris of Kingston cut the previous Juvenile record of 22 minutes, 3 secs. to 20 minutes, 15 seconds. The Intermediate record of 26 minutes, 39 seconds fell to 19 minutes, 27 seconds, while Mr. Ralph Morcom of the Limestone City. Oarfield Rutherford Association, bettered the senior record, of 45 minutes, 27 seconds made by himself the year before, by 7 minutes, 27 seconds, swim across the Bay and back in 38 minutes flat. Mr. Morcom's time as compared with the other records established, does not show such an improvement in his time as the swimmers but it is very doubtful if any of which will be clipped off by future contestants as the conditions existing of all four years have wasted very little time on their backsliding to Rossmore Journey.

What will weather conditions be like on July 1st? This is just what the committee in charge of the Across the Bay Swim in this connection the records disclose that the nine previous occasions which the Across the Bay Swim has taken place there has but one instance when the weather was really unfavorable, both rainy and windy. This was in 1929 and again this year, on July 1st as scheduled, it will be the tenth consecutive time without a postponement that the bathers have answered the starter's gun.

TORONTO LEAFS TAKEN FOR TWO

"Alabama" Pitts Makes Good in First Pro Start

By The Associated Press

The activities of Alabama Pitts overshadowed everything else in the baseball world today.

Pitts played his first game as a professional after his release from Sing Sing and if the expression of approval voiced by nearly 8,000 fans means anything he made the grade.

Although Albany lost both games of a doubleheader to Syracuse 10-9 and 6-5, Pitts banged out two singles in five times at bat, drove in one run, scored another himself and accounted for four putouts.

He was batting in the second game which Albany lost 3-2 but he slashed the only fair ball handed to him.

And that was not the only good luck Pitts had yesterday. It was feared that, under Canadian law, he would not be allowed to enter Canada when Albany went there to play Montreal and Toronto next week-end but Commissioner Landis announced the Dominion statute which states that foreigners who have been convicted of moral turpitude in their trade" cannot enter the country. The Canadian immigration officials announced they would waive the law in Pitts' case. There seemed little to clean slate in the controversy which started when he first was barred from organized baseball by International League.

In other International games, Newark Bears and Baltimore Orioles divided a double bill on a pair of fine pitching performances by Kleinhans and Darrow. Kleinhans led the Bears to a 6-1 victory in the first and Darrow enabled the birds to take the second 3-2. Montreal took both games of a doubleheader, from Toronto 6-3 and 5-1.

In a game played eight innings between showers, Buffalo and Rochester ended even at one all when the game finally was halted.

Jersey City and Reading divided a pair, the Skeeters winning the opener 5-4 and the Keys the second 6-3.

Other baseball games scheduled were postponed by rain.

AMATEUR BALL

(By the Canadian Press)

Ontario's senior baseball teams got going after rains which delayed the season's schedule, and saw some unusual play and plenty of close-ones.

One game 14 innings and ended in a tie, while a pitcher in another game allowed only three hits.

Dundas defeated Hamilton Tigers 7-5, to bring down the Hamilton pennant hopes. Tigers tie up for first place with the Hamilton Victorias.

In the Dundas-Tigers game the Dundas team rallied in the eighth inning, to make four runs. Dundas is at the top of the league with Orange Tigers got ten off Nelligan.

Kitchener's City Champions shut out Aylmer 9-0 in one of the shortest games on record this season, one hour and 19 minutes. Irwin Plomath, hurling for the Panthers, limited the leaders to three hits, one of which was a double, and no two in one inning. Only 39 batters faced him, and only one got to second base. He allowed no walks. Hatfield, Aylmer pitcher, yielded five hits.

Long Game Ends in Tie

Another game in the intercounty league was a 14 inning affair, Fraserburg battle 14 innings, and then saw the game end in a 5-5 tie on account of rain. Biddle for Stratford fanned 16 batters, and Krakauskas 13. V. Smith, Brantford, was the star batter, getting three hits in six times up. Brantford held a 5-3 lead until the fourth inning, then each tallied in the third.

Guelph Maple Leafs downed the Galt O.R.F.U. team in a rugby fixture, with Gager Woods, Guelph, allowing only four safe blows.

Hamilton Victorias downed Preston 4-2, counting three times in the second inning, when Ted Preston hurler, who allowed only nine hits.

In the Niagara District League the Niagara Falls merchants lost to St. Catharines Young Males. St. Catharines allowed only three hits, only one of which scored.

Merritton handed a 16-0 defeat to Port Colborne. The Ports had 14 errors, and the Mills infield. Merritton had five earned runs, four of them homers, three of which were made in the first inning, and the fourth in the second inning.

In the Central Ontario League Belleville scored over Oshawa 5-0. Calhoun, the Belleville pitcher, allowed only four hits and struck out nine. Ogden, the Oshawa pitcher, issued seven bases on balls. Star hitter of the six was Kerr of Belleville, getting three hits and two runs in five times up.

This is the STORY of Thomas McBlu

Whose lease will expire the first of July

These are his shoes (just picture his feet)
The result of six weeks of pounding the street.

Here's what he found—and isn't it queer?

He almost bought this in sheer desperation,
It really belongs on a Stover reservation.

Till a friend told him "Dust, there are values to burn
In the Classified section!" So
Tom took the steer,
And here he is set for a comfortable year!

Art Calhoun Allows 4 Hits In Shutting Out Oshawa and Radios Move to Top Rung

Score 5-0 And Locals Were Full Value For Win

SWELL DEFENCE

Grey, Weir, Ford And Green Turn in Smart Plays

Behind four hit pitching by Art Calhoun, the local Stewart-Warners moved into undisputed possession of first place in the O.B.B.L. when the locals turned in a brilliant effort to blank the Oshawa "Brewers" by the score of 5 to 0 in Oshawa on Saturday. With a beautiful change of pace, mixing with a sharp breaking curve, only being in trouble in one of the nine innings which he pitched himself out of, in the fifth inning, as the Oshawa squad choked the bases full paths with only one hand down. Calhoun's opponent, Elliott this frame was to make a batter pop to the pitcher and subsequently strike out the third and final Oshawa batter to leave three stranded on the paths. "Doss" Ogden, who had twice previously obtained narrow-margin decisions over the Radios, was Coach Saunders' choice to tame the Millie-led clan once again, but Ogden's slants proved no mystery to the Radios on Saturday as they cuffed his deliveries for seven base blows and five runs, while they had seven men left stranded on their runways. The Belleville victory elevates the Radios into a position where they are one full game ahead of their nearest league rival and can still lengthen the breath with a victory over the Kingston Ponies on the home field on Monday evening.

Ogden Wild

Calhoun was never seen at a better advantage this season as he whiffed nine Oshawa batters and issued only two passes, one again, but by wild throughout, walking seven and striking out the same number. Both hurlers received plenty of applause throughout, while the work of the outfielders was sensational as Hurst, Grey and Weir made spectacular catches of hard hit balls in the outer garden. In the fourth frame, Ogden's only delights when he struck out the side after Barclay had doubled to left and Millie Grey had walked. In the next inning, following a ten minute recess owing to rain, Calhoun stopped the Brewers cold as they struck the sacks with only one out. Incidentally Calhoun retired the first thirteen batters to face him in order, only four scratchy singles being chalked up against the local his deliveries.

Johnnie Kerr led the hitters of the day with three bingles out of five trips to the plate, while Calhoun proved the most prolific swatsmith, as he drove in three Bellevile runs. Grey, Weir and Ford, in the remaining two counters. Oshawa, the Queen shortstop, collected two of the homesters four small shots. Barclay lost control at was the only extra base hitter. a double coming from his bat.

Defensively the Stewart-Warners played stellar ball behind the excellent hurling of Calhoun as the local infield repeatedly came up with the ball on hand drives while Weir, in centre, made two sensational running catches, at times forced far right field to rob Wallace of a double in the eighth, on a beautiful, fly, while Ford, at the middle for the homesters made four beautiful catches, featuring his running snag of Mellroy's drive in the eighth inning which was also fielded with Sonny Green's starting of a fast double play ended the game.

Rain halted the game for ten minutes in the long inning.

Greenberg of Tigers, Collins of Cards are Taking Up Hitting Mantle Worn by Babe Ruth Gehrig Not Able to Strike Stride as 'in Other Years.

CARDS MOVE DOWN

Yankees Have Tough Sledding on Last Part of Trip

(By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr.)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A baseball player who has already hits seen the fading of a good many stars of recent years accept his fate by settling up two new stars as pretender to the throne of swat, vacated by Babe Ruth and so far unclaimed by his logical successor, Lou Gehrig.

Hank Greenberg of Detroit Tigers, and Joe Collins of St. Louis Cardinals, who can boast a few more years in age and experience than Greenberg, are the current leaders of the batting brigade and both are living up to their big things before the season ends.

With only 56 of the season's 154 games gone for each, Greenberg has batted in 72 runs, doubling 18 home runs to hold the Major League lead and Collins, who hit his fifth homer in consecutive games and his 12th of the season by the Cards' opening victory over Brooklyn yesterday, has knocked home 60 counters. That seems to entitle both to about a 150 records of 190 runs batted in by Hack Wilson in 1934 by Gehrig.

After smacking his homer and driving in five runs while the Cards took the opener 16-2 yesterday, Collins was slowed down in the second contest when the current leaders of the batting brigade and Dizzy Dean, who also is living up to things before the season ends.

The Reds turned back Philadelphia's challenge for sixth place by dropping a bargain bill, 5-3 and 4-2.

The clouting Cleveland Indians, reeling to pull the Yankees back to the rest of the American League field, for the second straight day defeating the league leaders 8-3. Lefty Thomas held the Indians but uncorked two wild pitches to pave the way for the Yanks' runs in the ninth.

Washington and Boston split a trin bill with the White Sox taking the opener 4-2 behind Ted Lyons and the Red Sox repaying the favor by trouncing the Chicagoans 7-1 and 9-2. It was the Sox' fourth straight defeat for Whitehead, who was out to bow to start the season.

The Athletics pounded practically the whole St. Louis mound staff for 14 hits and scored in every inning in both ends of a bargain bill, 11-7 and 13-3.

"BUNT" MILLER HURLS 3 HITTER

Young Canadas Tame Rednerseville by 4 to 3

In the quickest, game yet played in the Belleville Senior Softball League the Young Canadas defeated Rednerseville nine on the latter's home diamond, by the score of 4 to 3 on Saturday evening in fifty minutes. The home team scored a run in the initial frame, but were kept from the score sheet until the ninth, when they notched two more, to fall one short of tying the score. The Young Canadas forged to the fore in the third with two counters and added one in the fourth.

Behind the three-hit pitching of "Bunt" Miller the Young Canadas played a snappy brand of ball to win. Miller was in rark form striking out three, but did not allow a single base on balls as he limited the Rednerseville batters to three hits. The homsters used two pitchers, Dempsey starting, being relieved by Cochran in the ninth. Collectively they yielded nine hits and issued four walks. The Rednerseville team appear locally at Central Park tonight.

The line-ups—Young Canada — Latchford, F. Murray, J. Barriage, Miller, Cochran, Wallbank, Brown, Robinson, Alexander and Barriage. Rednerseville — Fraser, Parley, Cooke, Dempsey, Cochran, Mountain, Wallbank and Wilson. Score by innings

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

One full game ahead of any other team in the O.O.B.L. is the position the Stewart-Warners occupy in the league, following their whitewashing of the Oshawa "beer barons" in Oshawa on Saturday. Five out? In Oshawa on Saturday, Five to nothing was the score as the Radios journeyed on Doss Ogden, who was like the pitcher who went to the well once too often. Ogden's deliveries, after two previous successful stays against the Bellaville team, proved no mystery, as they had men on base in every inning except the fourth and eighth. The Kingston at Peterboro game was rained out Saturday, so now we find Belleville leading, Kingston second, with Peterboro and Oshawa tied for cellar honors. Tuesday night the last meeting points come down to do battle, at which time the top rung in the ladder is very much at stake, as a win for the Kingston team will elevate them into a tie with the locals for the league leadership.

Although the Radios turned in a brilliant effort defensively, it Art Calhoun gets the orchids for the day. Calhoun, on the hilltop was in prime form, as the box score will show. Only once in the nine innings was he even in much as pressed and when that occasion arose he drew right-handed and proved his ability by pitching himself out of a tough spot. The base paths were blocked with Oshawa runners and only one down. He forced Elliott to pop to the box and then struck out Ogden on a fine pitched ball. Defensively the locals never looked better, each player turning in a smashing effort, particularly Grey, Grey, Green and Ford; the entire team played the game of ball that will carry them to greater heights before the season's closing rings down. Now that the Ponies were handed an 8-inning 6-5 defeat by Eddie Doebt last Bud Clancy will pitch for them here on Tuesday night, with Ernie Smith and Jack Williams ready to step in at the slabber for the home team. 'Twill be a tilty struggle.

On Saturday the Kiwanis wrestling and boxing promoters received the sanction of the Ontario Athletic Commission to the effect that Frank Sexton, Toronto, K.C. Kelly, Galt, two boxers to take a "run out powder" on the night of their match, will be severely dealt with by the commission, so it is hoped that the fistic stars who had anything to do with the unfortunate situation that threatened to mar the big show next week will have little sympathy with them. Another matter that the commission is what can be expected under the new ruling governing the ring. In the meantime the local promoters are negotiating for an all-wrestling card for the Friday night following, a number of the better wrestlers, such as Allan Dunlop, Geo. Richards, Elmo Sanders, Walter Farnell and others.

On Wednesday afternoon the Belleville intermediate baseball team will meet the Arden nomad on the home lot. Manager Fanning announced that he had signed Wilfred Pelegrin, an ex-professional harrier from Baltimore, Md. Pelegrin is at present residing in Campbellford where he is employed; he also been reinstated to amateur ranks. The new pitcher has had a varied baseball career in the seasoned ranks and should add punch to the intermediates. He is a pitcher who also has the reputation of being a hitter; he started his professional career with the Hartford Club in the Eastern League in 1926, later going to Haverhill, Md., then to Portland, Me., Syracuse, Attleboro, Lynn and Baltimore, Md., finishing in 1931 with Pittsfield, Mass., in the Eastern League. Manager Fanning will have Pelegrin in uniform Wednesday and may use him as the starting pitcher. The locals can move into second place in the League with a victory over Picton. Manager Fanning has two other dark horses up his sleeve, he says.

Today's question:—W. H. P. wants to know if a batter is entitled to credit for a home run if only one run is recoded to win the game and he hits a homer with three on in that half of the ninth, and if batter hits inside the park home run first and second bases but fielder drops ball in field and batter is declared out with home run. Batter is automatically declared out by whether or not ball is caught.

When the Young Canada softball league journeyed to Rednersville last night to play the softball loop and downed the homsters 4 to 3, the locals established something of a record, the game being played in slightly better than 50 minutes. There is no reason why all softball games should not be played around the 60 minute mark, with considerable less time in many cases. Fans do not want to be rewarded and hear arguments and also the long drawn out loafing while changing positions. Softball games should be scheduled for Central Park tonight.

On Tuesday night right fist-ic fans will be treated to Madison Square Bowl when Joe Louis, the Detroit Negro, meets Primo Carnera, the man-crushing Italian, in a scheduled Baer-Braddock quest the so-called "big bum of the ring" as a guarantee are a little skeptical in the matter of the Italian's ability to go the route in the line. Some seem to think that the "big bumtone men" are out to "lift Louis out," as he is a colored

AAJMAAS SCORE WIN FROM TWEED

Gordon Steel Works Team on Losing End of 8-5 Score

Tweed—Failure to produce the necessary hits when they were needed, and committing errors when they did not, were features that spelled defeat for Gordon Steel Works when they clashed with the Aajmaas team in a softball contest on the ground yesterday and the visitors took the big end of an 8 to 5 score.

In the second inning of the affair St. Jacob, catching for the visitors, allowed Umpire Wilson, who banished him from the game. He was replaced by Howden and from before the League executives will probably hear from.

Henn drove out a four base hit in the first driving in two runs. Tweed added a like number in the third, Henn and Howden batting brothers. The visitors scored all their runs in the fifth and sixth, fourth, seventh and eighth innings, being connected with hits by Simpson, Rollins and Tummon were the heavy hitters of the locals, batting in two runners apiece, who assisted double play to cut off a promising rally in the fifth inning and Whalen were the fielding stars for the visitors.

Line-ups:

Aajmaas—St. Dennis c; Whalen p; Hall, 1b; Henn 2 b; Ehlder 3 b; Jordon a s; Klier l f; Tuttle c f; Hanna r f; H. Bawden l b; J. Bawden c.

Tweed—Simpson c; Meraw 3 b; Tummon c f; Rollins 1 b; Howden p; Hall, 2 b; Harrington s s; Gowsell p; Sinclair r f.

Umpires—Wilson, Belleville; H. Wilson, Tweed.

CARRYING PLACE LOSES TO TRENTON

New Sweaters Fail to Bring Luck to Home Team

Carrying Place—Local softballers made an inauspicious first appearance in their new sweaters on the local diamond tonight when they entertained the smart Whitehall team from Trenton, who came out on the wrong end of a 5 to 4 score, the visitors getting in a haphazard manner, possibly due to the nervousness of the locals across the diamond, and the spectators were few. The only tally for the locals as a result of "Barney" York's homer in the third with Cowan on base ahead of him in the absence of Coughlin. Burt Cowan, who pitched a steady and fair game, his lack of control getting him into trouble.

Whitfield scored in every inning and the issue was never in doubt after the first inning. Batteries were: 2-4-6-2-3- and for the locals Cowan and Coughlin; for the visitors Ward plate and G. Larry bases. The new sweaters are smart and attractive, having a body of scarlet with cuffs neck and arm-bands of white, while across the front are names. A number of local enterprises are named in the list of advertised firms such as Westfall's Garage, Carrying Place Garage and Westfall's Grocery. Others are Allard's, Dunch, Quinte Hotel, O'Keefe's, etc.

SOMERVILLE WINS CANADIAN TITLE FOR FIFTH TIME

Defeats Gordon Taylor of Toronto by Seven And Six

ALWAYS AHEAD

Taylor Plays Erratically And Breaks Are Against Him

(By W. R. Whatley)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hamilton, Ont., June 24.—(CP)—The long trail to Canada's amateur golf championship was ended today and a former champion recrowned.

Out at the Ancaster course of the Hamilton Golf and Country Club Saturday C. Ross Somerville retrieved for the Dominion title Albert Campbell took home to Seattle in 1933 and 1934.

The London Hunt Club Sandy ended his week's play of cobalistery by beating Gordon Taylor, of Toronto, 7 and 6, in the final that ended at 36 hole here.

Four times Somerville had won the National title beginning in 1926, but before defeating Taylor Saturday he had not won since 1931. In the interim he had been beaten by United States Amateur Crown in 1932 and by golfing prowess for it again at Cleveland in September.

Somerville's latest victory was the same story of steady, almost machine-like golf that has placed the Londoner among the best. Taylor played the final one over par. He had a 73 yesterday and a score of 37 and 33 in the first 18 holes against a par of 35 each way. He reeled off the third nine in 36, just seven strokes, figures.

Against this exhibition Taylor offered. He won only four holes during the day, missing many opportunities in the first nine and cracking badly on the home journey to find himself six down before the afternoon play started.

Against this exhibition Taylor offered. He won only four holes during the day, missing many opportunities in the first nine and cracking badly on the home journey to find himself six down before the afternoon play started.

Seldom in Trouble

Somerville was seldom in trouble, but Taylor found plenty of it, and two of the details came his way. Some sensational long putts kept him in the hunt, fighting desperately to stave off defeat, but there was only once he could win two holes in succession and that came when his case was just about hopeless.

Somerville moved into the lead at the start and the match was never headed. Taylor won three holes before he could pull out a win at the seventh, making a 15-under for a birdie three. On the home nine he added numerically, losing four holes, three of them in a row. His shooting was erratic and at the 18th he picked up his ball, lost in the rough.

He went down eight to Sandy in the afternoon before he could keep his putts from rolling by the edges of the green. He dropped a 60-foot putt for a birdie three at the 21st, a 35-footer for a birdie two at the 26th, which Sandy matched, finishing with an eight-footer, and holed out a sensational 80-foot putt at the 28th.

The match ended at the 36th where he tried to get down a 20-footer but missed and one hole was halved, both reaching four.

TORONTO MINES (CLOSE)

Toronto, June 24 (CP)—The mining department of the Toronto Exchange was far from boisterous in its performance today. Silvers had a flurry on the side, but featured by the drop in the price of bar metal. Nevada bumped into a heavy selling, mainly from New York and senior gold shares were heavy and slow, only Hollinger showing in the trade in quantity. The general price level was off at the close.

Prices on the mining section drifted downward in dull trading through the morning session, senior golds, base metals and silvers displaying the same weakness. Nevadas was an outstanding soft spot due, it was reported, to New York selling in anticipation of the stock being withdrawn from the New York Board. It lost $1.30 to $35.80.

Silver issues reflected the set-back for the price of bar metal. Aldermac weakened 13 cents to $1.93, Castle 4 to $1.04, Peterson Lake 2 to $1.82 and Bear 3½ to 52. Base Metals Corporation held steady to strong and Mining Corporation was unchanged at $1.40.

Losses in the golds were Dome, 50 cents, Hollinger 30, Lake Shore 50, McIntyre 75 cents and Teck Hughes 1.

TORONTO STOCKS, CLOSE

Toronto, June 24 (CP)—The oil stocks, Nickel, Distillers Seagrams and a few others including Fanny Farmer, Canada Bread and Steel, which was not in fact burdensome, on the Toronto Exchange share market today. Prices in the average suffered a moderate set-back on the leadership of Nickel which was sold apparently because of the drop in the price of bar metal. Losses in the group ranged up to a half point.

Preliminary skirmishes in the threatened gasoline price war were suffered on Saturday to life in all leaders down a half point in quite active selling in industrial section. Imperial Oil and British American Oil dropped to each and Nickel 3½ weakened more than a point. Volume was small over the rest of the board with prices barely firm.

International Nickel advanced above 38 on strength supplied by a higher London market for copper but Consolidated Smelters was adversely affected by the lower prices in bar silver, losing a point. Liquor stocks had unchanged. Bell Telephone lost ¼ and Ford A, C.P.R. and Brazilian remained steady.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Hipps and Crawford by Financial Service.

Hard Rock Report.

Since the inception of the company in 1933 to Jan. last, Hard Rock Gold Mines Ltd., raised $194,125 from the sale of 350,000 shares and spent $180,360 on plant, equipment, exploration and development, at its property in the Little Long Lac area.

Shaft sinking was started Dec. 1, and by the end of February had been completed to 300 feet depth. The main crosscut, south from the shaft, was stopped at a point about 1 feet south, and drifting on the vein was commenced. By May 31 the vein had been opened for a distance of 84.70 feet. Width of vein was east and 540 feet west of the shaft. Values in the 84.70 foot narrow grade vein about 40 feet south of No. 1. A total of 78 feet of drifting was done on this vein.

The best proof of the Dominion's recovery is to be found in the trade returns for May, exports of which totalled $462 millions in the first five months of 1935, an increase of 43 per cent over the $323.4 millions reported for the like period of 1934. Imports increased 27 per cent, a further increase of 7.5 per cent, while duties collected of $112.6 millions an increase of 6 per cent. On the period there was a favorable balance of $247.4 millions as compared with $30.4 millions in the like period of 1934.

A notable market factor has been that the volume of transactions usually falls off rather sharply on declines, indicating that few are tempted to accept paper profits even when they are available, and that most large positions are held for a substantial upward move. The possibility still remains, of course, that the summer recession in business, which is a seasonal factor, may anticipation at this time of the year, may depress the market at some odd time within the next month or two.

However, at the moment, everyone appears to be looking forward to autumn with the belief that it holds forth promise of substantial business improvement. Although prudence might dictate the acceptance of profits when available in the more highly speculative stocks, there does not seem to be any reason to shake our bull position of the standard stocks. Speculative opportunities may still be found in the bond market, notably among the secondary grade issues, as the extravagant yields on high grade bonds offer little attraction to the average investor.

Ford of Canada.

People close to the affairs of the Ford Company of Canada estimate that the company will be able to earn about $1.50 a share on the "A" stock this year. Miscellaneous earnings will be greater than ever.

A tax on surplus capital is suggested as a possibility in Ontario and there is considerable speculation as to the full meaning of the proposal. Views are expressed that municipalities would be the heavy beneficiaries and would give great popularity to mining and gold investment. There are various companies carrying surpluses that would be up for larger than required for reasonable contingencies.

Sask. Farmers Use Butter as Axle Grease

Lefleche, Sask., June 24.—At last farmers here have found a use for their butter, which, selling at seven cents a pound, was hardly worth making. They use it as axle grease in their wagons. Axle grease retails for 10 cents a pound.

EXPORT OF CATTLE AT HIGH MARK

Total of 88,000 Are Shipped to U. S. Since Jan. 1

Ottawa, June 24.—Cattle exports to the U. S. for the week ended June 20 amounted to 2,000 head. Total exports to the U. S. to date are 88,-435 cattle and 1,633 calves, exceeding the exports for the entire year of the whole of last year by a considerable margin, states the weekly livestock review issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Lower values at Chicago, St. Paul and Sunflale, ranging from 25 to 75 cents under last week, were reflected in both price and movement at Canadian short cycle yards at Winnipeg was from 25 to 50 cents lower and a number of other markets showed the same decline.

At Toronto, opening declines were checked by moderate supplies of killing aries. The top for weighty steers was $7.15. Only two loads were bought for U. S. shipment. Montreal paid 25 cents more on some butcher cows. Top steers closed at $7.25. Winnipeg had a similar top of last week but steers were fed yearlings and no 2-to 3½ cents lower. The practical top on steers was $6.50. Calgary was slow and 25 cents lower, with top steers at $5.25. Edmonton was fairly active but steers and fed calves were 25 fully 25 cents lower with only odd sales at $6.00.

The Chicago market lost ground under weak support, and prices were 24 to 40 cents downward. Receipts were 12,500, with the bulk of the grain-fed cattle ranging from $7.25 to $8.25.

The Buffalo market was slow and from 50 to 75 cents and as much as $1.00 lower. Receipts were 15 loads of Canadian cattle. Sales were made from $6.10 to $6.75 for choice steers averaging between 1,000 and 1,300 pounds.

The St. Paul market had a top of about $8.50, fully $3 under the high point for the week.

Calf markets were mostly slower, except at Montreal. Winnipeg where prices were firm to higher.

Hogs were in the limelight due to a keen demand at $9.75 top.

Lambs made a 2- advance at Montreal, closing at $10.00. Sheepskin was markets, and were unchanged but slow elsewhere.

Indigent Patients Only to Get Insulin

Toronto, June 24—The Hepburn government is tightening up on its insulin distribution policy. It was set forth, it is to be issued free only in cases where applicants can produce documentary proof, signed by themselves, their physicians, and the clerks of their respective municipalities, that they are unable to pay for it. Instructions to this effect have recently issued from Queen's Park by Hon. Dr. A. A. Heaps, minister of health.

Health department officials said over the week-end that the new arrangement had been designed to correct any abuses that might have arisen in past distribution. More than $100,000 in aid to the needy has been spent by the province last year on insulin. Scores of people, of sufficient means to pay for their insulin are said to have been taking advantage of the gratuitously-dispensed distribution that has obtained to date. This practice, under the instructions of Dr. Faulkner, is to stop.

Strawberries Show An 80 P. C. Increase

Ottawa, June 24.—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates that the strawberry crop in Ontario will show an increase of 80 per cent. over last year, and raspberries an increase of 35 per cent. over the 1934 crop. Ottawa Valley crops of early apples had a good show of blossoms and the report says the total yield will show an improvement over last year.

"If they want to take advantage of this Board they should come here," Secretary Mallory added.

"I suggest that they get their information from the Winnipeg office," added Mr. W. R. McCrory.

BAND CONCERT BY A.L.I. BAND
Kinsmen Club Sponsor Program at Tourist
By kind permission of Lieut.-Col. S. A. Cean and under the auspices of the local Kinsmen's Club a band concert was held at the local Dundas Street tourist camp last evening, the music being supplied by the Argyll Light Infantry Battalion Band, under the direction of Lieut. Rose.
Hundreds of citizens seated in parked automobiles and thronging the camp site, enjoyed the entertainment program presented by the local military organization. Bedecked in their scarlet tunics and dark tartan blue slacks, the band, under the direction of Lieut. Rose, Belleville, paraded from their quarters at the Armouries to the bandstand in the Victoria Park tourist camp, the well-known march, "Colonel Bogey" leading the way, with the massed swinging march tune. Upon their arrival at the tourist camp site, Lieut. Rose called for the first photograh.
Motorists parked their automobiles for many blocks around impending traffic to enjoy the program and the evening. Many words of favourable comment were heard in favour of Belleville's local band organization, while expressed sincere wishes were heard for the Belleville's new band organization, while repeated encores were called for while each succeeding band number was excellently rendered throughout and the local Rotary Club, as well as Lieut. WOMAN ORDERED ARSENIC, SNYDER TELLS HEARING

'Out-of-Ordinary' He Says

Cross-examined by Mr. Regan, witness could not say how long ago Mrs. Tilford had ceased giving her name when phoning an order.

"When were you first asked about this case?" asked Mr. Regan.

"I believe it was the day after Tilford died, by Dr. Lindsay and one of the brothers," was the reply.

"What did they ask you?"

"They asked if he had been getting any poison—Paris green or anything. Dr. Lindsay asked me that question."

Speaking of the sale of arsenic on March 20, Mr. Regan commented it was odd witness should remember so indelicately, Keith disagreed with his view.

"You say you can't remember the name of anyone else you sold to?"

Three Parcels a Week

Victor King, the clerk referred to, was next called. He told of being in the employ of Mr. Snyder, with instructions to take it to the Tilford residence. This was about three times a week, he said. As noted in the preceding three years he had sold arsenic to no more than one parcels a week to the Tilford home.

Before receiving the parcel, between March 13 and 20, in the absence of Mr. Keith at lunch, Mrs. Tilford had called him to him when the parcel would be delivered. He had replied that he thought he would deliver it after 2 p.m.

"Do you say without reservation that it was Mrs. Tilford on the 'phone?" asked Mr. Snyder.

"I believe it was her," witness answered King.

Witness went on to say that he had delivered the parcel and had obtained the signature of Mrs. Tilford's daughter, Miss Dagmar Bella Tilford or Walker.

Name Changed to Suit

On cross-examination witness said the daughter he had charged the name Tilford because in the poison book from Mrs. Tilford to that of Mrs. Walker.

Witness next visited the Tilford home Sunday, March 31, he said, when he found a hot water bottle and a drinking cup, he was met by Miss Walker who asked him to take her husband's bedroom.

This meant, then he told Mr. King, that Mrs. Tilford was not occupying the same quarters as before.

Witness's account of a sensation was created in the crowded court room when Mrs. Mary Tilford, mother of Tilford, told a fact which, if true, son had told her he knew he was going to meet with a sudden death on a conversation he had heard over which when those in the house thought he was asleep.

He had told her this on the Friday evening before he died, she said. That morning about seven o'clock he had left his own home and went to the home of his parents and according to his mother, it was after he had left that the conversation he had overheard the previous night.

Aged Woman's Story

When he reached her home, said witness, her son said, "I've come home to die." Then he went to his own home to asked for a pail and had vomited.

She said that it looked like Paris green," went on the aged woman, "but he told me that he had taken nothing but what had been given to him, he said, "I know I'm going to die." I asked him who was giving it to him and he said "Lisle is giving it to me. He is married to two husbands and I'm the third, but I'm not going to be more."

Son Accused Wife

He said, "Lizzie, you are poisoning me, you know you are. You tried to killed two and I'm the third you have poisoned, but you will kill no more. I have got a telegram coming with the two farms," said witness, adding: that was Bill Blake."

Witness told of telephone conversation Sunday night witness said Mrs. Tilford had told her that Tyrrell had eaten well, including some ice cream. Witness thought this very strange, especially in view of the fact he had not vomited afterwards and she had commented on the fact, knowing when he had been at her home Saturday, he would scarcely walk across the floor. Mrs. Mary Tilford was the last witness heard before the noon adjournment.

Daily Short Story

"Helping Friends"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

As Mr Patton came up the steps of the Burchill house he saw Mr. Burchill sitting on the front porch.

"Hello, Mr. Burchill," he said. Mr. Burchill turning his head sneerily in reply.

"What's the matter with your father?" Mr asked Ellen after going into the house. Ellen leaned forward to look at her father and then shook her head.

"He's worried," she said. "You remember those houses he built on the Spring Lake section? Well, when he built them he had an understanding with the city that the street would be widened and paved. Now they won't do it and the people who bought the houses are threatening to stop paying for them. Because father promised that the street would be fixed up and they hold him responsible.

"But why won't the city pave the street and widen it?" asked Mr. "It would help to develop that section and add to the tax rolls. Anything I can do to help?"

Offers to Help

"Not unless you can do something with Harvey Walsh," answered Ellen. Mr knew who Harvey Walsh was—a crooked politician who was supposed to control the City Hall. As a newspaper man Mr had frequently met him and had no liking for him.

"What's Harvey Walsh got to do with it?" he asked. "Is he blocking your father?"

"He's not blocking him," answered Ellen. "He wants to see the street paved and widened. But he wants to get something out of it. He told father he would have it done if father would give him twenty-five hundred dollars and father told him to go—Well, father told him no. Father thinks that is the work himself unless he gets the permission of the city engineer. And he won't give it."

They talked about it for a while longer and then about themselves. Because it wasn't to talk about the troubles of Ellen's father that Mr had come to see her. Before he left, however, he said, "Maybe I'll be able to do something for your father. People like to say they don't believe what they read in the papers. But they do, all right."

"You don't mean you're going to print something about Harvey Walsh?" asked Ellen. "That would only make it worse than ever."

"I couldn't print something about Harvey Walsh even if I wanted to," replied Mr. "Remember, I'm not the editor. But whatever is printed won't even mention his name. There's more than one way to use the power of the press, as they say."

How it Happened

For three days nothing happened. Then, on the fourth day a small story appeared in the paper for which Mr hoped it wasn't an important story but it could be made into one, important, that is, for the small city in which the paper was published.

Mr suggested it to the editor. The editor agreed. The next day there was a story, the third day there was one seven still more encouraged by interviews and photographs. On the fourth day the city engineer announced that work on widening and paving streets in the Spring Lake section would start at once.

On the evening of that day Mr went to see Ellen again. She had already read the paper. Her father had, too, and his greeting to Mr was this time hearty.

"Wasn't father lucky?" asked Ellen after Mr. Burchill had gone into the house. "It happened just at the right time." Mr didn't say Ed's smile. "Did you have anything to do with it?" she asked. "I don't see how you could have. Father believes it was just luck."

"Let him believe it," answered Ed, "or maybe he'll think I'm trying to bribe him to get you. But I just didn't happen. When that fire truck tried to get through that street and couldn't make the turn because the street was too narrow it wasn't just luck. It was because I asked a fire captain who happened to be a friend of mine to come through that street the next time he was returning from a fire out that way. When the truck couldn't turn, the paper just pointed the danger of having such streets and began a campaign to widen it."

Little Benny's Note Book

We was sailing supper and ma said to pop, I ran into Bertha Cornhouse downtown today, the double face thing. I tried to let on I didn't see her but I couldn't avoid her any more than the plague. I swear I never met a human bean as full of sly digs and outrite innuendoes, ma said.

G, what a innuendo? I said, and ma said, it's when a woman says one thing and means something worse.

Does it have to be a woman? I said, and ma said, it generally unfortunately seems to.

Well for instance if I heard a lady tawking to another lady about you and she said she acually thawt you were getting thinner, and the other lady said, How? She could she possibly get? would that be a innuendo for instants? I said, and ma said, Who said that, what lady did you hear say that?

Gosh, ma, I didn't say it, I just said in case one did would it be a innuendo? I said, Would it be ma? I said, and she said, It would and it was, and now I want to know who said it.

O, nobody, ma, I mean I meant just for instants; I said, and ma said, Now none of that, never mind changing the subjeck. I know the genuine accent of a real patsy remark when I hear it, and that's one. Now you'll either tell me who said it or you'll get no apple pie, take your chances, it's immaterial to me, she said.

Well gosh, ma, G, holey smokes, I said, and ma said, You heard me and I heard you and that's my final ultimatum. Who said it? she said.

Mrs. Ripple, I said, and ma said, I mite of known and I could of guessed. Well she's not the only one that can play the game of innuendoes, and she'll suffer for this and never know why, she said.

And she went to aner the telephone on account of expecting a call and pop said, Did Mrs. Ripple really say that, Benny? and I said, No sir, It was really just for instants, any G wimickers pop, I want my apple pie.

It's a woman's world, pop said. Wich it proberly is.

NATIONAL CHURCH IDEA IS OPPOSED

Rev. D. C. Hall Expresses Views at Foxboro Presbyterian Church

Opposition to a proposed national church in Canada was voiced on Sunday by the Rev. D. C. Hall when he spoke to a good-sized congregation at Foxboro Presbyterian Church. Moreover, he claimed that there were no church in Canada, or conceivable alliance of churches, which exercised the allegiance of a majority of the population. And if an church is national in fact, none should be declared national in law.

The speaker pointed out that all the traditions of Presbyterianism were opposed to the idea of a national church and extolled the principle of a free church in a free country.

Along with the late Peter Smith former Ontario Provincial Treasurer, Jarvis, Toronto Investment dealer, was convicted in 1924 on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the province in bond transactions.

Sedgwick's Contention

Sedgwick asked the Attorney-General if he did not look at it "the whole story of the case had been pieced together" from Pepall's evidence and others and "if it was all so honest." Jarvis' that story told to the jury when he was on trial?

After Sailer Hayden, Jarvis' counsel, examined the case for his client, contending the trial was unfair, because Pepall, absent in California, was not brought back, Sedgwick asked the argument for the department.

"It is highly improper for you to substitute your own view for that of the judge and jury", Sedgick told the Attorney-General. "The only thing you are asked to comment on is the sufficiency of the trial. You must not make it as of July or June 1935. Put it down and consider it as of March, 1925."

Power Not in Province

Earlier in the hearing today, Jarvis complained former Provincial Treasurer W. H. Price was "so rude" when he (Jarvis), went to him at his explanation to him after former Premier G. Howard Ferguson made a speech at Brockville respecting the Jarvis case.

"Mr. Jarvis made a new trial," said Sedgwick. "You have no power at all. The power is entirely his (Mr. Minister of Justice). He can't be dictated to."

Sedgwick added Jarvis would go down to Osgoode Hall and ask for a new trial, "and that is the only one is the answer you should give him."

"You are asked to criticize what was done by crown officers and you have also asked to criticize what was done by your predecessor in this office."

Sedgwick said also Mr. Roebuck should not have a letter in the case which former Attorney-General W. H. Price sent the Minister of Justice in 1924.

Unlimited Sub Warfare Outlawed by Germany, British Commons is Told

LONDON SEA PACT

Safety of Passengers And Crews Must Be Assured

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 25 (CP Cable) — Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today Germany had agreed she would never again resort to unrestricted submarine warfare.

Germany also was willing, Sir Bolton announced, to adhere to the rules and regulations regarding submarine warfare set out in part of the London naval treaty, accepting there for herself irrespective of the attitude of other powers.

Text Made Public Sat. Oct.

1. In their action with regard to merchant shipping submarines must conform to the rules of international law to which surface vessels are subject.

2. In particular, except in the case of persistent refusal to stop on being duly summoned or of active resistance to visit or search, the warship, whether surface vessel or submarine, must not sink or render incapable of navigation a merchant vessels without having first placed the passengers, crew and ships' papers in a place of safety.

Places of Safety

For this purpose ships' boats are not regarded as places of safety, unless the safety of passengers and crew is assured in the existing sea and weather conditions or the proximity of land or the presence of another vessel in a position to take the passengers and crew on board.

Replying to a question Sir Bolton said part four of the London naval treaty was still in force. The United Kingdom, the United States, Japan, France and Italy. But the only powers rigidly bound by it were the United States, the United States and Japan because France and Italy had not ratified the treaty.

"Did not the fact that during the recent discussions," another questioner asked, "that they favored abolition of submarines."

Favor Abolition

The First Lord replied: "Yes, they again told us that they, as we ourselves, favored abolition of submarines. Unfortunately other nations do not agree."

Several labor members rose together to request more information and in the excitement they could be heard to say they had told the Germans agreed between Thursday's respect the Hague conventions" but not to say reliance to be placed in Germany's pledge?"

Sir Bolton said amid prolonged applause, that the policy indicated by the opposition questions was a policy of despair. It meant having no faith in anybody.

10 PEORIA GIRLS ACCUSE YOUTH

Statements Will be Taken From Almost Thirty Girls

Peoria, Ill., June 26—Ten girl victims of maniacal attacks allegedly by Thomas Thompson, 19-year-old sex slayer, told police how they were "choked" and "beaten" in the woods, it was learned today. Thompson, identified by Mildred Hallmark, whose battered body was found in a cemetery, re-

The girls whose names were listed in a diary of Mrs. Mary Jekyll-Hyde machinist, tallied reluctantly of their moonlight automobile rides on the train with Thompson.

Police said statements would be taken from almost 30 Peoria school women, several of whom are married and whose names were "classified" in the diary.

The State Attorney's office meanwhile announced that a Cook County Grand Jury indictment charging Thompson with the murder of Mildred Hallmark, 19-year-old cafe hostess.

Thompson, who made a brief and at times self-contradictory confession to the sadistic killing, was held in a secret jail in Bloomington pending a lynching. After his confession Saturday he was rushed under heavy guard to the jail at Bloomington, Ill. Later he was removed to another jail supposedly for safekeeping.

Scheduled to Face

Several of those mentioned said they submitted to Thompson in fear of refusing to keep beautiful explanations of his technique.

Others escaped, but not until they had been subjected to the attentions of the youth who was known as a mildmannered, unassuming lad by fellow workers in a tractor factory.

"I've been doing this since I was 16 years old," Thompson told one of his victims, a girl of 17. "I've got to have women to satisfy me and I'm not afraid of any of them squawking."

At the outset of what in his diary referred to as "conquests" Thompson would tell his victims he was "just a little sick" in the girls, police said, and showing them how he could choke them if they cried out.

This failing he reserved to a short upper-cut with his fist. The same blow blasted for Miss Hallmark's death in an autopsy report.

City and District News

BEAMING SUNSHINE SENDS MERCURY UP

Beaming sunshine streaming from a cloudless sky today and a rapid rise in thermometers to almost the sizzling mark by noon today brought a return of summer to the city and district today, after almost a week of steady rain.

While heat waves danced from sidewalks and paved roads during the day and citizens strolled the city with unbuttoned coats, farmers on the district eased apprehensively at the bright sun to tender garden produce, rain soaked from the past few days, and showing evidences of setting in the heat.

"I hope it doesn't get too warm too quickly," remarked one well known gardener on the market this morning. "If it does it will take everything." We need warm weather all right, but we don't need too much sun at the start."

Airplanes from the local port zoomed through the sun and the unlimited ceiling today after being grounded for nearly two weeks by steady clouds and rain.

It rained just eleven days this month so far, reported officials at the local pump house, after a check-up. "That's a record for June."

Bang! Crash! Smash! Jingle! 13 Slot Machines Cracked

Thirteen shiny slot machines all in a row.....a policeman applied a sledge hammer and then there were twelve.

Twelve little slot machines lined up in the cell..... a second hubby swung at them and then there were eleven.

Crashing sounds of discord echoed and re-echoed from the four walls of the City Police Station during the afternoon yesterday. Residents who had occasion to pass the building listened and smiled as a well-equipped boiler factory in full swing or a stamping mill was merrily gone loco. Mixed with the heavy blows of heavy sledges were the crashing tinkle of stray parts bounding from the hard walls of the interior of the station and the musical jingle of brass tokens which rolled in a golden stream from the interior of the thoroughly dismantled devices.

The actual wrecking squad of the police force who passed an hour or two outside the afternoon on the necessary job of making sure that the slot machines at no estimated value of $4,000.00 seized by order of Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., about three months ago from local business places were destroyed once again. It was charged at the time of seizure of the machines that operators were not living up to the agreement signed before the late Magistrate E. J. Butler yesterday they were brought into the room. An order was then given for their complete demolition.

One by one the fascinating playtoys whose whirring wheels and brightly tempting interior display rolls had coaxed many a nickel from the pockets of local residents were thrown on the concrete floor. Armed with a heavy sledge hammer policeman took turns at the operation of destroying them. An average of four blows of the hammer were needed to destroy the front of the machine, while an intricate interior was displayed to view with an added three or four more. This feature of the work of swings was made by Detective Hazel only after his rights had been established by the wrecking of the first few.

The hammers descended, coins rolled across the floor and bounded from one machine. Finally after the silver was removed from their interiors. A total of $2750 was taken from one machine, while altogether 2,715 nickels were found.

The badly twisted devices as fast as demolished were piled in one corner of the room and will be disposed of later.

POLICE COURT

Two transients arrested on the premises of the local C.N.R. yards by Canadian National Railway police, appeared in the local police court before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., today charged with vagrancy. Clive Wyatt, address unknown, pleaded guilty and was given seven days in the common jail. Wyatt is alleged to have boarded C.N.R. passenger train No. 18 at Kingston and nonchalantly made his way to the guinnas car, where he turned up to produce a ticket. Wyatt is also said to have become rather abusive to the railway officials in charge of the train. He was removed from the train at Belleville by Constable Carter last evening. His actions resulted in his being detained at the local county jail for the night.

A second transient who was less intelligent and preferred riding on freight trains, injured his left foot while getting off such a train in the local yards last evening. When picked up by railway officials the man gave his name as Joseph Watson, transient. His injuries were attended to and he was told to leave the community at once, after pleading guilty to a charge of trespassing on railway property.

ROTARIANS TOLD HOW TO BE WELL BY EATING LESS

Fresh Fruit, Vegetables, Milk, Held as Sovereign Foods

"If a number of local Rotarians were on a diet today it is because one Paul O. Sampson came up from the Quaker City of Philadelphia to tell them that they were eating too much and the wrong kind of food—food highly polished, devitalized and bedevilled generally then it lost most of the minerals which nature had put there and were absolutely necessary for a balanced diet and a happy, healthful life, to the famous speaker at Monday's meeting of the Rotary Club.

Assembled Rotarians by condemning as harmful most of the delicacies on the menu at the noon meal. "The Joy of Eats" but his lingering long on the minerals and vitamins which produces dizziness and pain and regret to the eater, he warned the assembled for most of the ills of life is to eat less of the ordinary ordinary fare served and more of the fresh fruit and fresh vegetables, particularly raw, and balanced diet generally. Some of the things advocated by the speaker were: Fruit, fresh fruit, potatoes skin and all, preferably to mashed or any other form of cooking that will not hold the natural mineral salts necessary for health and digestion.

Eating orange whole is much better than drinking orange juice the vitian being destroyed in the latter which performs useful service as a sweeper in the human intestines.

Besides the fresh fruit and vegetables mentioned he recommended milk was recommended as an almost perfect food containing most of the vitamins necessary for a complete diet. Stomachs that could not digest milk and that mixed with grape juice or orange juice digest readily in any combination.

Many instances of prolonged illness which baffled the skill of medical practitioners, according to the speaker, were cured by diet of fresh fruit and vegetables.

After going exhaustively into the study of wrong methods of eating the alleged evils of baking powder and soda in cooking and the wonderful results of cooking with whole wheat flour, the speaker left the audience thrilled by the human machine he described. Following the address he handed life the speaker an an atom meeting Rotary emblem with the address of a publishing house where a book, and chart could be obtained giving the diet formula recommended by him, at a price.

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, June 24, 1935.
To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir—

The taxpayers, the owners of the C.N.R., would rejoice if there were a change in the personnel of the government at Ottawa that would uphold the C.N.R. We can understand why Sir Edward Beatty is so anxious to keep down the C.N.R. cost. He wants it left there and then to see it pile up so that the C.P.R. can step down and buy it. Tell us what a bad shape we are in. The only reason I can see why Sir Edward should be against it is that the Macdonald Act, 1854, and the Short Line Act of 1884 are still in force. Those acts put a stop to any more attention to them. Mr. Bennett's last speech at Toronto he let it be known that he knew how to solve the railway problem when he said that the railway problem was not necessarily a problem or the Government's problem or one man's problem. What one you doing about it?

Well, I'll tell you, sir. Mr. Bennett does not know what to do and that is to use our own road exclusively and the C.N.R. problem, the second vital question before the public today, would be solved in a hurry. If they were to use our road and that is what is worrying him and that is why he is so anxious to get in touch with the Liberal Government of the railways, with him at the head. Mr. Bennett has not been a monopoly at all but there is no doubt that he would like to see the other as the C.P.R. is buying out on the telegrams, money matters and freight but the people are getting wise to a few things and are beginning to understand that we can't afford to ship or travel on C.P.R. while we are neglecting our own. Edward Beatty, Sir Herbert Holt, Sir James Street and Mr. Bennett are the men that the people up than to see it lowered.

The C.P.R. has been entrenched enough and for another to summons at the head of our Government, and the time is ripe for the next Wall Street the better for the taxpayers. I don't know what Mr. Bennett thinks about the railway problem but Mr. King was challenged last winter by the Conservatives to give his stand on the railway question and he refused to do so, stood where he did in 1933 when the Duff commission was on. For the betterment and maintenance of the Canadian National Railways and quit, and that I expect is no use to mean to let the C.N.R. go in the same old rut. To my mind there is no easy way out which is "sell the lousy C.N.R." and let Mr. Beatty attend to his own affairs and look after his shareholders and he will have plenty to do without telling us how to run the C.N.R. He is only asking him for his advice anyway and why should he be bothered with something that is none of his business. He has gone over to the Old Country now on one of the C.P.R. ships and I doubt if there is a Canadian officer of the crew a Canadian and as near as I can find out there is not a Canadian on one of the C.P.R. ships on either the Atlantic or Pacific coasts. Mr. Beatty is the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway and he should take charge of the engine room on a C.P.R. liner but they don't get the chance. I have asked Mr. Beatty or anyone else to show me one single thing that he ever did in the interests of Canada that was not for the interests of the C.P.R. Then and I have not had an answer to that question yet.

City Tax Rate Not Struck In Lengthy Council Session

Adjournment Made Till Friday Night to Settle Matters

With the members of the City Council in a deadlock respecting the passage of the estimate by-laws and there being no hope for agreements, adjournment of the regular session of the council was made by a by-laws duly passed to meet again on Friday night, when the whole question will again be gone into and a fair basis for the coming year. The by-laws have not passed favorably until the report was received and then the storm broke and Alderman Wills took the year and says as he will Alderman Thompson and Arnold had consistently opposed the Relief by-laws. These being taken resulted in Wills, Arnott, Guthridge, Thompson and McCreary voting nay and Mayor Ellis, Alderman Bird, Demonico, Marshall, Cushing, Harvey, Hill, Foley and Bateman yea.

The report was then adopted on the motion of Alderman Harvey and given by title. At this point, Alderman McCreary objected to the report. He contended should be unanimous in setting the rate but if they were in favor of the majority of the whole thing and acknowledged that, "If some one will move the third reading numbering and final passing, I will be pleased to do so. Let us settle this matter." Not one Alderman, spoke to him and Alderman Marshall moved and Alderman Demonico seconded the third reading and when the vote was taken the by-laws were declared being seven on each side.

Many Extensions

Again Alderman McCreary tried to bring the factions together but the three, who originally stood out against the relief by-law refused to budge. Alderman Arnott stated because they did wish to make the vote unanimous a motion to adjournment was then made and a vote was taken, which stood eight to six those voting against being Mayor Ellis who is reported as not willing to conclude the business of the session at the late hour this morning. The majority ruled and the council adjourned until Friday night. The council did not stay long in committee because of the delegation awaiting them. After the delegation had departed, the council remained some hours in committee of the whole, and then adjourned to meet Friday evening later. Before leaving the council chamber at ten-thirty, the council moved, that the time be extended for two hours from seven o'clock, to another extension was granted at one o'clock for an hour and the council seeing, that the business could not be completed, again extended the time but adjournment was made at 2.30 a.m. and no further action was taken yesterday. This is the longest session held so far this year and there is very prospect of the council being in session on Friday night for the same length of time.

HAILSTONES REMAIN ON WALKS TWO HOURS

Trenton, June 25 (Special) —The oldest inhabitant cannot remember when Trenton was visited with a hail storm of such proportions as that which raged for fifteen minutes yesterday afternoon. The hailstones were larger than good size peas and bounced a foot high after they struck the pavement. Fortunately the storm was not accompanied by a heavy wind or the crops in the district would have been totally destroyed. The estimated damage cannot be learned as yet but many farmers in the district claim that the tender crops will suffer a great deal of loss claiming that the raspberry bushes would be stripped of fruit. Here around the Colborne district the hail fell to a depth of four inches. In Trenton the ground was covered with the hailstones that lasted for over two hours even for the heavy rain that followed the hail and lasted the greater part of the evening to saturate. The warm spell of Tuesday is certainly welcomed today after over a week of rainfall.

Human Ships That Pass in Night Abide Pelting of Pitiless Storm In Rude Cave Shelters of Hillside

Slim, nursing a mess of mulligan in a slow boil i the battered can, threw another stick of wood on the fire and a shower of sparks danced up. Four men, sprawled in the muddy glow of the side of the hill at one of the "Belleville Jungles" stirred from a nearby gully never the useful purpose.

Slim grinned as he hunched before the fire. It was an amiable grin that even yesterday's rain and last evening's dampness could not extinguish.

Seeing the World

"Who wouldn't be a ruddy soldier? Who wouldn't join the peace time army and see the blinkin' world" Slim consoled half to himself as he stirred the savory stew with a bit of stick.

The man behind him stirred a bit and came to life. Evidently he had good ears. Minks are sometimes far and few between for the animals knights of the open.

Slim had dropped to the three potatoes and a carrot at the first word. Some sandwiches at the last one. The old lady wanted to know what I spend the raw vegetables on the beef for," grinned Slim, "so I told her I was going camping.

Rheumatics No More

"To think that once I used to be bothered with rheumatism" the soliloquized the second man in an attempt at conversation, as he shifted in an attempt at finding some spot less wet.

"Yeah, that's great," sympathetically agreed the chief cook as he leaned back and propped himself against an almost dry stone.

The tiny fire crackled and Slim commenced a tour through coat pockets. His aimless search was unproductive. From a battered can the second man with a single motion produced a well worn pouch and handed it over.

"Papers inside," he enlightened. "There are a special brand. I picked them up in Oshawa yesterday. One of them was almost a whole one. Must be better times. Skipping betts is less work—more of them on the streets."

Pags Are Lighted

Sparingly with the tobacco cigarets were rolled in the soggy paper and lighted. Smoke from the fire the rags were lighted and both men leaned back. Tobacco to add the fire. What more could men wish—except a dry place to sleep for at least just one night.

"Where to next?" questioned the giver of tobacco.

"East, I guess. Left Toronto a week ago. Been dodgin' ever since. Haven't been wanting to travel too fast. Kinda resting up, Slim grinned again. "Maybe hitch-hike to Montreal. Be a boat after that. It doesn't much matter."

He leaned forward again, tested a choice morsel in the bubbling stew with the end of the sharpened stick, and then hoisted the container from the fire. A second can appeared from nowhere. Evenly the stew was divided.

Both men ate. The weary miles which lay ahead on the jolting grinding box cars, or perhaps even by foot tomorrow along the green highway were for the moment forgotten. There was food, fire. Even the pall of rain had finished. Perhaps even sleep could be possible.

Finally Slim stirred. Meals are sometimes far and few between for the amicable knights of the open.

Slim had dropped to the three potatoes and a carrot at the first word. Some sandwiches at the last one. The old lady wanted to know what I spend the raw vegetables on the beef for," grinned Slim, "so I told her I was going camping.

SHE PLAYS ORGAN AT 75 YEARS

Takes Kruschen to Keep Rheumatism Away

Writing to tell how she keeps her activity, this wonderful old woman says:

"My hands were becoming so crippled that I had to give up piano and organ playing—and almost entirely gave up knitting. I have been using Kruschen Salts for nearly two years, and am very pleased with the result. Last night I played two church services on the organ, and hope to do so again this August. My fingers are nearly straight, and quite supple, and I am 75. I can recommend Kruschen Salts to many people."—(Mrs. A. C.)

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, revitalizing uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other toxic poisons which undermine the health.

Some are the cabalistic chalk marks of a vanished era of professional wanderers, previously married men, who made pests of themselves by water tower of each railway depot. Others indicate every landowner of the best place for a handout or the warning to beware of the woodpile. Yet the dog, the universal direction signs which were so familiar in days gone by have disappeared, yet the hower tramp and hobo descending from a rumbling freight train in a mass of tracks at some railway yard in a strange town at midnight, would find their way with the instinct of a homing pigeon to the nearest "jungle" with its inevitable fire and bubbling pot, of mulligan stew.

Art Slim, as a representative of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer in search of news, has been in the last month and of the city did last week. Here is what he will smile.

"I smiled it," he will grin. "I smiled because I was here to see it. I've been through here once, but I know where it was."

Investigation reveals that those who beat their way across the country in search of employment have a fair idea of where to go at the end of their journey. Jungle is in the east side of every town, and possibly more are to be found in south Belleville. Indeed, it was pointed out, has three. One was one week, one the end of the month before last, and one further along outside the yard limits. It is here that the cook of the day are grouped in the comradeship of a fire and pals of the road. Here are the spots that have been colonized by the more fastidious individuals.

Sometimes a jungle will be spoiled by some thoughtless vagrant's carelessness. Then it is abandoned. Now and then a hen roost nearby the tracks is raided. Last year, one resident near Belleville reported the loss of a dozen chickens in a single call. On one occasion the blackened bones were found at the fire. It is then that the wrath of the nearby municipality in all their might and wrath, descends on the luckless wanderers and with clubs and threats of the occupants and fire on their way into the darkness.

If you must rob a hen roost, pick one a long way before you get out of town. But it's safer to avoid eggs and leave the hens alone. A man drawn by the fact that it make it harder for the other fellow coming along, but some fellows just don't care, comments Slim, content with mulligan mixed with the dandelions he had gathered on the sides of city streets and cooked with the last of the old time hot door campers have.

BRITISH EFFORTS FOR PEACE

British diplomacy in the past few years has been of a kind to make the British subject feel honored that he is a member of the race which takes so broad an outlook of world affairs. The present time is one in which the diplomacy of the Motherland have been trying their utmost to serve the nations and to bring peace.

For months Britain strove steadily for disarmament with all her zeal and when she found that it was not succeeding she adopted a measure which brought the entire situation to a focus. The revelation of the German re-armament startled the world. Then came the British and German naval accord.

These new developments are striking and are not losing their effect on the world, it is a generous gesture of a sincere effort towards peace.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has been criticized for reference to friendship of British and German war veterans. Then came the German war veterans to Brighton where they saluted the British flag in the Nazi gesture and were received by the British.

Now Italo-British conversations are taking place at Rome and the last word is that Britain has invited Russel to talk over the naval outlook.

Everywhere is the evidence of a desire to make new ways for an understanding of the great nations to face the problems of the day and bring in a more prosperous era. Britain can take little credit for her efforts in diplomacy as all her actions point to sincerity.

The Prince of Wales said recently, "I feel there can be no more suitable basis for the lasting friendship to the Germans than we ex-service men who fought them in the Great War and have now forgotten all about it," and this declaration may in the end prove to be words which will speed up the rapprochement of the nations, for they strike the imagination of some others, particularly the French who find it so difficult to take a similar position. But the gesture will have its dramatic result, which cannot be forgotten. Time which is the test of true fear and trembling now see an object lesson of sincerity in the effort of Britain to make understanding possible.

IRONIC SITUATION

Life can be ironic. Many persons look for the most perfect irony in the form of fiction where the artist creates his characters and plots with the intention of so selecting his material as to further an ironic aim.

In real life there has been enacted one of the deepest and most doleful tragedies of special interest to Canadians—that of the Rattenbury triangle which has brought a death by murder, a conviction and sentence to death for murder and the suicide of a wife. Yet Francis Rattenbury, the elderly architect, who met so bitter a death, built what is called the most beautiful of the provincial parliament buildings in Canada, the British Columbia pile. Yet that sense of beauty conceived could not save him from figuring in the most tragic of recent affairs.

The great architect, the chauffeur-lover who awaits the hangman, and the wife who was found not guilty of murder of her husband form a truly tragic group and J. S. Cowper writing in the Edmonton Bulletin says, "That a man with so pure a sense of beauty of form and substance in material things should so far have failed to realize it in his inner life, seems doubly terrible."

SERVICE APPRECIATED

Belleville citizens have had reason to appreciate the service which has been rendered in the past two years by Major A. W. Martin and Mrs. Martin as resident officers in charge of the Belleville citadel of the Salvation Army. The promotion to the rank of major which Mr. and Mrs. Martin now enjoy comes as a rewarding of faithful service. A further evidence of the welfare of the Salvation Army cause under their direction is the fact that the post to which they are going is the post over which Mr. Martin was once an officer with the rank of ensign. Since he served in North Toronto before, he will have the growth greatly with the northern development in that city.

Confidence that these officers will have a continuance of their success in their religious and social work is not doubted. That the work may be greatly expanded by them is the hope of their Belleville friends who number so many. The work of this organization which touches the spiritual needs as well as the physical welfare is in loyal hands with Major Martin and Mrs. Martin, for more devoted and loyal officers cannot be found.

Mine honor is my life; both grow in one; take honor from men and my life is done.—Shakespeare.

THE FOG

He knew how Roman legions looked, for he Had seen the Main Coast fogs march in from sea
For many years now, in the August days,
They came in mighty columns up the bays,
Grey and gray and silver in the sun;
They trampled out the seaports one by one,
The islands and the woods, with their high boats,
And pushed the world back inland from the coasts.
This little house was lost, these hills and dells;
Cows in a pasture faded into bells.
The world around a man closed-in and in Till nowhere was ten paces from his chin.
A man drew up and hailed with a start
To be so alone to his own beating heart
And left so to himself and wholly blind
To everything but what was in his mind.
This was the peril and the comfort, too,
A man who lived in such a region knew;
On any summer's day, within an hour,
He might be blind and naked to a power
So vast, it might have come from stars unmade,
Unthought of, even, making him afraid,
So mightier than the sea that he could guess
How life was but a name for loneliness.
—E. R. P. T. Goffin in the Summer Yale Review.

SINGING IN THE RAIN—a hobo, swinging along with a pack on his back, a stout stick in his hand, a smile on his face,—finding the world a fine place to live in with some good-fun folks in it—good things to eat, soft beds under the trees or in the hayloft—siestas in the jungle after the mulligan—at peace with the world—his own boss, his to go and come as the spirit moves—no worries—it can't be any worse and may be a great deal better—no, hunger on the open road and the health and optimism of the man who is down but never out. Folks who have plenty to eat and cannot eat it because of stomach trouble, soft beds to sleep in but can only coax sleep through drugs,—plenty clothes, but too cold or too hot—and a sour, disgusted outlook on the world as seen through disillusioned eyes. S'Queer world, isn't it.

SING SING AT OSSINING, grim prison, once reputed to be a breeding house for crime, seems to have been transformed into a University where athletics and other things are taught. Good boys can have radios, books, smokes, belong to the dramatic club, and aspire to make the first team of football or baseball. Thus "Alabama" Pitts, deprived of his liberty by the law for participation in an armed hold-up, took advanced lessons in the great American game of baseball, and graduated with honors—so much so that he was signed at once for the International League Albany team, the first minor step on his way to the majors in professional baseball. Perhaps he'll be another Ruth, Gehrig or Foxx? It all goes to show that modern penal institutions are fast developing into classical headquarters for the manufacture of highbrows in the fields of arts and letters and sports.

ZWICK'S ISLAND, like "The Forgotten Man" seems definitely to have dropped out in the background despite the money so lavishly expended upon this pile of rock and sand in an effort to turn it into a beauty spot. Perhaps the aroma from the "burning chats" of the city dump, near by, may have something to do with the lack of popularity of this city park. "Heavy Taxpayer" queries this column as follows: "What are we getting out of Zwick's Island of any benefit to the taxpayers out of the large sum spent upon it, presumably for park purposes?" "Taxpayer" also refers to the large sum expended upon the duplicate main for the waterworks which does not seem to have increased the pressure any, and concludes with the statement: "The only real worthwhile and beneficial to everybody project, that of the Esplanade, was shelved and every day the need of this civic improvement becomes more apparent, especially as regards traffic congestion."

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

Next day we left Abu Raga. Auda led us up a tributary valley which soon widened into the plain of the Sheba—a sand flat. About it, in scattered confusion, sat small bands and clumps of red sand-stone dunes, grouped like aerack, windscoured at the bases till they looked very ill to fall and block the road: which wound in and out between them, through narrows seeming to give no passage, but always opening into another bay of blind alleys, through this mass Auda led unhesitatingly; digging along on his camel, shoes out, hands raised and waving in the air by his shoulders.

There were no footmarks on the ground, for each wind swept like a great broom over the hard surface, stripping the traces of the last travellers till the surface was again a pattern of instrumentals like tiny virgin waves. Only the driest camel droppings, which were harder than the sand and rounded like walnuts, escaped over its ripples. They rolled about, to be heaped in corners by the stirring winds. It was perhaps by them, as much as by the vertical red road sense, that Auda knew the way.

In the mid-march we perceived five or six riders coming from the north. We were in front with Auda, and we had that delicious thrill of "Friend or enemy?" The meeting was in the desert whilst we circumspectly drew across the various lines of vision, so that we were free for a snap shot, but when they came nearer we saw they were of the Arab forces. The first, riding loosely on a halting camel, with the unwieldy Manchester-Blade limber saddle of the British Camel Corps, was a fair-haired, elegant-featured Englishman in tattered uniform. This was guessed must be Stanley, Newcombe's right hand. The others who vied with him in smashing the saddle, after we had exchanged greetings, on this our first meeting, broke in that Newcombe was not far off. I went to Weih to talk over his difficulties with Feisal and make fresh plans for the Yenbo line.

At sunset we reached the northern edge of the ruined sandstone land, and rode up to a new level, sixty feet higher than the old; blue-black and volcanic, with a scattered covering of worn basalt-blocks, small as a man's head, rounded by driving and bobble paving over a floor of fine, hard, black cinder-debris of thunderstorms.

It was very dark; a pure night of wonder, but the black stone under foot swallowed the light of the stars, and at seven o'clock, when at last we halted, only four of our party were with us. We had reached a gentle valley with a little sand, soft sandy bed, full of thorny brushwood and happily useless as camel food. We ran about tearing up these bitter bushes by the roots and heaping them in great pyres, which Auda lit. When the fire grew hot a long black snake wormed itself out into our group; we must have gathered it by cover, with the fire. The flames were shining across the dark flat, a beacon to the heavy camels which had lagged so much to-day that it was two hours before the last group joined us. The men dined and lay down out, partly to encourage themselves and their hungry animals over the ghostly plain, partly that that we might know them friends.

In the night some of our camels strayed and our people had to go looking for them at 3 a.m., that is two hours before the nearly eight o'clock, and we had baked bread and eaten, before again we started. For three hours across more lava field, but to our morning strength the stones seemed rarer, and waves or hard surfaces of laid sand often drowned the rough. Early with a covering as good to march on as a tennis court.

We marched steadily till noon, and then sat out on the bare ground till three; an uneasy halt made necessary by our fear that the dejected camels, so long separated from only to the shady tracks of the camel plain, might have their sort feet scorched by the sun-baked stones, and go lame with us on the road. After we mounted, the going became worse, and we had continually to avoid large fields of piled basalt, or long lines of water-courses which cut through the crust into the soft stone beneath. After a while red sandstone again occupied our old crazy chimneys, from which the harder layers projected like cheese in local shelves beyond the soft, crumbling rock. Sometimes the conditions became plentiful, in the manner of yesterday, and stood grouped like the ruins of a city, or ranged in yards of light and shade. Again we traversed a flat, like summer sea, which Auda guided our little party through the many rocks.

Suddenly we re-entered volcanic ground. Little pimply craters stood about, often four or five together across the stone-fields, for the crust of each foot was filled in with clear, hard, black lava, and where it broke the blue grey stone remained between with sparkling flakes. After a stretch of such stone-laying would be a field of jet-black basalt cinders, or a mixture of the two, like plum-pudding and afterwards a valley of soft, yellow sand, with a surface of weathered rising from the blackness, or from among the fine, yellow grains of their own decay.

At last Auda pointed ahead to a fifty-foot ridge of large tyrsted blocks, bryer and sand, and the other as they had writhed and shrunk in their cooling. There was a little sand here and a road I rode on together and saw in front of us an open rolling plain (West Abu) of fine scrub and golden sand, with green bushes scattered here and there. It was a very little water in holes which some one had scooped after the rainstorm of three weeks ago. We camped by them and drove the camels outside and let them range for grass for the first adequate time since Abu Raga.

George Bennett First Mayor of Greater Windsor

Windsor, Ont. June 26.—(CP) — To George Bennett, Chemitre-born street car conductor, goes the honor of being the first mayor of the city-created by the union of Windsor with its 100,000 population.

Bennett, retiring mayor of Windsor since 1933, was elected mayor of Greater Windsor in yesterday's municipal election with a record majority of 6,963 votes over his rival, controller Albert St. John Bell. The new municipality includes the four former independent towns of Walkerville, Ford, Sandwich West and Walkerville.

The first district polled 16,850 votes to Duck's 9,886. Bennett's term of office expires December 31.

Backed by the combined support of labor, the co-operative Commonwealth Federation and the Communist party, Bennett attributed his success to the satisfaction of the citizens with what he termed the Ontario Government's interference in municipal administration.

"The election results, "is evidence of the thought of the people in respect to the Governmental-appointing finance commission which controls the city's finances." During his campaign the Mayor-elect said he would refuse to co-operate with the Commission.

Woman Heads Poll

One of the Mayor-elect's ardent supporters and the first and only elected member of the council is Miss Olive Janie Whyte, polled the largest number of votes of any candidate. Miss Whyte, a public elementary teacher and active in C.C.F. circles in Windsor, polled 3,232 votes in Ward Three. Frank Begley veteran Conservative, trailed Miss Whyte by nearly 1,100 votes to capture the other seat in the same ward.

Other successful candidate are as follows—Arthur J. Rheaume, ex-Mayor and Sandwich Liberal, in Ward L. Crowley, Ward Five; T. J. Fontaine, former Mayor of East Windsor, and Thomas Rayerat, Communist candidate, Ward Four; and E. Fleming and Garnet Brimacombe Ward Four and Angus W. MacKinnon, ex-Mayor, in Ward Two.

The Council Board of Education and Separate School Trustees were also elected. Like the council they will assume office July 1, until January 1937.

The morning municipality of the Orient Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty circus comes an area of 12 acres. Its population, according to the last monthly census, consists of 1,000 people, 500 horses, five herds of elephants, two caravans of camels, 19 zebras and 213 wild animals.

To move their tented enterprise over the country Cole Brothers employ three trains of double length railroad cars. These are divided into trains depending upon the grades to be overcome by the motive power. One section is used to haul the parade equipment. Another carries the portable stage, colossal special scenery and electrical apparatus used in this season's colossal spectacle, Alladdin. In this train are the sleepers on which travel 400 performers representing 18 foreign nations.

Cole Brothers circus represents an investment of $2,000,000. The daily expense of $7,500. Large as the initial sum may seem it is easily understood when elephants are computed at $6,000 to $10,000 according to their ability to perform. and trained horses at an average of $1,000 each. The feeding of the menagerie and the people is an item of expense which only thousands of dollars and perfect system can accomplish.

Nail Polish Must Be Right

(The Beauty Box)

By HELEN FOLLETT

Nail polish of bright vermilion is standard and no matter what you say it does suit some gals, especially the type who can do her mouth like a strawberry and look good enough to eat. But the fire engine varnish doesn't look so well on the matter-of-fact femme who holds down a civil job in an office and can't make her salary pay.

Why stick to one color anyway? Practically every cosmetic chemist carries at least 20 shades of finger tip polish. It's nice to have several tints. Meditate on the problem of what shade looks best with the frock that is worn.

Advice to the Lovelorn

MARRIAGE CAN THRIVE ON $25 A WEEK—PLUS LOVE AND THRIFT

"When I asked Genevieve to marry me, I was getting thirty-five dollars a week, and it seemed a case of clear sailing. But the firm I've been with for the past eight years has had heavy going, and my salary has been cut to twenty-five. The boss assures me there will be no further cuts, and as times are getting better, I am likely to get a raise.

"It's a good firm, and they're square shooters, and I want to stick by them, but the question is: Can we live on that amount and not hate each other?

"My girl has been working in a department store and is not in very good health. I want her to give up her job when she marries me, and I confess she doesn't know very much about housekeeping. What has been your experience with young couples who tried to make a go of it on twenty-five per week?

Morris W."

As I've said so many times in this column, when young people have asked me the same question, it is necessary on which to begin housekeeping—it depends on the couple themselves.

To a girl who has been brought up in a thrifty and considerate way, a prime, twenty-five dollars a week would be ample. To another couple who feel that life would be a mockery unless they went out every night, with taxis, cocktails and drinks, and danced afterwards until all hours of the night, terrifying themselves with more drinks meantime, twenty-five a week would be inadequate.

If Genevieve doesn't know much about housekeeping, it would be well for her to enroll in a domestic science class without loss of time. And as she intends to quit her job anyhow, it might be well for her to resign and let one or two of these classes immediately.

She should go into the matter thoroughly; learn how to buy meat, and the most that can be used in cheaper cuts. For instance, breast of lamb may be had for eight and ten cents a pound, and if properly cooked with an appetizing brown gravy, it's delicious. If, however, it comes on the table pale and wan, and suggesting pappas' hangers' good fun, it's a fly from.

Your fiancee also should learn how to keep accounts and budget her time as well as the family finances. Old houses which have been turned into flats are apt to be less expensive and more roomy than new buildings which boast the latest gadgets in the way of modern improvements.

Don't begrge yourself the bridling, buying expensive furniture. Unpainted furniture now comes in modern, less ornate reproductions of early American models, in the best possible taste, and at a very reasonable price. Get one good deal of furniture and be done with it. And if you have any gifts along the line of cabinet and carpentry work, you can make very attractive pieces of furniture at home. Any good public library will be able to give you some books on this subject.

If you and your girl are blessed with the divine gift of common sense, and are really in love, your marriage will be a grand success. And think what fun it will be, remembering all these amusing little makeshifts, when you finally land on Easy Street!

Correct Manners

THEATRE PARTY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My daughter will graduate from a small private school for girls, a High School with only ten girls graduates. I am planning to give her a theatre party, preceded by a dinner at a hotel. Would this be proper entertainment for girls of their age?

2. Would they have to be accompanied by hostesses to the hotel theatre, or could they go to the theatre or could they be met alone in a private dining-room?

Reader.

1. If it is possible for your household arrangements, it would be more correct to give this dinner in your own home, rather than at a hotel. Perhaps you would like to arrange a buffet dinner if a sit-down dinner doesn't seem the best arrangement, if this suggestion isn't possible to carry out, is for you to give a luncheon at a hotel, and turn the theatre party a matinee. Or a matinee with a tea-party afterward, either in your home or at the hotel.

2. If the girls are to have dinner at a hotel and later go to the theatre, you should go with them, and perhaps invite a mother of one of the friends of your own child to accompany you. If you decide to have the dinner in a private dining-room at the hotel, you and the other mother might see that the girls are seated and then might dine in the hotel dining-room. When it is time to leave for the theatre, you could call for the girls from their private dining-room, to accompany them to the theatre.

"DO YOU MIND"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When asking for a dance, should I ask the girl or her escort? It is my contention that I should ask the girl, and after she agrees, politely say to her escort, "Do you mind, John." However, "John" believes that it is entirely up to him to cr cide whether or not she is to dance. I believe that John isn't very fair with his girl. What do you think?

If the young man has all the say merely because he paid her admission it looks to me as though the girl were bought for the evening, and I'm sure that's not very gentlemanly.

Bill.

I agree with everything you say, Bill. All these polite phrases that a man uses when he asks a girl for a dance and then when he asks her partner "may I?" are merely empty forms. Under the usual circumstances it is taken for granted that a girl will accept the invitation to dance, and it is, of course, taken for granted that she will not ask for "give consent", graciously. About the only reason why either of these consents would be withheld is if the man asking for the dance is under the influence of liquor. "John" may be jealous, but he shouldn't allow this to interfere with bringing you home in the morning. So I think he is overcautious about your adventures, and makes up a little stuff about Mr. Spencer being a multi-millionaire, and that you two were going to be married next fall, and Mr. Spencer is a big stiff hard explaining the policeman, but I don't believe that it was all a mistake, I guess. Anyhow, she said we could stay, and she's sorry for what she said to you."

"You're a darling, Sally," said Judith. "It would be awful hard to find another room as nice as this and I'm terribly sorry I've been such a mucb-trouble to you."

"Pish! Trouble? The only trouble is that you won't confide in me and tell me what all this mystery's about," said Sally.

And so, by dint of subtle coaxing, Sally received Judith's gratitude for her roommate's unswerving friendship and loyalty. Finally she actually managed to get a fairly clear idea of the way matters stood.

"Gee, you're romantic!" was her comment. "But what dumbheads the men are, anyhow. Why don't you double Mr. Spencer for a minute. He will have ten hidden lines in a fit of stifles presently. Of course he won't have anything to do with the Red Tiger' gang. What would he want to be mixed up with such a bunch for, with all his money?"

"But Bob says nobody knows where his money comes from," said Judith sorrowfully. "Of course, it's ridiculous, but they must have worked up quite a case against him for Bob to go to Reno like that."

"You leave Bob to me," said Sally. "Bob is the best old thing in the world, but sometimes I think he's the dumbest. You don't think Randall Stokes—"

"Indeed I don't," said Judith, thankfully. "I know he's innocent."

"It's all to the good, then, all to the end," Sally declared. "There! We've got things straightened up at last, and if any more imbeciles come to call, I'll simply pull on a fur robe they'll hear from Sally Foster."

It was a relief to have everything understood, and Judith's head had talked until late in the night, Sally pretending to be interested when Judith confessed that her husband's former wife, Mrs. Hayley Instead of Randall Spencer, had actually assumed and promised to wreak dire vengeance on Bob's red hair the next time she met the luckless girl.

"Of course," she said, with a grin, "I ought to pull out a few handfuls of your brazen brown locks, too, for Bob's used to it, and you've got enough other troubles, so I'll just give him double measure of restitution when he is at that."

The next morning at the office passed uneventfully, except that Randall Stokes showed up for the first time since the night of The Red Tiger' skirmish. He came into a snag on his forehead and he passed Judith shamefacedly without speaking. Toward noon, when he had some dictation to do, he called Judith to take it in. That young girl grimaced fittingly as she reluctantly answered the call. At their second day lunch she told Judith that young Stokes was only formal and distant during the time she was in his office, but looked and acted quite human elsewhere.

"He ought to be," was her comment. "He's got a nerve to come back at all."

That afternoon Hezekiah Stokes sent for his nephew, and Harold was closeted with the old man for over an hour. Judith, busy with the old man's angry, high-pitched voice coming through the door, could not get the girls' workroom.

When the door finally opened and Harold Stokes stalked out his face seemed to be a mixture of fury and unsat after a stormy interview with his uncle. He went through the girls' office and slammed the door.

It was only half-past five o'clock that Randall Spencer came into the office which served the dual purpose of reception room and typists' work room. Judith was distraught at the suggestion of his line. Evidently he had been vastly worried since Sally had left him with Bob. He put a quick look and made a slight bow, which seemed to include both of the office force, impersonally. Judith remembered his disavowal, at their last meeting, of any purpose to see her again until the dark clouds which hung over Bob Spencer's head had been cleared. The hurt of nonrecognition was forgotten in the thought that he was just keeping his word.

Mrs. Seltzer gave Spencer one of her most amiable smiles. He was a man to be treated with the utmost care and quite apart from his personal charm, Judith had reason already to courtesy bordering on cordiality. "I shall be glad to talk with him, Mr. Hezekiah Stokes," he said. "Please tell him it is very urgent."

Miss Seltzer conveyed the message in person and came back rather flustered. Hezekiah Stokes had not yet calmed down after his interview with his nephew.

"Mr. Stokes will see you if you insist," he said doubtfully. "But if you don't mind my saying so, Mr. Spencer, he's a bit upset just now. He almost threw Harold out."

Spencer's face was grim. "Tell him them at the ground floor. "Why so glum? I reckon your sweetie can take care of herself—but I'll see to it."

Every pair of eyes in the room followed him to Hezekiah Stokes' office door, and every pair of ears caught the muffled sound of angry voices after the door had closed.

The office clock struck five. Girls who had forgotten their usual hurry to get to the washroom before quitting time rose from their desks and while the striking clock drowned out the muffled harshness behind the door.

"My land!" said Sally. "This sure has been a gummy day for the old man. First his nephew and now Mr. Spencer catching the devil. I shouldn't think Mr. Spencer would stand for it. If I was him I'd take my law business to some other firm."

Judith made no reply. She had an uncanny feeling of depression, of impending disaster.

"Cheer up," said the irrepressible Sally as the elevator discharged

Tell Child Reason Why

By LISA GRENELLE

Most children consider cleanliness an adult affectation. They can see no reason to stretch to obtain it. And when it is forced upon them, they never seem to derive any pleasure or pride in an improved appearance.

This is partly because they are little savages. Then, too, the child, until he reaches adolescence, is looking out and not in. He is not interested in his personal appearance. Besides, parents make such a to-do about the matter, without giving any good reason why so much precious time should be wasted in washing, that children don't understand.

I think children should be taught at the age of five the real reason for cleanliness. It should be explained to them that all this washing has some point other than that of parental pride.

Fashions Feasible

One of the first things Jimmie and Janie should learn about life is that without cleanliness there is always disease. A simple story of the germ and how to keep it away will do them no harm. They should be taught to wash their own cuts as soon as they are old enough to fall and hurt themselves. And they should be taught why they must wash and treat every scratch.

Even the youngest of the brother cannot and should not have Jimmie and Janie under her eye every second. They must learn early to come in and dress their own wounds.

I think the chief purpose of child-training from any angle is to teach the child how to take care of himself, to teach him how to protect himself. A child must obey, but not blindly. He should be informed always of the reasons behind parental orders.

BUSY DAYS in town demand cool, comfortable clothes. Useful and nice is a cool of navy blue sheer, the frock having a collar of pink organdie embroidered with navy dots. The pink organdie makes revers and cuffs for the jacket.

SOON FORGOTTEN are our elaborate clothes as simple cottons appear on the scene days. We just can't have too many cottons. A frock of red and white checked gingham has cuffs and collar also of white Swiss organdie edged with cotton braid in white and red.

A GOOD ANSWER to the demand for linen frocks with fine details is found in a frock of navy linen with a tweed weave; it is done on soft shirtmaker lines with all seams finished carefully. A hand-drawnwork in a big squared design.

WE WON'T MATTER how long your trip may be, you will still feel cool and comfortable if you wear "Palm Beach" suits. The natural model is made in black and white checked linen in a tiny weave that is guaranteed to be uncrushable. Black composition ornaments fasten the coat at the throat, if desired.

TRAGEDY

CHAPTER TWELVE

"My God, Sally! A shadow struck the house!"

Sally's amazed voice brought Judith to a sitting posture on the bed She gabbed at her eyes with her left handkerchief and stared incredulously:

"A police officer was here, Mrs. Heath tells me. He was searching for something or someone. I don't know what. It's my fault, Sally. But I'm going to leave and not give you any more trouble."

Sally's eyes opened wide with astonishment.

"Leave? What for? You've been crying, Judith Baker! What's all this mystery? Bob's full of it, too, and won't tell me a thing. There's more to policemen pile on our clothes in a heap in the centre of the room, and why are you crying and talking about leaving? You've just got to tell me, dear."

Sally put her arms around Judith's shoulders.

"I can't tell you, Sally, just now —only this: It all comes of Bob's adventure I had at the Red Tiger' the other night. And Mrs. Heath is furious at me because the policeman was here and I've got to go."

"Mrs. Heath be darned," said Sally indignantly. "If you go, I go. Let me talk to the dumbhead. I'll be back in a minute. Don't you worry, honey."

Judith could hear Sally's feet on the stairs as she ran down and started with a heavy heart, to sort out the bewildered articles on the bedroom floor. Sally was gone quite a while but came back with a distinct face. "It all right, Judy," she said. "The old bellcat what a dance she was, and her self-satisfied grin proved most was your being out all night with Bob Spencer. But I succeeded in bringing you home in the morning. So I told her somethings about your adventures, and make up a little stuff about Mr. Spencer being a multi-millionaire, and that you two were going to be married next fall, and Mr. Spencer is a big stiff hard explaining the policeman, but I don't believe that it was all a mistake, I guess. Anyhow, she said we could stay, and she's sorry for what she said to you."

"You're a darling, Sally," said Judith. "It would be awful hard to find another room as nice as this and I'm terribly sorry I've been such a much-trouble to you."

"Pish! Trouble? The only trouble is that you won't confide in me and tell me what all this mystery's about," said Sally.

And so, by dint of subtle coaxing, Sally received Judith's gratitude for her roommate's unswerving friendship and loyalty. Finally she actually managed to get a fairly clear idea of the way matters stood.

"Gee, you're romantic!" was her comment. "But what dumbheads the men are, anyhow. Why don't you double Mr. Spencer for a minute. He will have ten hidden lines in a fit of stifles presently. Of course he won't have anything to do with the Red Tiger' gang. What would he want to be mixed up with such a bunch for, with all his money?"

"But Bob says nobody knows where his money comes from" said Judith sorrowfully. "Of course, it's ridiculous, but they must have worked up quite a case against him for Bob to go to Reno like that."

"You leave Bob to me," said Sally. "Bob is the best old thing in the world, but sometimes I think he's the dumbest. You don't think Randall Stokes—"

"Indeed I don't," said Judith, thankfully. "I know he's innocent."

"It's all to the good, then, all to the end," Sally declared. "There! We've got things straightened up at last, and if any more imbecile cops come around I'll simply pull on a fur robe they'll hear from Sally Foster."

It was a relief to have everything understood, and Judith's head talked until late in the night, Sally pretending to be interested when Judith confessed that her husband's former wife, Mrs. Hayley Instead of Randall Spencer, had actually assumed and promised to wreak dire vengeance on Bob's red hair the next time she met the luckless girl.

"Of course," she said, with a grin, "I ought to pull out a few handfuls of your brazen brown locks, too, for Bob's used to it, and you've got enough other troubles, so I'll just give him double measure of restitution when he is at that."

The next morning at the office passed uneventfully, except that Randall Stokes showed up for the first time since the night of The Red Tiger' skirmish. He came into a snag on his forehead and he passed Judith shamefacedly without speaking. Toward noon, when he had some dictation to do, he called Judith to take it in. That young girl grimaced fittingly as she reluctantly answered the call. At their second day lunch she told Judith that young Stokes was only formal and distant during the time she was in his office, but looked and acted quite human elsewhere.

"He ought to be," was her comment. "He's got a nerve to come back at all."

That afternoon Hezekiah Stokes sent for his nephew, and Harold was closeted with the old man for over an hour. Judith, busy with the old man's angry, high-pitched voice coming through the door, could not get the girls' workroom.

When the door finally opened and Harold Stokes stalking out his face seemed to be a mixture of fury and unsat after a stormy interview with his uncle. He went through the girls' office and slammed the door.

It was only half-past five o'clock that Randall Spencer came into the office which served the dual purpose of reception room and typists' work room. Judith was distraught at the suggestion of his line. Evidently he had been vastly worried since Sally had left him with Bob. He put a quick look and made a slight bow, which seemed to include both of the office force, impersonally. Judith remembered his disavowal, at their last meeting, of any purpose to see her again until the dark clouds which hung over Bob Spencer's head had been cleared. The hurt of nonrecognition was forgotten in the thought that he was just keeping his word.

Mrs. Seltzer gave Spencer one of her most amiable smiles. He was a man to be treated with the utmost care and quite apart from his personal charm, Judith had reason already to courtesy bordering on cordiality.

"I shall be glad to talk with him, Mr. Hezekiah Stokes," he said. "Please tell him it is very urgent."

Miss Seltzer conveyed the message in person and came back rather flustered. Hezekiah Stokes had not yet calmed down after his interview with his nephew.

"Mr. Stokes will see you if you insist," he said doubtfully. "But if you don't mind my saying so, Mr. Spencer, he's a bit upset just now. He almost threw Harold out."

Spencer's face was grim. "Tell him

New York, June 25.—Lawyers and physicians studied the first case in which a man was cleared of being the father of an illegitimate child by a blood group test.

Dr. Alexander S. Wiener, who conducted the tests, found Beans and Miss Farrell had type A blood and the child type B blood and reported Beans could not have been the father.

MRS. E. TILFORD SENT FOR TRIAL

Charged With Murder of Her Husband Will Appear at Assize

Woodstock, Ont., June 25.—(CP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Tilford will stand trial for the murder of her husband, Tyrell Tilford, 58-year-old Woodstock farmer, "in 1935". Tilford died April 1, and experts found his death was caused by arsenic poisoning. Mrs. Tilford was committed for trial by Magistrate E. S. Livermore at the close of the preliminary hearing yesterday.

Chief witness at the hearing, Mrs. Mary Tilford, mother of deceased, said her son told her: "I know I'm getting worse. She testified she asked her son who was giving it to him and he said: "Lizzie is giving it to me." She has killed two husbands and I'm the third, but I'm sure I'll fill my place."

The day after this conversation, which was the Saturday before the Tuesday on which Tilford died, Witness said, she heard her son accuse his wife of poisoning him.

"He said 'Lizzie, you are poisoning me, you know you are. You have killed two and I'm the third you have poisoned but you will kill no more. You can have your man with the two farms'," witness testified. "That was Bill Blake," she added.

Mrs. Mary Tilford also testified that her son foretold on the Friday that he would die on Tuesday.

Mrs. Mary Tilford, daughter Annie Tilford, told the court her brother mentioned William Blake and Mrs. Tilford were "licking up a terrible mess" at his home on the Thursday before his death. Frank Regan, K.C., counsel for Mrs. Tilford's estate, explained it could be established Blake had not been near Tilford House on that night.

Edward Tilford, brother of the deceased, said on the Saturday night before his death his brother told him he was only going to live five minutes and asked him to get Mrs. Tilford.

Tyrell pushed her off", Edward Tilford testified, and said: "Lizzie you are poisoning me. You won't have to wait long for your other man. There is also enough insurance to bury me."

Madoc, Ont., June 21st, 1935

To Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rivers, Lillian, Maymond and Gray.

We, the members of Trinity United Church, and many of your friends from the town, have assembled on this occasion with many regrets at the thought of your departure from our midst.

Many months of time have trickled through the glass till eight years have registered to your length of labor among us. These have been successful years of ministry and although, in looking back, they seem to have flown too speedily we feel sure they have been recorded in them many periods of trial, and seasons of discouragement as you earnestly endeavored to administer to us, your flock.

We do sincerely hope that there is also recorded in this eight years of service many periods of refreshment and benediction as a reward for your faithful, undying self sacrificing labour which you have unsparingly bestowed upon your charge.

You, Mr. Rivers," have ever been ready to answer to any call whether pertaining to your congregation or to the town at large. Your careful attention to the aged and ill, the friendliness and destitute will have left their labour a lasting effect, which your diadem will bear with jewels sparkle for the years.

And, you, Mrs. Rivers have ever followed duly as a faithful coworker with Mr. Rivers. Your share of the labour in each branch of the church has shown always, as a model of unselfish conscientiousness.

There is going to be left a vacancy in Trinity church, and association, the Women's Missionary Society, the Sunday School, the choir and the G.O.I.T. which those who follow will find very hard to fill. We know that you, too, will reap in that Great Beyond richer reward for your tenure here.

Mr. and Mrs. Rivers, it is beyond words to print our appreciation to your splendidship over the Madoc charge and likewise impossible to express our good wishes for your future success in your new field.

To you, Lillian and Gray, as our boy and girl friends you have nobly followed the example set by your parents and willingly assisted in church activities with a zest and love that did not pass unnoticed among your associates. Gray, your daily life has also shown a Christian example and you will be missed from the Young People's Society, Sunday School and choir, and Lillian, we are sure, too, that you have exemplified Christian life and leadership in the community where you are teaching.

We wish you folk to carry away with you the fondest regards, wishes and prayers of your Trinity United Church congregation.

May you find your new charge one of green pastures, full of felicity, co-operation and pleasure.

Yours, members of your congregation, and friends and neighbors

FRIENDS HONOR PICTON COUPLE

Farewell Party For Mr. And Mrs. C. A. Wright

Picton—Sun—In P. E. C. Hospital on Thursday, June 20th, to Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Walmsley, a son.

The Parish Hall of St. Mary Magdalene's was the scene of a lovely setting for a large farewell gathering in honor of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wright on Monday, the closing of the Royal Bank in Picton, as having it has up resident in Belleville.

The address, where the guests of honor, Rev. G. C. Whiter, Mr. Thos. Kinney, Judge McLean and Mr. J. E. Peterson was read by Mr. Wright, giving three or four hours very interesting history during the depression he had ever encouraged the rector, Mr. Whiter answered for Mr. Wright. He said he would now be in church of the "Resurrection" as he was going to be Master would be treasurer of the church wardens.

Mr. A. E. Strickland then came forward and read the following address to Mr. and Mrs. Wright, while Mr. Colin Carter made the presentations.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Wright:

We, the parishioners of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, meet this evening with great regret at your forthcoming departure from our midst. During the twelve years you have been with us you won the respect and esteem of the community and people with whom you connected with the church.

During your time, Mr. Wright, as a parishioner, you served several terms as church warden, which position you filled during the time to the satisfaction of all. Realizing your worth your were elected to the vestry, a member of the vestry committee and parish auditor, a representative of the Vestry Council, you were a member of the Finance committee and for a number of years you were a member of the choir, and last year you were the leader of the male quartette.

Particularly are we grateful for your valuable work as treasurer to our church organization, which over a period of some twelve years. To perform the duties of that office, a great deal of your time was demanded and you gave it willingly and cheerfully. Your financial wisdom, in entrusting the church's financial affairs to you, fell that they were in exellent and capable hands. Every debt connected with these finances received your undivided attention. With you as treasurer, the finances of the church were considerably lessened. In addition to all this you found time as one of the Pew Rentals, and further when they made "Songs of Songs" together. when they were asked to take charge of the Restoration Fund.

Mrs. Wright, at the same time, in paying you this tribute, we are not unmindful of the work performed by Mrs. Wright, did in the Parish. For many years she has also rendered valuable assistant as the organ and acted as secretary-treasurer of the Church Aid. Your duties also connected with other organizations in the parish and your consistent and faithful presence will be much missed, as will you as a friend. We trust you now tender to you both our grateful thanks.

As representatives of the parishioners, we kindly ask you Mr. Wright, to accept this purse as a token of our esteem in which you are held and when this is spent we hope you may each of you be able to lay down life's torch being able to say "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

A dainty lunch was served by the ladies of the congregation, during which with the National Anthem and three rousing cheers for the pastor, his wife and family.

"The Great Defender"

Matheson Lang, Canadian Actor, Has Gripping Role in English Drama

Seldom has Matheson Lang, the Canadian-born actor, been seen to better advantage than in the role of the befriending King's Counsel, Sir Douglas Rolls, that he is delighting his many admirers with "The Great Defender", now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

His portrayal of the lawyer, who defends the husband of the woman he has secretly in love with, brings forth all the histrionic ability with which he is so richly endowed and which has made him such a great favorite on the stage and screen.

Besides providing Matheson Lang with such a virile and gripping role, "The Great Defender" gives the public an opportunity to view the interior of famed Old Bailey Court in London and the machinations of the conduct of a court room trial wherein a man is being tried for murder.

Of more than passing interest to Canadian movie fans is the fact that a Toronto-born girl enacts the leading role in "The Great Defender" opposite Montreal-born Lang. Her name, Margaret Bannerman has long been identified with the stage and screen of England and America and Australia.

An excellent program of short subjects supplements the feature. They include a two reel miniature musical comedy, entitled "Hear Ye Hear Ye"; a thrilling and exciting short wherein are shown motorcycle races and stunts; a travelogue that depicts the beauties of the Grand Canyon, and a solution of a criminal mystery comedy drama bill.

Starting Wednesday, and showing for one day only is the latest gay and rib-tickling farce, "Sing and Like It" in which will be seen the screen's funniest woman, Zasu Pitts, as a manicurist. The very thought of that droll personality attempting such a role is enough to convulse one with laughter. In this screamingly funny farce, Zasu is supported by other laugh-provokers, including that able comedian Edward Everett Horton, Ned Sparks and Pert Kelton.

Other interesting reels will be shown that will round out an excellent two hour program for that day.

"Murder on a Honeymoon"

Mystery, Adventure, Hilarious Comedy in Thriller "Murder on a Honeymoon"

Baffling mystery spiced with hilarious comedy and highlighted with adventure and the glow of romance, is presented in RKO Radio's "Murder on a Honeymoon", follow up picture to "The Penguin Pool Murder" and "Murder on the Blackboard", fascinating mystery-adventure stories, and all written by Stuart Palmer.

Carrying the same delightful characterizations that brought them high acclaim in the previous pictures, Edna May Oliver, character comedienne par excellence, and James Gleason, famous for his wise-cracking roles, are seen again as the school-teacher-sleuth and the police inspector, respectively.

The two principal roles are supported by a cast of outstanding favorites including Chick Chandler, Spencer Charters, Sleep'n'Eat, Antrim Short, charming Lois Lane, Morgan Wallace, DeWitt Jennings, George Meeker, Leo Carroll and Ed Gargan.

The mystery deals with a murder committed aboard an air liner between Los Angeles and Catalina Island, and all the scenes take place on the Magic Isle. The lovely grounds of the St. Catharine Hotel, the yacht basin, Casino and even the famous Catalina Bird Farm are featured in the background for many of the sequences.

Baffling clues point the finger of suspicion at each of the plane's passengers and pilots in turn, and it is not until the final thrilling scenes that the guilty party is revealed in a satisfactory and surprise finish.

"The Loves of a Dictator"

"Loves of a Dictator" brings Clive Brook and Madeleine Carroll to the Belle theatre today in the most powerful and colorful roles in their brilliant careers. Clive Brook plays the role of a man who wasn't even a gentleman...yet he became the power behind the throne...a dictator. Miss Carroll, in love with the Queen's lover and, at last, mistress herself, is superb.

Madeleine Carroll is the lovely Princess who became a Queen by marriage to a King twenty four hours after she had seen him. The command marriage was not a success. The Queen withdrew in seclusion...until Dr. Straumer cleverly broke through her barricade and provided not only the court, but the whole kingdom, a great deal to talk about.

"The Loves of a Dictator" commences daily at 3.45 and 8.30 p.m. "Murder on a Honeymoon" starts at 2.40 and 9.50 p.m. Edwin C. Hill, talking reporter will introduce the latest News Flashes in his own inimitable style. Detailing important events garnered the world over.

"Public Hero Number 1"

Thrills of the work of the government secret service agents, pitted against organized crime, to whom a misstep or recognition means death, form the background of "Public Hero Number 1," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's amazing and gripping document of the war of the Department of Justice on gangland, coming to the Belle Thursday. Chester Morris, Lionel Barrymore, Jean Arthur, Lewis Stone, are featured in this amazing picture.

CLYDE BEATTY AND TWO OF HIS PETS

If ever you have wondered how a man has the nerve to step into a cage, completely filled with a score of the most treacherous and ferocious, man-eating beasts and breathe ...your chance to see it is coming.

For Clyde Beatty, the greatest and most fearless wild animal trainer ever known, will arrive in person, with his newly recruited and congress of jungle beasts, with the Great Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty Circus, for performances at 2 and 8 p.m. in Belleville, Tuesday, July 2.

His act, conceded the most breathtaking and thrilling ever offered the public, will be smacked before your eyes.

Armed only with a whip and a chair as a protection against the snarling creatures, he will put the lions through their paces in the most ferocious, all-steel arena, under new big-top at each performance. Clyde Beatty will demonstrate his uncanny power over the "big cats" as he fearlessly disarms the snarling clawing beasts into submission, and perform at his command.

Circus day will be inaugurated by an immense street parade to be seen on the downtown streets at 11 a.m., preceding the initial performance of this the world's newest big show.

One thousand men, women and horses will be seen in the picturesque cavalcade. Trumpeting bands, rumbling wagons burnished with pure gold numbering 100 will be

DAY BY DAY

Providing the weatherman sees fit to show us the sun's rays for a few moments today, the Stewart-Ivey moguls will meet up with Joe Daly's up-and-coming Kingston Penies this evening at the local ball yard. Now the Penies are in full stride and have elevated their standing from the cellar to the threatening position of second place and can hop into full command with a victory over the Radios this evening. Doubtlessly Coach Mills will call in Jack Williams to endeavour taming the Penies while being equally as anxious to win this important tussle, Coach Daly will be forced to call upon his ace hurler "Dad" Clancy, to assume the pitching duties of the Penies. Now that the ties of the Penies league leaders they naturally have all the other clubs in the league betting against them and tonight's twilight tilt is bound to be a "wow" as the Penies have coveted no less than the leadership previous wee on the league standings. The Radios have battled hard to get back into first place and will not relinquish that position without a struggle, that is if it does not rain some more.

Manager Fanning of the local information squad in the Bay of Quinte League, received word last week that Lorne H. Wray had learned that Wilfred Pelegrin, his newly acquired shortstop from Campbellford, had sustained from an injured knee and would not be available for duty versus Harry Doyle's Picton intermediates on Wednesday afternoon at the Fair Grounds. Rod Wilkins is back in the local camp, after an absence of a few days as the result of an injured finger, and worked out last night. Manager Manning of the Fall Loft, who stopped the Picklettes aplenty some time ago, and also a speed ball artist named Jolly from Shannonville to lose in against either Bloomer or of Big Island Church. Whether Bishop can stem the tide of local hits or not is quite problematical, as the ex-Napanee post-sitter has not fared any too well since he doffed off Ernie Gilbert's charges on opening day. The feature of the game will be the fact that the R.A.F. intermediates can move into second place in the league standings and then watch the far fly. The going in the Bay of Quinte league is getting tougher as the days progress and as scrappy, fast brand of baseball is being dished up.

"Local lads make good." We hear that six local pleasing diamond stars from this city have been signed as free agents(?) "Imported" are a couple with the Melrose baseball club (?) North Hastings League. The local ballsters to migrate to the "pitcher" country are Bill Kerr, pretty tough, when the Forboro nine tied into them and shut the Melrose nine down cold, and a real lesson in the art of playing baseball. Prior to leaving Jimmie Thomas, Leo Culhane, Johnnie Bawden, Cy Bateman, Bill Kerr and Jimmie Semark journeyed to Melrose and were playing when the homesters beat Leslie, Frankford club and then the fat was in the fire. All of the above lessal of the North Hastings League are up in arms against the Melrose "imports" and a merry time is being had by all. While all of this is going on the local exponents of baseball are enjoying a summer of baseball.

Today's question—A fan asks if infield fly ball has to be caught to retire batter.

With less than two out and men on first and second, or first, second and third, batter is automatically out if he hits an infield fly. Ball does not have to be caught.

According to Charlie Tebworth of the local Senior Softball loop, many of the league's postponed games will be played this week besides the regular scheduled game in the loop. For instance there are in Belleville this evening, while the St. Paul's A. C. are playing a postponed game with the Young Canada Club. On Wednesday Tweed meet the Young Canadas, who are playing all of their future home games at the old Albert College Athletic Field. Thursday another postponed game of Salmon vs. Young Canada will be played while a regular scheduled double header is on for Friday. These games, weather permitting will help to catch up with the host of postponements that have been necessary in the Senior Softball loop. Incidentally local softball fans may be treated to a double header of softball on the holiday, as the Oakwoods, of the St. Clair Senior League in Toronto, are endeavoring to close a deal with the Aajmasa, leaders in our own local loop, for an afternoon and evening game on Dominion Day. Lawn bowling, pouch racing, and the screw putting event annually sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. are also on the sports program for the first of July in Belleville.

Last evening must have been spotlight in the local senior softball league as two unexpected reverses occurred when the two lowest teams in the league standings upset the top-notchers on their no-called ears. First and foremost the St. Pauls A. C. gave the Aajmasa a 18 to 2 trouncing at Central Park, while ever at Sportsmen's Park the saltes socialed a 4 to 2 loss at the hands of the hoss leaders. Last night's two reverses make matters more interesting in the tough senior softball circles. Incidentally the loss sustained by the Aajmasa was their second in nine starts, while the Red Nerveine victory was their second in eight times facing the barrier. Evidentally the outcome in this loop is far from decided, as yet.

The Kiwanis Club wrestling committee made an unexpected announcement today, when they stated they had Gregory Michaels, who made a decided hit locally last week, Sino Sinibre, the herculean youth who stole their show the week prior, Walter Parnell and Jack Armstrong, who appeared here as the Masked Marvel, all signed for main bouts on Friday night while the preliminary bout brings together Jack Pearl and Dan Petroff. What a card!

In reference to Saturday's game in the Motor City, the Oshawa sport scribe has the following comment:

"To get the shutout, Art Calhoun of the Bellefield Flyers simply tied the Oshawa ballers, hand and foot, for the entire nine innings, pitched to only 29 batters and allowed only one free trip to first base and four hits, all singles. Except for one inning when Oshawa had three on bases the Belleville moundsman was master of the situation. He completely coasted through to victory, making the Oshawa lineup look pitifully weak at times."

CARDS HELPED BY 5 RUN RALLY

Jimmie Mills and His Squad Have Tough Road to Victory

The Cardinals from the East Hill won their second consecutive game in the local juvenile baseball league when they defeated the Athletics and the "Tigers" from the west hill by the score of 13 to 8. The locals came in the seventh inning put the "Cards" on even terms but they were forced to again go into the behind and score two runs in the eighth inning. The game was played on the Fair Grounds diamond. Jimmie Mills sent Bill Kerr and Ted Hastings to the mound to use two pitchers to stop the slugging Tigers, as Pepper and Jack Mills shared the hurling duties of the "paperweight" league leaders. Bill Culhane and Bond worked for the losers. Behind the leadership of Manager Jimmie Mills Kerr and Grass played stellar ball, while O'Connor starred for a player turning in his first performance with the league leaders. Extra base hits were by Jimmie Mills, Kerr, Pepper, McGuire, Balzy and Hastings.

The next game in this juvenile league will be played at the 6.30 o'clock mile grounds on Friday evening when the Cardinals and the St. Michael's team clash.

SOMERVILLE AGAIN WINS CANADIAN AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP

C. Ross "Sandy" Somerville of the London Hunt Club captured the Canadian amateur championship for the fifth time in his career, over the Ancaster golf course at Hamilton, Ont. He defeated Gordon Taylor, Jr., of Toronto 7 and 6 with a fine exhibition of consistent golf. The loser, after a week of hard tournament play, was erratic in the final rounds. Above left shows Somerville holing a short putt on the fifteenth green during the finals. Left shows Gordon Taylor blasting his way out of a sand trap in his play. Courageous fight to keep even with the Londoner. Below closing scenes of the match as Sandy drives another putt down to the cup, while an interested gallery watches the play.

LONDON LUNCH ON TOP RUNG

Defeat Simpsons 10-8 And Lead Mercantile Loop

In a free hitting softball game played at their Yeomans street ground the London lunch nines advanced to the leadership of the local Mercantile softball loop, when they out-hit and out-scored the contending Simpson's aggregation by the score of 10 to 8. A Circuit clout by Al Faulkner, in the third, inning accounted for three runs, put Manager Kikes' squad in the lead, which they held grimly onto until the final put out. Two fast double plays supplemented the London Lunch nine terminated rallies by Simpsons.

Hughes hurled the entire game for the "sandwich makers" while Dwyer was forced to relinquish the mound in favour of Clarke for the Simpson outfit, as the winners garnered eight of their ten runs from the deliveries of Dracup. Clarke hurled good ball to stop the Kikes-managed squad, after the damage had been done. Winkerman was the big hitter of the day with four bingles to his credit while Rowbotham had three.

The line-ups — London Lunch — Kikes, Carter, Semark, Cole, Wickerson, Cronkite, Hall, Faulkner and Hughes. Simpson's—Amo, Phillips, O'Neill, Clarke, Moon, Rowbotham, Mummings, Lloyd, Reynolds, White and Dracup.

'Brown Bomber' Hot Favorite Over Camera

(By Alan Gould)

(Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, June 25—(AP)—No matter what happens tonight when Joe Louis, "Brown Bomber" from Detroit, trains his short-range guns on Primo Carnera at the Yankee Stadium, their box office appeal seems one of the biggest financial successes since Gugliemo Marconi came from overseas with the wireless.

Ringside ticket reports, coupled with extraordinary interest aroused throughout Canada and the United States by the most important and mixed match in more than a decade of prizefight activity, boomed the ticket sales.

It appeared certain more than 50,000 cash customers from all over the continent would contribute nearly $400,000 to see just how long it will take the youthful negro to bring down the 265-pound Italian giant.

Such a turnout would dwarf the relatively small crowd, less than 30,000 paid, which saw James J. Braddock take the heavyweight title from Max Baer two weeks ago. It would see a new "high" for a non-championship match since Jack Dempsey flattened Jack Sharkey in the same arena in 1927.

Odds Switch to Louis

The odds appeared likely to be at least 2 to 1 in favor of Louis, when the clans gather at the ringside. There was little Carnera money in sight. Broadway shared the general belief of finite experts and followers-at-large the huge Italian is made to order for the deadly-punching negro.

Reports Carnera would scale close to 265, considerably over his best fighting weight, did not lend any encouragement to his followers. Despite his advantages in size, reach and experience, Primo's chances of avoiding Louis's knockout punch were not considered bright.

The belief in well-informed fistic circles was that Carnera, still shell-shocked from the terrific beating he took from Max Baer last summer, would be likely to last a half dozen rounds.

No Broadcast

Racial rivalry and the fact the fight occurs at a time when the governments of Italy and Abyssinia are in a dispute has prompted promoters and police to co-operate in taking unusual precautions against the possibility of an outbreak among spectators.

Authorities minimized the prospect of any disturbance, but more than 1,000 uniformed men were due for assignment to the stadium.

Both principals were kept under continual guard as a result of unsubstantiated rumors that attempts would be made to "approach" one camp or the other. The commotion was reminiscent of the old days when no big heavyweight fight was complete without alleged underworld activities, threatened arrests or attempts to put something in somebody's tea.

The fighters were expected to report to the Commission to weigh in not later than one o'clock E.S.D.T. The preliminaries start at 8 p.m., and the main bout is slated for not later than 10 p.m. S.D.T. There will be no broadcast.

VITO TUMULIS TAMES INDIANS FOR 7TH WIN

Yankee Hurler Has Only One Defeat Marked Against Record

TIGERS WIN

Chicago Cubs Reduce Lead of Giants By Victory

By ANDY CLARKE

Associated Press Sports Writer

Vito Tumulis, unobtrusive fellow who has rocketed to the fore of the Yankee staff as high-powered pitching staff, has tamed the wooly Indians again.

He has a peculiar ability to throw balls, where there are no Cleveland tomahawks and yesterday he hung a third Cleveland scalp to his belt and ran his season record up to seven wins with only one defeat. The Indians got but one run while the Yankees, stretching their lead in the American League to four games, got four.

Tumulis not many years ago was throwing them up for a Bronx high school. In the ninth inning of yesterday's game he found himself in difficulty after a scratch hit and a clean single. The event reached three and two on Wineapple and then Tumulis began tossing strikes. Wineapple hit several fouls before he whiffed completely on a fast, dipping ball.

Earl Whitehill, the former Tiger pitcher now wearing the livery of the Washington Nats, was the mainstay of the Tigers in their 14 innings at Detroit. The score was 5-3. With two men aboard Auker, who had been sent in as a relief pitcher for Whitehill, made a fly that permitted White to score from third.

A 10th inning double off the bat of Burnett enabled St. Louis Browns to defeat Philadelphia 2-1 and Zeke Bonura's homer with two on was instrumental in the defeat of Boston by Chicago White Sox 6-4, in other American League games.

National League

In the National League, Chicago Cubs were forced to go 10 innings to defeat the league-leading New York Giants 10-9. It was a batsman's holiday, with a total of 30 hits ringing off the bludgeons.

Paul Dean did not last long enough to relire a batter in the first inning of the Cards-Brooklyn game which the Cards won 8-6 behind the six-hit pitching of Jesse Haines. Dean retired without a man getting to second.

Cincinnati defeated the Phillies 6-4 for their third straight triumph as the Reds lacing four Phillies hurlers for 17 hits and driving Curt Davis from the box in the sixth with a two run rally that clinched the game.

EAST HILL TEAM SCORE 14-8 WIN

The East Hill nine advanced into undisputed leadership of the local Kiwanis Junior Baseball League, when they handed the College Hill squad their second consecutive defeat by the score of 14 to 8 at the College Field last night. Jack Kidd's "East Hillers" two pitchers, Kelleher and McCabe proved slightly too good for the home diamond nine and was practically masters of the pastime throughout, although Fraser, a relief hurler for the College Hill nine fared fairly well, while pitching the final three innings, after the cause had been lost.

McCabe, an elongated lefthander, was the best of four hurlers trotted out as he struck out nine College Hill batters in the three frames, he laboured on the hilltop, the losers getting two runs on one hit, two walks and an error, intermingled with slow fielding. Eight runs in the fourth inning clinched the game for the East Hill aggregation.

Manager Jack Kidd, besides handling the slants of Kelleher and McCabe, is a stellar ball performer himself to a single and a trifle to be his hitter of the night, as McCabe banged out two singles and a double for the winners. Connors and Mansfield, with two singles each, were the best offensively for the College Hill nine. Fraser, a slight youth in stature tossing them from the port side, looked good in a relief hurler for the losers. The next scheduled game in this junior baseball loop is between the City Club "Brewers" and the West Hill nine.

The line-ups:

East Hill—Youth, ss; Carr, 3b; Kidd, c; McCabe p and 2b; McPherran 1b; Louis cf; Barriage lf; Weeks rf; Keller p and rf.

College Hill—McQuade, Morgan Connors, Knots, Ronsky, Mansfield, Warren, Fraser, Townsend, Tupp, Graham and Flagler.

Score by innings:
East Hill ..... 200 831 0—14
College Hill ..... 200 201 3—8

Umpires—Clapper, plate; Orpham, bases.

GOLF

Mulrfield, Scotland June 25—(AP)—Henry Cotton shot a sub-par 70 on Carnoustie links today to gain a qualify easily with a 36-hole total of 149 for his title defence in the British Open golf championship. The 72-hole championship pull starts tomorrow at Mulrfield.

Cotton's 141—the total with which he won last year—put him in the lead for the shot-making honors of the qualifying round. He was one of the early finishers and temporarily, at least, held a four-stroke margin over A. A. Whitcombe, who produced a second round 74 for a total of 145.

Joe Kirkwood, Australian trick shot artist from Chicago, made the cut with a 76 to spare and was five shots back of the front-running Cotton. Kirkwood played Cotton today and used 74 strokes for an aggregate of 146.

Joe Esar, capricious campaigner from Fort Pitt, shot Mulrfield, in 75 to qualify comfortably with 148. Tall Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., a hot favorite among the invaders, stuck a 76 to his first round of 77 for a total of 151 and was free of the dangerline believed to be something around 159.

MacDonald Smith of Glen Dale, Calif. who set the pace yesterday with a blistering first round 71 was among the late starters today.

TORONTO LEAFS TAKE MONTREAL

(By Associated Press)

The progress of Alabama Pitts still seems to be the highlight of the International League.

In his first night game last night which Albany won from Newark 5-3, Alabama Played errorless ball a lifidl but failed to connect with a safe blow in four trips to the plate. At that, however, he managed to get a crack at the ball and he said after the game he believed he would come along, all right after he got accustomed to being the centre of all eyes.

Pitts successfully handled the four flies that came his way in centre field. He grounded out in the first inning, popped up to the infield in the third and fifth innings and grounded to Mallon in the seventh.

The Senators bunched hits in the fifth and eight innings off Lacoss and Hollingsworth to score all of their runs. It was 3-3 in the eighth, when hostetler and Hayes singled and then were driven home on a hit by Prather.

Rochester Red Wings handed Buffalo Bisons a double setback at Buffalo in night games, 6-4 and 8-3. The first game was abbreviated to seven innings. Ward and Kaufmann pitched the ball for the victors while their mates blasted five Bison twirlers for 26 safe blows. Kaufmann, pitching in the night cap, held the Bisons scoreless until the ninth inning when Siebert whisled out a homer.

In other night games, Toronto beat Montreal 4-3 and Syracuse took the measure of Baltimore 9-5.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS, CLOSE

Toronto, June 25 (CP)—A little price cutting in the genuine field crossed Montreal appeared important enough to warrant another day of selling the set of share groups which declined substantial fractions on the Toronto industrial share market. Brokers could think of no other explanation for the heavy offerings in Hollinger, Noranda, Preferred, Distillers Seagrams and Hiram Walker, traded in fair volume but trade was slow over the best of the board and losses predominated over gains at the close.

The industrial section was "easy" from the standard and the early afternoon found losses fairly general, but limited mainly to small fractions. Weakness in the oils persisted, recessions ranging up to a half point and the Senior group were a bit heavy in small turnover.

A generally soft tone on the New York gave other interlisted leaders an excuse to mark lower. Ford "A" sold 3c or off ⅝ and International Nickel and O.F.R. lost about ¼ point.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, June 25—(CP)— The stock market found a back-tracking excuse today and leading issues reversed their recent trend, closing fractionally lower. Rails, a group of influence was maintained by shares of Union International Trust and Canadian Pacific. On the curb, Hiram Walker ruled a point lower. Government bonds were virtually even, Canadian funds were unchanged at 98 2-32 cents.

Share losses ranged from fractions to 2 or more points but there were exceptions. Ludlum Steel, American Tobacco "B", Midland Steel, Products, Electric Auto-Lite, Remington Arms, Reynolds Register, Celanese, Allied Chemical and Radio Preferred "A" were among those able to record gains. Most of the rails and utilities were about unchanged to slightly lower.

Principal declines were registered by Air Reduction, Commercial Solvents, U. S. Smelting, Cerro de Pasco and Public Service of New Jersey. Such stocks as U.S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric, Consolidated Oil, American Can, Atlantic Pacific and Standard Oil of New Jersey were mixed.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, June 25—(CP)—Falling prices ruled in today's stock market. The reaction followed overnight news the president would insist on congress enacting his third New Deal tax program at the present session.

After a sharp initial dip, some support appeared for scattered equities. Trading favored autos, however, and selling was resumed in the afternoon.

Losses of 1 to around 3 points were suffered by American Can, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Public Service, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel and Bethlehem. Also in the list were Texas Corp., Montgomery Ward and Johns-Manville. The late rise was heavy. Transfers approximated 1,150,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, June 25 (CP)—Dull trading but with a general tone of firmness was the theme from hour to hour and marked today's session of the Toronto mining market. Volume for the day session was a shading of prices in all groups but losses in no instances were heavy. Gains in scattered portions except in Noranda which continued to display the upward proclivities of late. Noranda was the most attractive thing at 2 or 3¼ per point higher, closing at the top of its tax exemption features.

Despite the recent rise in New York, speculation does not appear to have blossomed forth in the curb market. Junge has yet to see a 2,000,000 share day and May had one such day before it crept up and action set in. New York brokers' offices are practically empty now, well under the May 1st total, supporting the reports of large outright buying. The pressure of funds remains unsatisfied and important bank lending is to make a definite start.

THIEVES MADE MISTAKE

Toronto, June 25—(CP)— Thieves who stole a creamery truck and abandoned it after taking a crate of butter, were sorry today they did not search the truck more thoroughly. There was $224 under the front seat, locked there by the driver after he had made collections. When the truck was found today the money was safe.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Montreal, June 25.

As forecast in these bulletins last week, Hollinger has resumed the payment of its monthly five cent extra to be paid on July 15 being the first payment since February. This is the third five-cent bonus to be paid by Hollinger in 1935. It is expected that four more will be paid this year making total distributions for the year of $1.40 per share. Gross profits selling at $15.50 the stock would give a yield of 6.4 per cent with a $1.00 annual dividend. The yield on other senior gold stocks averages slightly higher at the yield obtainable on Hollinger.

Standard Statistics.

Present confusion, as we have advised in previous issues of the security prospect, affords no basis for belief that broader economic recovery will not emerge after a period of necessary readjustment. Nevertheless, with security prices at prevailing levels, stocks should be viewed primarily as a long range investment basis. Portfolios must be reviewed carefully, and cleared of unfavorably situated or excessively speculative issues. Emphasis should be placed upon income producing issues, with the fall maintenance of reserve power during the present protective periods of readjustment and probable market weakness.

With the exception of the oil stocks, the issue market is acting well, although activity is lacking. The floating supply of the leading investment issues has been reduced to a level where it is difficult for dealers to accumulate a large number of shares of any of a dozen securities.

A constitutional amendment in the United States to eliminate tax-exempt bonds undoubtedly would face considerable opposition, but if successful would be the most drastic and dividend-paying common stocks would be expected to increase substantially.

A stock market that has had for one of its main driving forces the pressure of funds seeking investment could be expected to embark upon a fairly dramatic upward course if investment money of the type that has been seeking tax-exemption were diverted from its traditional channels. A 4 or 5 per cent yield under circumstances somewhat similar to the more attractive than a 2 or 3¼ per cent yield stripped of its tax exemption features.

Despite the recent rise in New York, speculation does not appear to have blossomed forth in the curb market. Junge has yet to see a 2,000,000 share day and May had one such day before it crept up and action set in. New York brokers' offices are practically empty now, well under the May 1st total, supporting the reports of large outright buying. The pressure of funds remains unsatisfied and important bank lending is to make a definite start.

Ottawa Wheat Review

Ottawa, June 25—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has issued its review of the wheat situation, says, in part:

At the present time the world wheat situation is governed by two important factors, namely, the volume of old crop wheat which will be required by importing countries before July 31, along with conditions surrounding that movement and the development of the new crop in the Southern Hemisphere. As far as the distribution of last surpluses are concerned, the final stage has been reached and only small movements are to be recorded before an accounting for the seeral year 1934-35 can be made.

In Canada the present season has been in marked contrast to that of 1934. The month of May was cool and heavy rains were received throughout the west and especially throughout the drought area. Generous rains were received during the first two decades of June and the crop well distributed over the Prairie wheat belt. Seeding was late and crops in considerable areas, especially in the northern districts of Alberta, will face a greater than usual possibility of frost before maturity.

Domestic disappearance from August to May, inclusive, Canadian exports of wheat and wheat flour amounted to 146,287,662 bushels as compared with 150,553,888 bushels during the corresponding period of 1933-34. On June 14, 1935, stocks of Canadian wheat in store in Canada and the United States amounted to 199,207,863 bushels as compared with 196,926,581 bushels on the corresponding date a year ago. From August 1, 1934, to June 7, 1935, primary receipts amounted to 209,105,782 bushels as compared with 209,889,000 bushels during the same period in 1933-34. Receipts by provinces are as follows: Manitoba, 29,868,000 bushels; Saskatchewan, 92,182,260 bushels; Alberta, 87,219,000 bushels. During the month of May, the United Kingdom imported 6,365,477 bushels of Canadian wheat out of total imports of 19,831,941 bushels. The principal countries to which Canada exported wheat last month when 5,189,725 bushels were imported from the country. Imports from Australia amounted to 3,225,784 bushels. Prices have moved downward during the past month. On May 15, 1935, the cash closing price for No. 1 Northern wheat at Winnipeg was 86¼ cents per bushel. On June 15, 1935, the corresponding price was 80⅞ cents per bushel.

Gain of Eighty Millions By Chartered Banks

Ottawa, June 25.—Only market change in the statement of chartered banks issued this week to the Department of Finance as on May 31, last, was in current accounts which were down about $20,000,000 from the end of April, and about $30,000,000 greater than on the last day of May, 1934. Savings deposits were little changed in the month but were up nearly $80,000,000 as compared with May 31 last year.

Bank of Canada notes in the hands of the banks at May 31 last were about $13,000,000 less than on the same date a month earlier, while deposits with the Bank of Canada were up about $2,000,000.

Geneva Survey Shows World Trade Up 3 P.C.

Geneva, June 25.—World trade increased three per cent in 1934, says the review of World Trade for 1935 published today by the League of Nations. The figure compared with a 5 per cent increase in 1933, but was 77.5 per cent of the 1929 figure.

Toronto Produce Firm

Toronto, June 25.—Apart from a firmer tone in the butter, grade eggs, local produce prices held relatively steady yesterday. No. 1 Ontario butter solids held at 19 cents per pound, with trading moderately quiet. Creamery prices held at 18 cents for No. 1 grade.

Grade "A" large eggs were generally steady, but were somewhat somewhat on the light side. The paying price on "A" large eggs, candled returned, rose to 19 cents, and to the consumer, 24 cents per dozen; up one cent at 21 cents, with "A" large up by a shade at 24 cents.

Camera's Efforts To Awe Louis Appear Wasted

New York, June 25 (AP)—Primo Carnera will have an advantage of 64½ pounds over Joe Louis, Detroit negro in their 12-round heavyweight match tonight in the Yankee Stadium. The Italian giant, former titleholder, tipped the beam at 261¼, while the brown bomber weighed 196 on the official scales early this afternoon.

Dr. William H. Walker, official examiner, pronounced both men "in first-class condition. He commended Carnera apparent improvement than the slow-moving nonentity of his last fight.

Carnera's efforts to over-awe his opponent, while they were stepping on and off the scales, apparently were wasted on Louis, who blinked at all the ceremony and made no comment. The big Italian, on the other hand, made many dramatic gestures. He scowled, grinned and finally kissed Louis' cheek, which was garnished with generous three days growth of beard.

Louis remained a strong favorite with betting commissioners at 5 to 4 some quarters. Broadway reported little wagering actively, however. The fight will not be broadcast.

BOAT TONNAGE IS INCREASED

Considerably Ahead of Amount For Last Year

Indications that the present season will eclipse previous years for amount of tonnage handled by boat in the Lock port was given today by Harbormaster Robt Goody. So far this season, he stated, the record freight handled in the local government dock is considerably ahead of the tonnage for the same date up to then had set a record for various years.

This recong is expected to be the greatest shipping season there is a considerable decrease in coal handled in the city. This year, one large local firm, reported to have been unable to secure a favorable rate for the unloading of that cargo is ordering all shipments made to Trenton where it is trucked down.

Grain, flour of beer, hundreds of bags of sugar hardware and paint were only part of the cargo unloaded at the local port early Monday morning from the Clen Allan following a week-end trip from Montreal. The boat returned to the Canal on Monday laden with cheese, canned goods and other freight.

HOUSING SCHEME PASSES IN HOUSE

No Voting Opposition But Liberals Shower Bill With Ridicule

OTTAWA, June 25 (CP)— Finishing touches to the Federal Government's Housing scheme are being applied in the House of Commons today. Although it passed second reading last night with only a single vote registered against it Conservative members showered it with ridicule

Discussion ended with Sir George Perley, Minister without Portfolio, declaring Liberals were taking the same attitude as they had towards all government legislation this session. He predicted that the Bill was now good and yet voted for it.

The chief authorities the Minister of Finance is to ask up is $10,000,000 on house building loans in conjunction with the provinces which lend 60 per cent of the cost.

Loan companies had already informed the Government they would co-operate in the scheme, said Sir George, in answer to Hon. W. D. Euler (Lib. Waterloo North), who predicted not a dollar would be lent because the companies would stand aloof.

Supplementary estimates appropriating $16,362,975 were introduced in the House on the last estimate of the session.

TRANSIENTS STIR GARDENERS' IRE

Retailers May Ask For Higher Transient Trader's Licence

Market gardeners and retailers of this city and district may band together to ask for higher licences for traders who enter the city from outside points, dispose of their produce at allegedly cut rate prices and then disappear again to repeat the process on the next trading day, it was tentatively announced by one leading producer following a meeting reported to have been held this week.

Cuthcrac competition which following an excess crop of any produce is usually in order than city is claimed by local gardeners to be ruinous to their business owing to the consequent slashing of prices which are offered.

Said one local representative "Although my garden is outside the city I have always paid my taxes in Belleville and am entitled to some consideration in this matter. These truck-traders, who come in here and retail up by the tonne, buy they take the money out of the city and disappear. We, on the contrary have to stay here winter and summer and grow various crops just in order to keep our customers. It isn't fair.

It is evile possible that retailers of the city will ask for a higher transient traders' license in order to encourage free trading from outside points.

DECORATE ALTARS AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Generosity of Mr. F. P. Carney Praised by Monsignor Nicholson

On Sunday at the various Masses at St. Michael's Church, Very Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, expressed appreciation of the benefaction of Mr. Frank Carney, whose generosity made possible the decoration of the altars of the church. He presented tribute to Mr. Carney as a respected member of the congregation who had freely given his services for many years. He said St. James' Cemetery and who was now in his seventy-fourth year. This gift is in memory of his brother and sister, Mr. Joseph Carney and Miss Anne Carney, deceased many months ago.

Artists of the Curio Petrozol Company, Montreal, have been engaged on the work for some weeks past. The decoration of the main altar is now completed and is a veritable masterpiece. The main altar measures thirty feet in height, and twelve feet wide. It is three tiers in depth. It was installed in the church by the late Father Twomey, pastor of St. Michael's at that time. It is made of oak, hand-carved in Germany and is of Gothic Gothic construction.

Outstanding is the statue, of heroic size, of St. Michael the Archangel, the patron of the church. Flanking the statue of St. Peter and St. Paul, all carved from wood. Inset in the panels of the altar reaur representing the sacrifice of Isaac and the offering of Melchisedech. Adoring angels kneel beside the golden tabernacle and the entire altar panelled in panels of gold with panels of blue and red. The side altars are in process of embellishment.

On entering the church the beauty of the altar, surmounted by a jewel, makes a profound and lasting impression on all who behold it.

WOMAN CARED FOR AT CITY HOSPITAL

Having been ejected from her room at the Belleville rooming facility woman, Mrs. Mary Wilson, age 72, was found in destitute circumstances in a vacant house on Bridge street Belleville by local police last night. The aged woman was in ill-health and ordered to be removed to the General Hospital by Dr. G. H. Cronk, local medical health officer. The sixty woman bag no visible means of sustenance promptly called upon to inform the police authorities of her unfortunate circumstances. Sickness in her previous abode of other members of the household was the reason given for her ejection from that place. Her future maintenance is in the hands of the city health department.

Daily Short Story

"FISHING"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Well, sir, we might start out today by saying that nobody is a born fisherman. We all have to learn that art. Of course, it comes natural to some, but others have to work pretty hard before they get the "knack."

But what I wanted to say was —it is just about this time of the year that the old fishing urge gets into the bones of the fishermen-about—this time that we dig out our tackle and vamish our rods. Of course, you person who don't fish wouldn't be expected to know that "yearning" feeling if you—but to the true fisherman—he knows.

Then again, there's the person who says he doesn't like fishing but shows a lively interest in the sport especially when there is a very pretty girl invited. And that brings us up to our story.

Jane Williams was as graceful as a salmon when it is leaping up over the falls. If you get what I mean. And pretty too. I didn't wonder why all the lads around those parts wanted to take her fishing. That girl could fish, too. Even her childhood she had level with the world. I couldn't figure out, though, why she always wanted me to go fish her brook. I asked her about it a couple of times. She just said, "Aw, didn't you know I'm sloopy". That, usually settled it for me. Of course I wanted her with me. I wasn't so much older than her—and well—but she never gave me a serious thought—I guess I had known her too long.

Fishing Partners

Jane always managed to come out fishing with me like clock work a week. No matter what dates she would make, she'd hold them down to come for our trips.

It was about this time that Carl Ryan came to town. He was one of those "city slickers," as they are called. He was handsome and a bit conceited, too much for his own good, I thought.

Of course, it was only natural that he should meet Jane. When he saw all the other fellows he would naturally have to "cut in." After he had been here a week or so the other fellows dropped Jane. Not because they wanted to but Carl seemed to take all of her time, Jane didn't mind, she was enough with Carl. Then something occurred that made me take a hand. Jane broke two of our weekly fishing dates.

Well, when she came around for the last of the week, I politely told her that I was going on alone. She turned away but not before I saw a tear in her eye. It was pride I guess that kept me from throwing my arm around her and comforting her. I guess love is like that. If we humans could bury our pride now and then we would be a lot happier.

As she turned to leave she asked, "Don't you want me to come along anymore?" I replied a little sarcastically, "Well, if your too busy doing other things next week come around."

The next day Jane and Carl came around to my house and (of all the nerve) borrowed my boat. Before I could even reply Jane says thanks, and takes Carl's hand, leading him to the landing. I thought it would throw a parting dart, so I says, "The tackle is in the boat you can use that, if you want it?" Jane's answer made me furious. "Thanks!" she says. "I had intended to use that too."

Determined Look

They were out to our "spot" for about two hours before they returned. I saw them from the window but didn't go out. As Jane passed me I saw a kind of determined look on her face I wondered.

On Monday morning I looked for Jane. I had decided that she would keep our dates. I waited half an hour over time then decided to go out by myself. As I started down toward the dock I saw Jane sitting in the boat. I quickened my pace, and I was glad to see her.

Her first words were "Hey, Bill, when are we getting married?" Well sir, you could have knocked me over with a feather. Before I could utter a word she continued. "You see Bill, I love Carl. But I know he was conceited and all that but I liked him. And now I love—like you too. I wanted to marry one of you but I had to be sure. You know, I think I'm sure that Carl or you, could take the hard knocks of life. Be a good sport. I know that one way to bring out the qualities in a man was to take him fishing. How a man fishes—if he can't be a good sport when fishing he can't be one in life. Well, you see, I took Carl fishing—and Bill—he's a rotten fisherman.

I put my arm around her and kissed her, saying, "Turn over that motor darling and I'll show you some real fishing."

The slave-owner's whip fell once upon the fair while captive and was raised to lash again, when Pal heard a commanding voice cry out sharply, "In Allah's name, strike not the woman in anger, brother!

"Remember—part of the gold you paid for her, was mine. Put down your whip!" The girl, not understanding, stood between the two brothers. A moment the older man hesitated, while the younger's hand gripped the knife at his belt.

Then, in a sullen mood, muttering, the older brother strode from the tent. Pat wondered if she would be any better off, now. Often during the desert journey she had seen this young man watching her.

Once even, he had brought the weary girl a gourd of cooling water. Now his tone was gentle as he spoke some words and signed her to follow. And Pat, having no alternative, followed her protector toward the most secluded section of the sleeping caravan.

PUMPER PURCHASE IS DISCUSSED

More Information Wanted

In opening the discussion, W. G. Springer stated, that the committee wished to have more information respecting the pumper and called upon Mr. Mayor George A. Reid to speak to the council. Mr. Reid stated that, prior to his address, that the committee were not present to dictate to the council nor to tell them what they should or should not do but that they would like to know, what would be done, to better the equipment in the event of a pumper not being purchased. "I think Your Worship, that you made a statement, that Belleville was the poorest equipped city for its size for fire protection in the Province and also, that you were opposed to the purchase of a pumper" said Mr. Reid. "We have got along fairly well without a pumper but the public would like to know if you are opposed to the purchase and if the department is not properly equipped, what you propose as a council to remedy the situation?"

Mayor Gives Answer

His Worship in answering the spokesman thanked him and the committee for the interest taken in civic affairs and that the ratepayers should be fully informed as to the action of the council in such matters. "I think you will remember four years ago Ex-Mayor Reid" said Mayor Tice, "that I opposed the purchase of a pumper at a cost of $15,000 when it was talked about and I am still opposed to paying that price. I told the electors in 1931, when I was your opponent, that I was against the lasting of conferences and that "economy" would be the watchword if elected. Since I have been elected to office the unemployment relief, there has not been a debenture issued and I for one will vote against the purchase of a pumper if purchased on a debenting basis."

Continuing His Worship said "In this condition in the month of August were quite serious with respect to water due to the algae which at Bridge and Front Streets, there sometimes were not over 25 pounds pressure in the mains. Since say there is a dead and all the hospital. Sure there is a dead end and it will always be a dead end unless the system is extended in some future year. As for the purchase of a pumper, it has never been mentioned in committee or council. I appointed a committee to consider the conditions, that existed in 1934 and that committee brought in one of the most concise reports on fire protection and the needs of this city in that respect, that has ever been tabled in this council and any sane man, knowing the conditions would have to agree with the report. This report was accepted and tenders were called but the council is not embarked in any way to purchase anything for fire protection for the city. If the Waterworks Department have the cash to pay for the pumper and they have, the acquisition of a pumper will materially assist the department in combatting fires." The price will be around $8,000.

Not Well Equipped

"When we had a volunteer brigade in this city our insurance rates were nearly as high as they are today", said His Worship. "Our brigade is not well equipped because some of the equipment was second hand, when we purchased it. As for the personnel of the brigade, they have always done their work in an intelligent and highly satisfactory manner from Chief Lynch down to the last member of the brigade. The filtration plant is doing all that was guaranteed but algae condition on the water has year brought on a situation, that must be dealt with and the acquisition of a pumper would alleviate a great part of the trouble."

Ex-Mayor W. H. Panter: "Can you use the same hydrants if a pumper is purchased?"

Alderman Hill: "There would have to be some work done. There are 57 different sizes of threads on systems in Ontario and the fact the land company gave the demonstration here the other day, that if we made a spanner, that would fit any hydrant from the machine."

Mayor Tice: "You must understand, gentlemen, that a pumper at 1,000 gallons capacity would cost in the neighborhood of $15,000 but a 600 gallon machine can be bought for around $8,000."

Alderman McCreary: "In answer to Ex-Mayor Panter I will say, there are some hydrants, that are quite low in the city and they should be equipped with a lengthier barrel."

Mr. Diamond: "I ask this question at the Ratepayers' meeting and I am asking it again, that due to clogging by the algae the volume is cut down. How is the pumper going to get water?"

Higher Standard

Alderman McCreary — "The acquisition of the filtration plant has produced a higher standard of water, and there is the same volume going through and the purchase of a pumper is not a cure all. The waterworks department was advised by the experts to put in a displacing filler bed but that is an expensive proposition. A reservoir to hold 750,000 gallons of water to be erected on the west hill was also mentioned, but that too is an expensive proposition. I can say, that had the Underwriters visited this city in August of last year and seen the condition that existed, the ratepayers would not be fighting for a lower rate of insurance but they would be fighting against a much higher one. The protection, that is absolutely needed has been too long delayed."

Ex-Mayor Reid: "I have a suggestion, that the municipalities about the city be charged a reasonable rate for the use of the pumper should same be purchased, but the speaker was informed, that Trenton, who owns a pumper, has a by-law, that any equipment excepting the pumper will be loaned. The pumper is not allowed to leave the city at any time for any purpose."

Ex-Mayor Panter: "I was always led to believe, that the acquisition of a pumper and the cost of changing the hydrants would cost this city about $25,000 and I do not think that the finances of the city will warrant that expenditure at this particular time. I can say that under the old system, there was always plenty of pressure and had that not been the case the Underwriters would have been to the council day and night to have the matter adjusted.

Mayor Tice: "I have sat as Mayor for four years and I have never had a complaint as regards the pressure. I have heard, that some citizens think because there is 90 pounds of pressure at the pump house, that should prevail all over the city but such is not the case. I think there should be a chart showing the pressure at different points in the city for the guidance of the residents."

Alderman Hill—"There have been many reports received from the Underwriters with respect to our protection in this city and last year leaders were called for a pumper and some were received but never opened or discussed. I believe the price quoted for a 1,000 gallon pumper was in the neighborhood of $10,000 but there never was any decision made." This ended the discussion and the council proceeded to the other business of the evening.

Time Extended

In order to facilitate matters after the business in committee was finished it was moved that the report of the committee be received but not adopted. The council then extended the time two hours from eleven o'clock and retired to the committee room to continue their work on the estimates. The committee of the whole over which Alderman Hale presided, passed a recommendation "that a lot on Cedar Street be sold to Mr. Phillips for $100.00 plus an amount of the 1935 taxes". The Mayor and City Treasurer were appointed delegates to the convention being held in Hamilton on Thursday with respect to municipal taxation. The City Solicitor was instructed to take action against the E. L. Ruddy Company in having the sign removed from the Belvidere Hotel. The W.O.A. was given a grant of $138.00 to pay for cutting funerals and nine graves. Aldermen Marshall, Wills, Donevan, and Bainbridge were appointed on a committee to consider the sale of St. Agnes' Manse. This committee will meet on Friday night at the City Hall. The council then adjourned.

ADVISE STRIKERS TO GO TO HOMES

Premier Bennett Asks Citizens to Co-operate With Government

OTTAWA, June 25.—(CP)—British Columbia relief camp strikers in Regina today were advised to cease going to a temporary camp near that city, returning to the camps in the Pacific Coast Province from whence they came, or moving to their homes.

In a statement to the House of Commons yesterday, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett indicated the alternatives which had been given the strikers. The Government would meet the challenge to organized society thrown down by the strike leaders, he declared. All right-thinking citizens should use their influence and power in cooperation with Government agencies to maintain law and order.

The march to Ottawa would be halted, the Prime Minister said, and added it had been organized by International groups with a view to overthrowing constituted authority in Canada. He expressed concern, for the younger men in the camps—men among the marchers, who, he said, had been led away by slogans and were being exploited. Men in the camps, he contended were provided with good shelter, food and clothing and their condition, so far as material comforts were concerned, excelled that of many other Canadians on farms or in cities and towns.

The statement of the Prime Minister evoked cheers and applause, not only from Government supporters but also from the Opposition side of the chamber.

ARSENIC IS USED TO TREAT CANCER

ITHACA, N.Y., June 25.—Professor E. P. Burton, head of the Department of Physics at the University of Toronto, reported to the 12th Colloid Chemistry Symposium at Cornell University Friday a metallic arsenic colloid treatment for cancer.

By intravenous injections has given encouraging results in the treatment of cancer.

The treatment was prepared at the suggestion of Dr. A. G. Hendrick, Toronto physician, Prof. Burton said.

Pure metallic arsenic was prepared in colloid form by mixing arsenic and water, using some gelatin as "binder" to prevent arsenic from precipitating, he said. Tiny particles are held suspended in the colloid form.

Prof. Burton's report cited two cases, one a girl, 17, who developed trouble in the lower third of her left femur in June, 1934, and the other of a woman, 38, who developed an internal growth which was diagnosed from biopsy by three pathologists, independently, as cancer.

In the first case amputation after biopsy was recommended. She was taken to Toronto where arsenic treatment was started October 20, 1934. X-ray test plates were taken on December 19, 1934, March 22, 1935, and May 22, 1935. All plates showed progressive reduction of tumor and regeneration of bone, Prof. Burton reported.

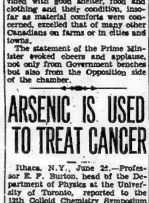
In the second case similar treatments were begun February 23, 1933. Relief, Prof. Burton said, was almost immediate. The patient, he reported, began sitting up on March 1, 1933, and has completely recovered.

RUSSIA INVITED TO NAVAL PARLEY

Germans Willing to Accept Any Naval Category

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 25.—(CP)—Britain has invited Russia to naval talks. It is suggested Russian naval experts shall come to London after visits by French and Italian delegates.



The Germans are willing, so they informed the British, to accept any category determined by international agreement. They are willing to abolish both capital ships and submarines if other powers are ready to do likewise.

The naval correspondent of the Daily Express said today the British and German experts had agreed on a limit of 35,000 tons of battleships, 8,000 tons of cruisers and 600-800 tons for submarines.

"The Germans," the Express added, "are prepared to give a pledge not to use submarines against merchant ships. In this they have been influenced by a desire not to antagonize British public opinion, which condemns submarine attacks on noncombatants."

The German program, the Express added, provided for gradual additions to the fleet until 1942. It said the British replacement program, which cannot begin until 1937 under the Washington Treaty, also would be spread over several years. The last of the present battleships would not go into service until 1943.

DISABLED VETERANS STRIKE IN WINNIPEG

Part of the 150 disabled Canadian war pensioners who have established a camp at the gate of Deer Lodge Military hospital, Winnipeg, as a peaceful protest against what they consider inadequate relief allowance. They claim they do not receive as much in the way of unemployment relief as civilians. The men rented two marque tents and pitched them outside the gates of the hospital. They had no cots or blankets and sat up all night the first night. This picture, taken at 1.30 a.m. shows them enjoying a snack of coffee and some sandwiches donated by an ex-service man in more fortunate circumstances. They have no money and no supplies, but they have been receiving donations and they plan to remain as long as the supplies hold out.

AUTOMATIC SHOCKER ELIMINATES HARVEST HANDS

For 12 years Peter Kisteluon of Wichita, Kas., has experimented with an automatic shocker and now he has pronounced it perfect. The 280-acre wheat field of Will Schweiger near Wichita, the automatic shocker does away with the harvest hands who normally would be required to shock bundles of wheat, tossed to the side of the binder. The shocker retrieves the bundles as they come from the binder, places them upright in a cylinder. When the conical-shaped cylinder is filled, the "bundle" are released and set on the ground in full shock.

STRIKE THREAT HANGS OVER WEST

Leader Says Relief Camps Will Be Swept Off Earth

Winnipeg, June 26 — (CP) — Threat of a nation-wide unemployed relief strike was voiced in the west today. For the second time in two weeks a march on Ottawa by 3,000 camp strikers was ordered with the assertion "relief camps will be swept off the earth" in exchange for "real scheme of work and wages."

Speeding westward Arthur Evans central figure in western Canada's relief camp revolts, was expected to arrive in Regina today to marshal a workers' battalion numbering 2,000. The fiery leader said the march would get underway Thursday in addressing a crowd of more than 2,000 in market square here. HON. DR. FAULKNER DECLARES CLINIC OPEN BY SEPT. 1ST

Dr. Brink Will Be in Charge of Establishment

X-RAY EQUIPMENT

Clinic at Belleville Will Serve Large Part of Province

Word was received early this afternoon by Dr. C. B. Brink, M.H.O. for Belleville, from Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health for Ontario, that there would be a tuberculosis Clinic established in Belleville.

The Clinic will be in charge of Dr. G. O. Brink of Toronto, who has had many year's experience with the treatment of tuberculosis. Assisting him will be an X-ray technician and a portable X-ray machine will be part of the equipment. Dr. Brink is a brother-in-law of Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne of Belleville.

Owing to the crowded condition of the Sanatoria in the province Dr. Faulkner has felt that some means should be used to detect the disease in its primary stages when treatment is much more likely to be successful. It is his intention to have there are between six and seven thousand patients being treated at the sanatoria with the result that practically every bed is occupied. The expense of providing this number mounts to a very considerable sum each year. The province advances seventy-five cents daily and the municipalities contribute one and a half dollars amounting altogether to two dollars and a quarter for each patient.

Visiting Terms, Villages

Belleville and Ottawa will be headquarters for the new clinics and the examining physician and the X-ray operator will visit the surrounding towns and villages and examine all cases referred to them. Patients wishing to be examined will have to get a written order from their physician which will entitle them to a free examination, including X-ray.

In cases where a mother or father has been admitted to the sanatorium and there are children in the family, the clinic can keep the children under observation for a definite period and thus reduce the chances of the disease being contracted by them without their knowledge and resulting expense of having to send them to the sanatorium should tuberculosis be evident.

"T.B." Rate Lowered

In the Niagara Peninsula where prevention has been in operation for fifteen years, the tuberculosis rate has been lowered from 114 per 1000 for the province to 42 per 1000 and shows what can be done by taking the precautions in time.

Another purpose of the Clinic will be to serve patients who are nearly ready to leave the hospital so that they may go home earlier and yet have the frequent examinations that are the necessary part of the final treatment. This will reduce the cost of maintenance of the sanatoria which at the present time is a very real burden on the province.

Dr. Faulkner said that the clinic would be in operation about March the first of September. It is expected that the facilities of the local hospital will be used to some extent and that a separate office will be maintained as well.

National Youth Project Established by Roosevelt To Serve 500,000 Youth

Efforts Will be Made to Find Employment For Young Men, Girls

TRAINING IN SCHOOL

Projects Designed to Meet needs of American Youth

Washington, June 26 (AP). President Roosevelt today established a "National Youth Administration" to meet what he called a "Great National Need" by offering unemployed youth of the United States "basic chance in school, their turn as apprentices and their opportunity for jobs."

The President set aside $50,000,000 to be used in providing work opportunities in private industry, in whatever high school and college training for those between 16 and 25; and in giving work relief to youths.

The new undertaking was put under the direction of Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Aubrey Williams, assistant to Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator.

Roosevelt in announcing the plan to aid an estimated 500,000 of young men and girls, said:

"I have determined that we shall undertake for the unemployed youth because we can ill afford to lose the skill and energy of our young people."

The average payment of $15 a month for youths on work relief and $20 to $24 a month which is given to those getting a high school and $25 a month to youths in college.

The objectives of the youth administration were outlined by Mr. Roosevelt as follows:

"1. Find employment in private industry for unemployed youths. Work designed to accomplish this should be set up in every State in order to work out with employers in the State the proper hours, ways and means of employing additional personnel from the unemployed youth.

"2. Train and retrain for industry, technical and professional service those who are unemployed.

"3. Provide for continuing attendance at high school or in college.

"4. Provide work relief upon projects designed to meet the needs of youth."

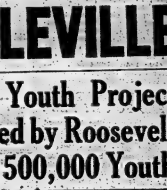
PRESS SKEPTICAL OF U-BOAT PLAN

London Press Openly Doubt's Province Effective War

London, June 26 (AP)—The press greeted with skepticism today Sir Hudson Eyres-Monsell's disclosure in the House of Commons that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder had agreed to restrict "unrestricted submarine warfare."

Open doubt as to how Germany's word would prove to be under the stress of war was voiced in Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express.

The newspaper pointed out editorially Germany possessed at the conclusion of 1932 not to use poison gas in wartime, "but April 25, 1935, it closed rolled into the German trenches oh through No Man's Land toward the French and Canadian trenches."



Without warning the Express said, "even were decided and agreed and their lungs burst with poison gas. If a gray ball of a u-boat slides out, of water and fires her deadly torpedo toward a defenseless merchantman in mid-ocean it won't do the skipper much good to murmur 'Excuse me, I'm sure I didn't see they would never do it again.'"

FAMOUS HUNTER DIES AT AGE 88; CAREER VARIED

Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny Had Life of Adventure

LEGS ONCE BROKEN

At Age of 73 Years He Challenged Cousin to Duel

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 26—(CP Cable) Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny, famous sportsman, died today at his home in Maldon, Essex. He was 88.

Throughout British sportsmen during the last 100 years had more adventures and hairbreadth escapes in all parts of the world. The description once applied to him of "a modern Casregan" seems inadequate.

In India he got into and out of the coils of a python. On another occasion he shot and wounded a tiger that had stopped him in the jungle. In East Africa he killed a charging rhinoceros by breaking its neck at a distance of two paces with a soft-nosed bullet. He was the only person who ever swam the narrow gut of the first Nile cataract.

Many Mishaps

His mishaps were many. He broke both legs in a balloon accident. On the hunting field he broke his arms three times and his ribs three times in steeplechasing. His fingers were broken several times in boxing. His life he regarded as a small price for gratifying his passion for hazardous adventure.

At the age of 73 he challenged his cousin, Lord Kenyon, to a duel with any weapon he liked. Lord Kenyon refused to take the matter seriously. Sir Claude celebrated his 84th birthday by taking a womerasault dive from a height of 20 feet into the water.

Wider Definition Asked By Stevens on Monopoly

Ottawa, June 26 (CP)—Former Trade and Commerce Minister H. H. Stevens today appeared before the Senate Banking and Commerce Committee and urged a wider definition be given the combines under the Combines Investigating Act.

"Modern methods of business, changes which have developed in business in recent years, make the old definition of combines obsolete and the desire of the Price Spreads Commission was to make it clear what a monopoly was in the light of modern development," he stated.

The former Minister wanted the Act passed by the Commons to specify the definition would cover a combination of two or more persons who "dominated" an industry rather than "controlled" an industry.

There might be a situation where two or three firms, by reason of their "position" in an industry, constituted a monopoly, he claimed.

"Take the great tobacco industry, where the Imperial Tobacco Company does 80 per cent of the tobacco business in this country, and I am not reflecting on the company, it is the dominating factor in the industry."

In the packing industry, Canada Packers carried on 50 per cent of the business and the Swift Company 30 per cent.

"There is no question these two companies exercise a dominating influence in the packing industry," he said.

Two or three firms he added, performed 70 per cent of business in the cotton industry. In the retail business two firms did 12 percent of the trade; and while this might not appear large on the face of it, "it is large when you recall there are 50,000 firms in the business."

Senator James Murdock (Lib. Ottawa) claimed the bill was one of "hush, hush, hush" and was to "silence outcries about abuses in industry."

Canada was controlled by monopolies, he said. The Eastern Sugar Refineries, he claimed, did not ship sugar west of Regina, leaving the rest of Western Canada to be supplied by a British Columbia refinery.

"I do not say this is not a bill in the interests of Canada," Senator Murdock said. "It may be as good an arrangement as can be made."

El Paso, Tex., June 26.—(AP)— A boy was killed and three workers were injured today by a huge gayser-like funnel of rock and earth projected by a premature explosion of dynamite at a cement quarry here.

LITTLE CHILD SOON RETURNED TO PARENTS

Lost in the big city, where she was a complete stranger, little Joan Empey, aged 5 years of Edgerton, who was visiting relatives in Campbellford street, caused her friends considerable worry yesterday afternoon at 5 p.m. today when she disappeared. Apparently little Joan set out to explore the wonders of the large city alone and became confused in her directions.

Later she was found by Miss Margaret Hanna, Dundas street, completely lost and unable to relate even as much as her own name or address. Miss Hudgins escorted the little tot to the police station, where by the aid of the frantic relatives had reported the disappearance of little Joan, Constable Fred Izard supplied the little lass with a slice of cake, kindly persuading her to get in the police car and returned her to her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hall, 40 Catherine street, where she is visiting, a happy reunion

FATHER AND SON

Fatal Wounding

Constable McGregor was killed on the morning of MAY 7, 1934 when he with other Mounted Police officers entered the MacTemple home on Queen Street to arrest the young MacTemple on a year-old bicycle theft charge. McGregor was wounded fatally in the groin with Frank MacTemple. Their appeal to Ontario Court of Appeal was dismissed at the end of May.

Father and son are held last dawn without any outward display of emotion.

Sheriff Cameron reported the two men were quite composed. They slept well and had a good breakfast.

Executions Before Dawn

No other information has been given out by Sheriff Cameron who announced following instructions from the Attorney General's department, representatives of the press are to be excluded from the hangings and only the executioner and guards will be permitted to witness the executions.

All reports of what transpires will be given out by the sheriff. The hangings will take place some time after the midnight hour. "It will be some time between midnight and daybreak—that is all I know," the sheriff said.

Double Hanging

The scaffold, a double one to permit both men to be hanged simultaneously, has been erected in the high walled enclosed women's yard at the south end of the jail building. It was there that the last double execution—the hanging of Hendershott and Wellon—took place 40 years ago, almost to the day.

By a strange coincidence, the only executions in the history of Elgin County have been double hangings.

He told of the various funds that were formed and not discussed. After his talk many of the Rotarians asked questions regarding Mr. Sampson questions on their list.

A vote of thanks was tendered by Rotarian Geores Cobley and George Sheridan was extended the guest speaker on behalf of the club by Jesse Gerow. Commemorate 75th Anniversary Of Building of St. John's Church

Stirling Congregation Hears Outstanding Preachers

Stirling (Special)—On Sunday, June 23rd, the congregation of St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, continued the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the building of the church when they were honored by the presence of two outstanding preachers of the Canadian church, special speakers for the occasion and the choir was augmented with assisting artists from the other church of the parish in Frankford. Large congregations attended both services, and in the evening the church was filled to capacity with visitors from other churches as well as many from other religious denominations of the village. Careful planning committees which have worked vigorously for several weeks in preparation for this unique event witnessed with real satisfaction the practical fruits of their labours in the crowded services on Sunday.

In the morning service which was marked with the celebrating of Holy Communion and the use by of the church for the first time of several beautiful gifts by members of the congregation, Ven. J.H.H. Coleman, M.A., Archdeacon of Kingston, and of former rector of the parish) delivered a fine message. He recalled that the thirty-five years ago next Sunday he ministered to the people of this parish, for which the church of St. John's parish held a large place in his heart even though his pastorate perhaps it was his first parish. In his address he spoke of Samuel Johnson, the first rector of the monument to victory through faith in God. Seventy-five years ago men took stone and raised up this edifice as a living testament to their faith in God, a monument to the victory of Christ on the cross nineteen hundred years ago and it will stand ever a witness to the world of the greatest power in all men known. Interest was added to this service with the rendition of a solo by Mrs. (Dr.) Dirtie (Mr. Decimer) by Gounod.

In the evening a powerful message was delivered by Very Rev. W. T. Cluff, D.D., of Toronto, Ontario, who chose his theme from the 4th Chapter of Ephesians, the last verse of which reads the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." This great saying of Paul's carries, with it the same force today as it did in the day it was uttered by him, said the speaker, Christianity is a vocation and we must be worthy of it. We set forth unquestionably that Christianity was based alone on much church work but church attendance was not the test of the well-being or all Christians. What is Christianity, is a question often asked over and over again in these days of perplexity and many answers open the lines of thinking men. Some feel that moral principles are the essential and look for a day of social justice here accounts to be the cornerstone of Christianity. "The thought is a worthy one," said the speaker, "we must look for social justice. Men merely existing in utter poverty can't be expected to be shining rays of Christianity. A perfect social order is a fine thing. We must strive for it. But we must first strive for Christianity, because man becomes himself with that as a base and these things are for only a second. Men brought into contact to the last degree would not satisfy the soul of man." The combined choirs of St. John's and Trinity Church, Frankford, led by the singing of the hymns selected and chosen for the occasion, and Miss Isobel Cathcart, soloist of Trinity Church, Frankford, offered as a special solo, (I Give Myself to

"TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION" FOR PAST 25 YEARS"

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Welcome Relief

Read this voluntary letter from Mr. Lecour: "I have been troubled with constipation" for the past 25 years. I tried practically every laxative without results.

"Recently, I determined to give Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a fair trial. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has not only helped me, but I believe it is an actual relief for chronic constipation."—Mr. Henry E. Lecour. Address upon request.

"Due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. It also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. Often more effective than "bulk" in fruits and vegetables as it does not absorb water within the body.

75TH ANNIVERSARY OF STIRLING CHURCH

St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, erected during incumbency of Rev. J. A. Pearce.

These) by Mother. The gifts to the church read for the first time on this occasion were:—A Communal Cross, given by Mr. Earl Moore in memory of his father and in honor of his mother, Mrs. Mary Morrow. A sterling silver bread box for use in Communion service given by Mrs. E. H. Alger. Seats placed in sanctuary by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Thompson.

The new lighting system used also for the first time with six beautiful old English lanterns, three on each side of the antithrone, were made possible by the following donors, each giving a light: Mrs. Chas. Morrow, Mr. and Mrs. Villeneuve, the Women's Guild, the A.Y.P.A., the Men's Association, and the sixth light given by the Sunday School and Mrs. Robt. Vance. In order that a permanent record of these gifts may be kept in the memory offices they will be dedicated by the Bishop on his next official visit to the parish.

History of Church

Owing to the fact that the early records of the Church were destroyed by fire this history could necessarily begin in the year 1847 when services were held under the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Hall in the schoolhouse or later when the Village of Stirling was incorporated in the Town Hall. At this time the Mission of Stirling embraced the Villages of Stirling, Marmora and Madoc, and parts of the Townships of Rawdon, Sidney and the old Hmtingdon.

In 1850 the Rev. J. A. Pearce was appointed and under his leadership the little band of church people undertook to erect a church. The corner stone was laid under Masonic auspices on June 24th, 1851, and the edifice was opened for services the following year. The church was designed by Mr. Strickell. The beautiful little Gothic Church cost $3000.00. The architect was a man named Mesith from Trenton. The building has weathered the past 84 years and is a wonderful example of the stone masonry art of those days. It stands a wonderful example of the stone masonry art of those days. It stands today, a memorial to those faithful people of the ancient church.

In 1857, during the incumbency of Rev. H. R. B. Baker, Bishop Lewis made his first official visit to the church, among those confirmed being Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Belshaw. Mr. Belshaw was succeeded by Rev. G.W.G. Greene in 1862. In 1873 the Rev. John Halliwell was appointed incumbent and in 1876, when he was succeeded in charge by Rev. Wm. Ferguson, a plain-spoken Irishman, who, among other things, put a stop to the practice of mourners in the church wearing their hats all through the service in the days of the Rev. Baker's incumbency. Frankford was separated from Stirling and for a time had a church of its own. In 1878 the new mission of Marmora was consigned to the pastoral of Rev. C. H. Harris, leaving Stirling with just seven appointments. In 1879 the parish came the Rev. T. Godden, who laboured there for ten years. Under his supervision St. Thomas' Church eighth line was built and the rectory in Stirling purchased as well as a bell and organ for St. John's Church.

In 1889 Rev. J. Harry was the next Incumbent, entering upon his duties in 1889. In 1892 a beautiful wood screen was placed in the church in memory of the late John and Elizabeth Bycott by the members of their family.

The following clergy served in the Parish between 1893 and 1900: Rev. G.A.V. Ballin, Rev. A. H. Smythe, Rev. A. J. Geen, Rev. S. Daw, Rev. F. Newham and Rev. H. C. Spencer. In 1899 the Parish of Rawdon was formed from the parishes of Stirling and Marmora and placed in the following year Stirling and Frankford were united again and the Rev. J.E.H. Coleman was appointed Incumbent. In 1904 the present rectory was purchased and the parish reported to be in a sound financial condition. In 1905 the Rev. B. F. Byers was appointed rector and during his incumbency many changes were taken place in the congregation and many beautiful services and memorial gifts presented to the church. Through the efforts of Mr. Byers a beautiful set of altar linen with the Sanctuary. Brass vases were presented by Mrs. Belshaw, Misses E. Baldrick and Dorothy B. Moore in 1909 and a communion table in oak presented by the Channel Guild in 1910.

In this year through a gift from the late George K. Cryer, an enlargement of the Vestry was built and called the George K. Cryer Memorial Hall. A beautiful brass cross of exceptional form and workmanship was presented to the church by Mr. John Black in memory of his father and mother. In 1916 a brass alms dish was presented by Miss Elizabeth Gordon in memory of her family and in 1917 Mr. W. T. Belshaw placed in the church an oak Communion rail to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of himself and his wife, Mrs. Mary Buttmer Belshaw. The first marriage ceremony to be performed in the church, in 1930 the church was beautified by three stained glass windows at the east end of the church, the gift of Elizabeth Gordon, in memory of the Preston family.

After over 35 years of faithful service to the parish, the Rev. B. F. Byers retired in May, 1931, and on August 1st of the same year the present rector, Rev. A. S. McConnell was appointed to the parish.

Memorial and Decorative Services

On Sunday afternoon, June 23rd, a large number of members and friends of the Stirling lodge No. 238 I.O.O.F. gathered to take part in their annual memorial and decoration services. Mr. O. Nerlly of Belleville, District Deputy Grand Master of the District and the Stirling Citizens' Band was in attendance. The members of the lodge gathered at their lodge rooms at 2.30 p.m. and headed by the band marched to the cenotaph in Memorial Park where wreaths were placed in honor of those who gave their lives in the World War. After the placing of the wreaths the Last Post was sounded by Trumpeter J. Ward. The procession then moved to the cemetery and the brothers encircled the graves of those resting in the ground. The members of the order placed their flowers upon the graves of departed brethren. Prayers were read by (Marshal) R. Smyth, Jr., and the band rendered a wonderful example of the stone masonry art of those days. It stands today, a memorial to those faithful people of the ancient church.

In 1857, during the incumbency of Rev. H. R. B. Baker, Bishop Lewis made his first official visit to the church, among those confirmed being Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Belshaw. EATING AND BRAIN ANAEMIA

Mental sluggishness is said by Dr. Laird of Colgate University to be due to brain anaemia. He claims that heavy eating of a meal draws blood from the brain for the digestive function as a result of which the brain is dull, something like what one might expect from an electric stove to which sufficient current was not entering.

Dr. Laird explains the banqueter's faculties as dulled after a three or five course dinner and therefore extremely tolerant as to what is said and no matter what the length of the address.

The men who attend many banquets know how to get along without overloading. They toy with the food but leave most of it untouched. Their brains in consequence are not lazy and their wit is keen.

TRAFFIC IN HIGHER OF TEA

A Report of T. W. Russell, (who is known as Russell Pasha), made to the Egyptian Government shows that the illicit drug traffic in Egypt is of immense development. One of his most amazing statements is that black tea which is used by many millions in a healthy drink is misused deliberately and with brewing and re-brewing and the inclusion of other ingredients made into a drink which offers a substitute for heroin and hashish in its effects.

Russell, who is a explorer, says that in his opinion black tea is doing more harm than the fellaheen hash drugs and is taking the place of other drugs in lowering the physical standard of the people.

Tea is one of the blessings of the race but the fatalheen tea drinkers boil the tea leaves in water, leave them in it and at various intervals during the day re-boil the mixture, adding more leaves and more water. This continuous boiling extracts all the astringent acids and produces a heavy brown mixture, which through its constipating and tanning properties is very deleterious to the stomach. To make of it a narcotic, juice of the heart of the date palm or powdered nutmeg is used.

This terrible habit is wrecking the physique of many thousands of the working class and that confirmed addicts spend as much as two-thirds of their day's wages on tea.

As there is nothing illegal in either brewing or drinking of the beverage, Russell Pasha feels that social and medical authorities should be summoned to deal with the newest of vices.

DISTRICT BECKONS TOURISTS

That time of year is at hand when nature has put on her finest dress and it is the time when the summer colonies and vacation resorts hold out their attractions to the world, be it the world of the east, or of the west, or of the north or of the south.

At this period of the year the Quinte District is like every other part in its gala attire. Nature has done her work well.

And the builders of this district have also done their work well. They have been far-seeing and as a result there awaits the coming of the tourist and others the most attractive setting for a vacation or holiday that man can anywhere find.

The people themselves are hospitable, courteous and so filled with the spirit of the district that they are only too anxious to entertain newcomers and to furnish them with all the data which is available.

With the natural appeal the accessibility which good roads have provided and the friendly welcome of the population there are in this district many places which might be called a demi-paradise.

It is not only the tourist who is welcome but the native who is slowly but surely getting to know the appeal of his own lakelands. This class of citizen is responsible for the numerous fine camps and the excellent colleges which are to be found by many hundreds in all parts of the district.

This summer will be, it is felt, the best for quite a number of years. Seventy-five per cent. expansion over last year is expected. The attractions of these parts will succeed in holding many a tourist's horsebouts by the lakes, along the streams. The countryside is an attraction which must not be neglected, because the fine motor roads penetrate every part of the country. There are the appeals of the Bay of Quinte itself and the attractions of boating.

It is the time of year to go vacationing. Nothing less than a vacation will do. And that vacation might most profitably be spent in this section.

THE LITTLE FARM

Just a little farm whose acres
Bask beneath a summer sky,
With its meadows sweet with clover
Stirred by winds that wander by;
With its woodland where the shadows
Shift beneath the spreading trees,
Where the silence is unbroken
Save by song of birds and bees.

Just a farm along the lakeside
Stretching to the shadowed shore,
Where in summertime the swallows
Softly skim the waters o'er;
Where the boatman, idly drifting,
Spends a happy holiday,
And life's problems all forgotten
Calmly dreams the hours away.

Just a little farm where springtime
First its early visit pays,
Followed by a lingering summer
That so late its bloom delays;
And where autumn in its splendor
Passes with its radiant train,
And the winter coming after
Whitens every hill and plain.

Just a little farm, a haven
Which we entered long ago
With high hopes and with a longing tender
With ambition's fire aglow;
Sweetest memories will linger
Whereso'er our footsteps roam,
Round them radiant, sunny scenes
That for years was "Home, Sweet Home!"

POTATOES THEY GROW SMALE IN TEXAS, and they eat them skins and all in Texas—so runs an old ballad—which probably accounts for the fine physique of the Texas Rangers, a body of State Police only second to our own Mounties in skill, daring and courage. Everybody laughed at the joke of prosperous humans eating potato peelings, but here comes a food evangelist who tells service club members in Belleville and elsewhere that potato peelings should be given preference to eat the skin even if the rest of the potato is left uneaten. Says he, soften the skin with olive oil before cooking—how about castor oil?

GORDON SINCLAIR AND HECTOR CHARLESWORTH are teamed by a New York city columnist as the two top-notch reporters of Toronto. That's a laugh, Hector Charlesworth, head of the Canadian Railway Commission, hasn't done any reporting since Hector was a pup and before that, while if Gordon Sinclair had to do regular reporting and stick to facts he might not rate one, two, three with some of the lads doing regular beats in the same city of Toronto, or smaller places for that matter.

JIMMY BRADDOCK TOOK HIS JOB SERIOUSLY—Fresh from the humiliating experience of accepting municipal relief, winning the fight meant a whole lot to him and his family. He was a Has Been who won a lucky break on the come-back trail and he sure consolidated his position and while the experts gave him not one chance to win the fight he won their respect by his doggedness of purpose and faithful training. Baer was in Hollywood last winter when Jimmy was on relief in the East. Baer had a good time with the girls and enjoyed all the distractions of the movie colony. Baer was put on a pedestal as a popular hero, and his favorite pastime in the ring and out was clowning. Braddock was a set-up for him, in his opinion, for hadn't he tumbled the Man-Mountain Carnera down and belted two men into eternity. A killer was he, unbeatable. But Jimmy plodded right along and when they met in the ring carried the fight right to Baer, giving him little time to get in any clowning, and by taking his job seriously became a champion and a potential rich man. All of which should remind us that a little slowwing goes a long way, and any job, little or large, to be done right should be taken seriously.

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

While they were scattered over the land, mounted men appeared on the horizon to the east, making towards the water. They moved on this quickly to be honest, and fired at our hindmost, but the rest of us put us once upon the scattered reeds and knolls, shooting or shouting. Hearing us so many they drew off as fast as their camels would go; and from the ridge in the dusk we saw them, a bare dozen in all, scampering away towards the line. We were glad to see them avoid us so thoroughly. Auda thought they were a Shammar patrol.

CHAPTER VIII

The Verbable Desert

At dawn we saddled up for the short stage to Diraa, the water pools of which Sharraf had told us. We halted there till afternoon; for we were now quite near the railway, and had to drink our stomachs full and fill our new water skins, ready for the long dash to Fejr.

In the hall Auda came to see Farraj and Daud dress our wounds, butter for relief against the intolerable itch of mange which had broken out recently on the face. The day pasturage of the Hill country and the infested camels we had not had played havoc with our beasts. In all Feisal's stud of riding camels there was not one healthy; in our little expedition every camel was weakening daily. Auda, in a fever of anxiety lest many break down in the forced march before us, and leave their riders stranded in the desert.

We had no medicines for mange and could do little for it in spite of our need. However, the tarry smell and anointing did make my animal more comfortable, and we repeated it as often as Farraj or Daud could find butter in our party. These two boys were drivers at great disadvantage. They were brave and cheerful, active, good riders, and willing workmen.

By a quarter to four we were in the saddle, going down through the hills into steep and high ridges of shifting high slopes and valleys, a kind of harsh red rock jutting from them. After a while, three-or four or so, in advance of the main body, we reached a sand-pack on hands and knees to creep out the railway. There was no air, and the exercise was more than we required; but our work was immediate, for the line showed itself quiet and deserted-looking. We were to have no wounded for crossing.

Our heavy camels marched over the valley, the line, and the farther flat, till sheltered in the sand and rock mouths of the country beyond the railway. Meanwhile the Egyptians fixed gun-cotton or gelatine charges to as many of the rails as we had time to reach and began, in proper order, to lighten the fuses, filling the hollow valley with the echoing reports of the explosions.

Auda had not before known dynamite, and with a child's first pleasure was moved to a rush of hasty poetry on its powerful glory. We, at three telegraph wires, and fastened the free end to the saddles of six riding camels of the Howeitat. The astonished beasts struggled far into the eastern valleys with the growing weight of twanging, humming wire and the bursting poles dragging after them. At last they could no longer move. So we cut them loose and rode in the falling light to rejoin the caravan.

In the morning Auda had us shoot before dawn, going uphill, till at last we climbed to a plain, with an illimitable view down hill to the sea; where one gentle level after another slowly modulated into a distance of fifty miles. Midmost appeared it was a sober blue, and more hazy. The rising sun flooded this falling land with a perfect level of light, throwing up long shadows of almost impossible ridges, and the whole life and play of a complicated ground-system—but no transient mirror, as we looked at it, the shadows drew in towards the dawn, quivered and vanished behind their mother-banks, and west out as though at a mirrored signal. Full morning had begun; the river or sunlight, shockingly in the full-face of us, and us of it, impartially on every stone of the desert.

Then, as suddenly as our progress it was, called our plain St Houl because of the innumerable skulls of sea gulls without seeing signs of life; no tracks of gazelle, no lizards, no scorpions, no flies, no birds. We, ourselves, felt tiny in it, and our camels seemed to move immensity was a stillness or immobility of futile effort. The only sounds were our voices echoing the shutting down of pavements which we made, the hollow stone slab on stone slab when they tilted under our camels' feet; and the rustle and flapping rustle of the sand, as it crept slowly westward before the wind, or poured in waves round stone, under the harder overhanging ledges which each rear leg drove out rind-like shape.

It was a breathless wind, with the fortune of the Arabian known from Egypt when a khamsin came; and, by the day's end, the sun and the rose in the sky it grew stronger, more filled with the dust of the Nefud. Its source was out of Syria, the thern Arabia, close by us over there, but invisible through the haze. By noon it blew a half-gale, so dry that our shrivelled lips cracked open, and the skin of our faces chapped; while our eyelids, gone granular, seemed to creep back and bare our shrinking eyes. The Arabs drew their headcloths tightly across their noses, and pulled the brow-folds forward like visors with only a narrow, loose-hanging slit of vision.

We plodded on all the day (even without his wind forbidding us there could have been no more luxury-halts under the shadow of blankets. If we would arrive unbroken men with strong camels at el Fejr), and nothing made us widen an eye or think a thought till evening. calm and black and full of stars. We had covered about fifty miles, so we halted.

Lyman Moore, a popular resident of Belleville, died in the Belleville General hospital shortly after noon today as the result of having fallen under a passenger train carrying the I.O.O.F. excursion from this city to Peterboro. He was a passenger on the train and had alighted to the platform when the train stopped at North Hastings Junction. When the train started he attempted to board it at the front end and fell under the wheels which passed over both his legs. Dr. Gibson was on the train and did all that he could to relieve the injured man. A special train was sent immediately from Belleville and conveyed the sufferer to the city and to the hospital. Nothing could be done to save his life. The accident happened about nine thirty o'clock in the morning. Deceased was born in Belleville in the year 1870 and had consequently reached the age of 25 years. For some time he was employed by W. R. Carnochan, druggist, and when Mr. Alex. Ray purchased the business from Mr. Carnichael, he remained with him. He was an exceedingly popular young man. He was a member of Moira Lodge No. 11, A.F. and A.M.; Chief Patriarch of Mecca Encampment No. 59, I.O.O.F.; member of Canton No. 1, Patriarchs Militant, I.O.O.F.; Derry Lodge No. 30, True Blues, and Lodge No. 19 Prentice Boys. ALLEN KING'S MIXED GROUP OF WILD ANIMALS—NAT URAL ENEMIES

Lions and royal Bengal tigers are natural enemies as well as leopards, black pumas and hyenas. It requires months, of seemingly patience and training so that they may become reconciled to remain in the same cage without mortal combat.

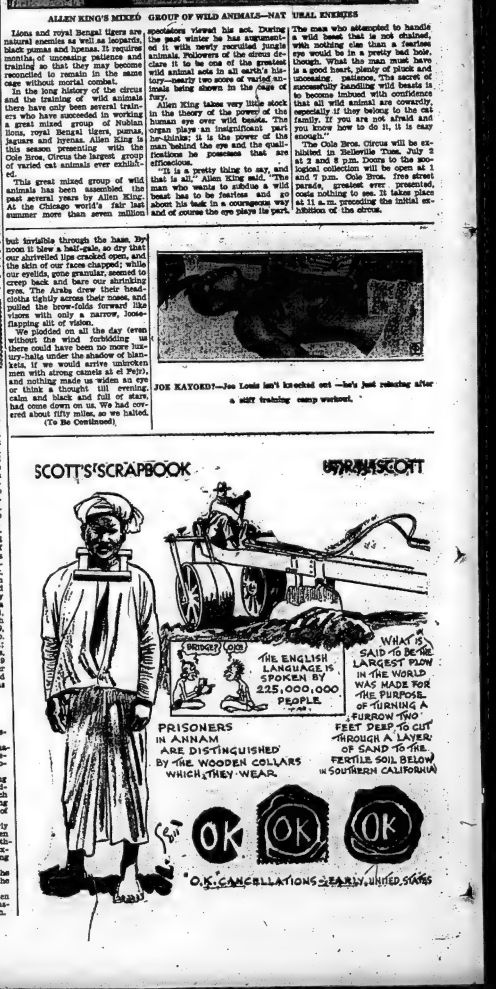
In the long history of the civus and the training of wild animals there have only been several trainers who have succeeded in working a great mixed group of Nubian lions, royal Bengal tigers, pumas, jaguars and hyenas. Allen King is this season presenting with the Cole Bros. Circus the largest group of varied cat animals ever exhibited.

This great mixed group of wild animals has been assembled in the past several years by Allen King. At the Chicago world's fair last summer more than seven million spectators viewed his act. During the past winter he has augmented it with newly recruited jungle animals. Followers of the circus declare it to be one of the greatest wild animal acts in all earth's history—nearly two scores of varied animals being shown in the cage at once.

Allen King takes very little stock in the theory of the power of the human eye over wild beasts. The organ plays an insignificant part per-haps, he says, in the power of the man behind the eye and the qualities he possess that are efficacious.

"It is a pretty thing to say, and that is all." Allen King said. "The man who wants to subdue a wild beast has to be fearless and go about his task in a courageous way and of course the eye plays its part, but fortitude through the hand. By a single blow with a whip, or even a well directed kick, the trainer can show the animal that he is the master. Then, of course, there is the matter of kindness. Every animal responds to kindness. Even the most savage beast will show appreciation of kindness. Of course, there is the matter of feeding. Every animal must be fed at the proper time and in the proper way. Then there is the matter of cleanliness. Every animal must be kept clean. Then there is the matter of exercise. Every animal must be exercised. Then there is the matter of sleeping quarters. Every animal must be provided with comfortable sleeping quarters. Then there is the matter of water. Every animal must be provided with water. Then there is the matter of shelter. Every animal must be provided with shelter. Then there is the matter of—"

"Is a man to be allowed to smoke?" I interrupted.



"Yes, if he wants to," Allen King replied.

The man who attempted to handle a wild beast that is not chained, with nothing else than a fearless eye would be in a pretty bad hole, though. What the trainer must have is a good head, plenty of pluck and unceasing patience. The secret of successfully handling wild beasts is to become imbued with confidence that all wild animal are cowardly, especially if they belong to the cat family. If you are not afraid and you know how to do it, it is easy enough."

The Cole Bros. Circus will be exhibited in Belleville Thurs. July 2 at 2 and 8 p.m. Doors to the zoological collection will be open at 1 and 7 p.m. Cole Bros. free street parade, greatest ever presented, costs nothing to see. It takes place at 11 a.m. preceding the initial exhibition of the circus.

East Seymour's Women's Institute

The June meeting of the East Seymour Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Geo. Craighead of Burnbrae on Tuesday, June 11th with a very good attendance. The President, Mrs. John Thompson presided. After the opening Ode the Lord's prayer was repeated in unision. Considerable business was transacted.

The programme committee to be Misses Jean Craighead and Edna Ketchenor. Mrs. A. H. Martin, hours in Belleville on Saturday, June 15th.

The country never looked more beautiful, the hay crop will be abundant, small fruits also if the birds will only leave a few for the owners.

Coderich, June 8 (Special) After forty-three and forty-four years' service in the teaching profession, respectively, Messrs. J. P. Hume, Principal, and A. M. Robertson, Assistant Principal, and Mathematical Master, have resigned from the collegiate institute staff. The resignations were reluctantly accepted by the board. Few teachers have had a more honorable or successful career. Mr. Hume has been here four years here, and Mr. Robertson, a native of Goderich, twenty-seven years. Both are eligible for superannuation. The board will meet on June 21 to fill the vacancies.

Mr. Hume is a brother of Messrs. Alex and William Hume of Campbellford, being a native of East Seymour and previous to his long teaching term in Goderich taught in Dunnville, Brampton, Campbellford and Waterford. He will continue to live in Goderich having property here. Mr. Hume is a graduate of Queen's University and won two gold medals for chemistry and mathematics. In his forty-three years of teaching, he was never absent because of sickness for more than eleven days.

Mr. Craig Nelson of Burnbrae, Mrs. Gertrude Walker of Ocbourg, also Miss Mitchell of the Royal Bank staff in Campbellford are motoring to Winnipeg and other points west. Miss Mitchell will visit her parents near Winnipeg.

Presentation

The Seymour passenger, Campbellford, Brighton evening class, was the scene of a very happy gathering on Friday evening of organization which was also mixed with sadness with the thought that on room forward. Mr. he called upon to part with their pastor, Rev. F. J. McTavish and family.

After a period of community singing led by Misses Doris and Elsie Rannie, Mr. Alex Hume then acted as master of ceremonies and after a few words of appreciation of Rev. and Mrs. McTavish in their work representing the session, Mr. and Mrs. McTavish were asked to come forward. Mr. Frank Reagle read an address.

Brief remarks of appreciation and regret at their departure were made by Messrs. Ed. Rannie, Mesdames Ray Williams — and John Rannie, Misses Betty Hoard and Viola Parr presented book ends and electric lamp to Rev. MacTavish and wife respectively. Rev. MacTavish replied, in a happy manner stating he had had pleasant associations with his congregation and wished them God-speed and thanking them for their gifts. Mrs. W. A. Hume then put on a "dinner" contest and dainty refreshments were served and the meeting broke up by singing one verse of "Blest Be The Tie That Binds our Hearts in Christian Love."

CAR CRASHES INTO HYDRO POLE

Tweed—Dennis Healey and William Durkin, who live near Stoco, narrowly escaped serious injury late Saturday afternoon when their car crashed into a Hydro pole just south of Tweed village. Healey, the driver of the car, turned out to pass a rig, and in some manner his car left the road crashing into the pole some distance from the point where he passed the rig. The car is a complete wreck. The occupants were badly cut about the face and hands by broken glass. They were brought to the office of Dr. M. G. Dales for treatment. Constable J. C. Hayes and the traffic officer from Belleville investigated and a charge of reckless driving will be laid.

FOXBORO AHEAD IN S. H. LEAGUE

Friday evening the Foxboro baseball team went into the lead in the South Hastings League with a victory over Melrose at Melrose, played on a muddy diamond; the game was in no way inspiring. The inclusion of five Belleville interpolation was no help to Melrose as their lackadaisical play and persistent crabbing spoiled any chance of a good game. Peacock pitched steadily for Foxboro, and "Happy" Ketchenor's sensational catch of a foul stopped Melrose's only threat. R. Ketchenor with two hits and a walk led the Foxboro batters. Darkness ended the contest at the end of the fifth inning with Foxboro leading 8-2.

The batteries were:

Foxboro: Peacock and H. Ketchenor. Melrose: Bartell and Thomas.

The depressed price of farm products is a problem with which everyone is familiar, but on the 1913 basis farm product prices have never been as low as gasoline. Between 1913 and 1920 gasoline did not rise in price to nearly the same extent as farm products, yet since 1920 its price has almost continuously declined. The data for the above graph are based on figures published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

FAIR LABOR POLICIES BENEFIT THE CONSUMER

WORRY and unhappiness are enemies of efficiency. We have always tried to be efficient and years ago we said, "to the greatest extent possible let us get worry and unhappiness out of this organization — out of the minds of every man and woman in our employ."

So Imperial Oil has always paid high wages. It set up sickness and death benefits, a pensions plan and group insurance for its workers. It made it easy for them to share ownership in the Company. It gave them a voice in the discussion of Company policies that directly affect them. It introduced the forty-hour week, thus increasing the number of those who work for the Company.

Efficiency and loyalty are repaying the Company for all these measures. Imperial Oil employees give generously of their hands and minds because they are well treated. They feel secure and this feeling is reflected in their work and in the high quality and lower cost of the products they make. The consumer benefits, the employees benefit and the Company benefits by these policies.

FOOD VALUE IN HONEY STRESSED

Central Branch of Bee Keepers Meet at Home of B. O. Lott

Stirling, June 26 (Special) — On Tuesday a large representation of the Central Ontario branch of the Ontario Bee Keeper Association gathered at the home of B. O. Lott on the seventh concession of Sidney for their annual field day, when members of the industry throughout the county of Hastings and the surrounding districts gathered to discuss the many interesting problems facing the producers of honey. Lunch was served by the ladies of Holloway United Church, and shortly after lunch a carefully arranged program of prominent speakers was started and carried through in a fine manner. Mr. B. O. Lott acting as chairman heartily welcomed the visitors and after explaining the purpose of such gatherings introduced the first speaker of the day, Prof. E. J. Dice of Guelph, Provincial Apiarist, who in a fine address outlined the advantages and possibilities of membership in the Ontario Bee Keepers Association. The value of knowledge was available to the Bee-keeper from the Canadian Bee Journal, which is published by the association and was the mouthpiece of the industry. Many legislations against fire and damage also, introduced by the association is proving popular and helpful to the producer. Then too was the honey report issued by the organization, which gives a general world picture of the industry. Prof. Dice also gave an instructive talk on swarm control. Mr. Joseph Wilson of Stirling, local representative of the Ontario Bee Keepers Association was also called upon for a short address at this time.

Food Value Stressed

Miss Newbury, Dietician, graduate in Household Science from the Macdonald Institute, graduate also of Toronto University, and an authority in domestic science, addressed the ladies on the food value and the various uses of honey in the home. Miss Newbury state in her remark that honey was definitely a sugar and should not be recommended for use of diabetic patients, etc., in place of sugar. It is a valuable food and should not be an energy builder. The vitamin content of honey is not definitely known but it is not rich in this quality either. There are hundreds ways of using honey and the much talked of vitamin content in food products of honey deserves must be educated to the true value of honey and become "honey conscious." No excess advertising although is necessary for all the sle of honey just straight facts on its value is all that is needed. T. R. Eadie of Toronto was the next speaker and spoke on the marketing of the product and the problems faced therein particularly with regard to the apport trade. Mr. G. L. Jarvis of Guelph then submitted to the gathering a carefully planned memo outlined for the purpose of regulating in a definite manner the marketing of the product produced for sale contemplating the formation of a co-operative marketing of the whole or part of it through a marketing agency or agencies. This is the finding of board and promotional efforts to encourage the production and increase the consumption of the product in domestic and foreign markets. Copies of the proposed plan were given into the hands of all those present with the request that a copy of the resolution was then read and on a motion by E. C. Lott, seconded by J. Harold Thompson was adopted by the gathering present. Among those present at this fine meeting were Mayor Tice of Belleville, Mr. Chas. Cameron and Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater.

Forgotten City

Berlin, June 25 (CP-Havas) — Vast newspapers today reported a new radio-active micro-wave that has been invented in Germany. Scientists declared the new rays were more powerful than the Hertzian rays and would be of great value in signalling the approach of ships. A ship equipped to contact with the ray-beam would receive a warning of detection through a loud speaker installed on the vessel sending out the waves, it was said.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 26 (CP)—Ford 'A' was the feature of the Toronto financial share market today when it climbed more than a point on heavy trading. Other interlisted leaders were mainly steady except Noranda which eased slightly. Mild strength was displayed by the golds and utility and steel groups split about even on losses and gains. Volume on all whole was up from that of Tuesday.

Ford 'A' was strong spot in the golds and Dominion Stores worked higher by a full point. Golds were in fair evidence today regarding the threat of a price cutting battle among gasoline companies and the oil bodies, Imperial, International Petroleum and Anglo-American were steady to strong.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, June 26 (AP)—The stock market became a trifle unsettled during late trading today and surrendered most of its early gains.

At the beginning of the final hour leaders in all divisions were holding at about unchanged levels or slightly below. Included among these were such shares as Du Pont, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Standard of N. J., Santa Fe, Consolidated Gas and Corn Do Texas. American Telephone lost a point. Radio Corporation stock, retained early advances of ¼ to more than a point along with Pennsylvania, Electric Johnson, Westinghouse and Briggs. The late loss was irregular. Sales approximated 800,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES' CLOSE

Toronto, June 26 (CP)—While the general tone of the Toronto mining market was firm today the list was bored once more especially by the gold group. Outstanding examples were Macassa and Sylvanite, both down about a point on the day. Base Metal and Silver stocks did better on moderate trade.

Noranda staged a minor recovery today, the issue closing at 58, after showing decided weakness for a week or more. The price was holding around $61 and $62 before the break of $5 cents. Gold and silver issues also displayed a firmer undertone. Although volume was small in the senior gold group, small advances were in a majority. Lake Shore, Dome, McIntyre, Lake Shore and Wright Hargreaves were the leaders. Base stocks, Paymaster and Read Authier worked higher on heavy trading, showing gains of 2 to 3 cents this afternoon.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, June 26—(AP)—The stock market bounced back and forth in tax worries today and resumed its upward trend with extreme caution.

While advances were small and there were numerous defections among active shares, no selling of importance appeared after a brief flurry at the opening.

Prices were unchanged to a shade higher among such Canadian stocks as International Nickel, Dome and Canadian Pacific. Du Pont, Standard Walker was steady but Lake Shore yielded fractionally. Certain government bonds moved on an even keel. Canadian dollar eased 1-32 of a cent at 99 12-16 cents.

Radio Corporation Preferred got up more than a point and added half that much gain was made by the Common. Other shares holding about even or edging forward included Westinghouse Electric, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Johns-Manville, Celanese, Industrial Rayon, Briggs Mfg., Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and Great Northern.

Small fractional declines were the rule in American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Electric Power, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Socony-Vacuum.

Board Room Gossip

As compiled by Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service

Shares in the Canadian Bank of Commerce are currently selling around $38 and it is reported that the directors are considering the advisability of increasing the dividend rate from the present $2 per annum basis. Such a move would be welcomed by shareholders as the bank has been paying $2 per annum since 1930 and has been in a position to pay more than this for some time. Earnings for the year ended April 30 last were equivalent to $3.50 per share.

Dividend action on Bell Telephone shares is expected at the meeting of directors on July 3. Earnings for the first quarter of the year were equivalent to $1.50 per share as compared with $1.40 per share in the first quarter of 1934. Dividends are at the rate of $6 per annum.

Directors of Canada Bread Co. Ltd. have declared a dividend of $1.75 per share on the 7% preferred stock, payable July 2 to shareholders of record June 15. This is the first dividend paid on the preferred stock since 1931.

With railway and R.C.M. police lines converging on Regina, and with 3,000 British Columbia relief camp strikers reported preparing to continue their trek to Ottawa, authorities fear violence. Black Helen, owned by E. R. Bradley, and one of that stable's nominees for the last Kentucky Derby, won the American Derby at Washington Park and with it the $25,000 purse. Lower photo shows the finish: Black Helen, first; Count Arthur, second; and Tear Out, third. Meanwhile, Discovery, owned by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, was setting a new world record for the mile and an eighth in the historic Brooklyn Handicap, travelling the distance in 1.48 1-5, one-fifth of a second under the old mark. FEAR ABYSSINIAN WAR OUTBREAK BY NOVEMBER

If any nation attempts to interfere with the program of Italy in Ethiopia, or to dictate in any way how Italy shall conduct herself toward the nation of Abyssinia, the government of Rome will immediately withdraw from the League of Nations. With that ultimatum the Italian foreign office has commanded a "hands off" policy by the nations of the world. Interesting, perhaps, is this scene from the centre of the Ethiopian field. It shows Italian mountain artillery, in full kit, moving among rugged country in Italian Somaliland, near the Abyssinian frontier where, it is reported, some guerilla action has taken place recently. From Geneva come reports that action will commence before November.

Infield Errors on One Hit Gives Kingston Ponies Win Over the Stewart-Warners

Score is 2-1 With Only One Earned Run in Contest

TOUGH TO LOSE

Williams And Clancy Hook up in Hurlers' Duel

Errors cost the local Stewart-Warners their regular scheduled O.B.L. game on home at last evening when Jack Williams and Bud Stewart, opposing hurlers hooked up in a beautiful pitchers' duel after which the Kingston Ponies left, by the path on the long end of a 2 to 1 thrilling baseball game. The local lads drove the Radios into second position, as in percentage figures the Ponies are now atop of the Central League standings.

With the count all knotted up, one-all in the fourth, the Radios tickled in with two successive infield errors, on the same hit ball, that set Speedy St. Louis, the Kingston right fielder race from second to the plate, on what should have been an infield out, to score. It was the last run of the game as both Clancy and Williams hurled shut-out ball from that point until the game was locked away in the bat bag, Williams hurled smart enough ball to win any ordinary game but, inability to hit on the part of his team mates and the only two locally committed errors, robbed him of what might have been victory. Williams' excellent work on the slab well and only issued one base on balls, but was constantly teased by the ex-Philadelphia hurler.

Clancy, Kingston's gift to the O.B.L. was Coach Joe Daly's pitching choice of the day and well he justified his selection as the locals, fatally burned back the local batsmen, until two Radio infields getting anything that resembled a safe hit. Sony Grey, local right fielder, when the big hitter of the pastime, when he collected three safeties out of four official trips to the plate, Jim Barclay's stinging single to right-centre was the only other local hit of the afternoon. Clancy was in rare form using a fast ball and a curve ball that baffled the Radio eight local batters and did not issue a single free ticket to initial sack. He also accorded a double to his credit, but was cut at right trying to stretch it into a triple. Jake Quinn, Percy second sacker, was the long distance hitter of the day, as he mightily triple in the second. He scored the visitors only counter on a subsequent infield out, this being the only earned run of the pastime.

Pitchers' Battle

The game was a typical pitchers' battle and held some 700 rabid fans spell-bound as Williams and Clancy mowed down batsmen, issued few with ease. Sonny Green led the locals defensively as he handled all chances without a bobble as McIlroy kicked in with eight perfect fielding chances. Barclay also was given superb support in the pouches by R. Smith, Kingston backstop, after he had previously booted two. Scruton and McQuade raced to cover the outfield in search of wallops to gather in hard hit fly balls and Stewart in the slot at short fielded liners. A fast double play, R. Smith to Quinn to Stone in the fourth, was the sole chance to knot in the crying moments of the pastime. As was previously stated, Kingston's only run, the slants of Bud Clancy and two consecutive errors in the fourth innings cost Belleville the ball game. Incidentally the Radios and the Ponies battle to another tussle in Kingston on Friday evening.

All the present line up the Radios have won five games and lost four while the Ponies have won four games and lost three, giving the latter's slight percentages average over the locals.

PREMIER SHOW OF WRESTLING

Kiwanis Club Arrange Best Card of The Season

Bringing together the cream of their wrestlers in an all-star wrestling bout at the Belleville Arena on Friday night the Kiwanis Club have assembled their premier show of the season when two extra fine main bouts will be presented along with a high class preliminary attraction.

With a feeling in mind, that some of the local sport fans to weekly attend their wrestling shows at the Arena, had been slightly disappointed last week, the Kiwanis promoters have made every piece of satisfying their customers with two main attractions on Friday night. Hammian bout of the evening sees the return to a local ring of that fearless, ungraceful grappler, Walter Parnell of St. Catharines, who has been signed to meet Gregg Richards, the Jewish exponent of the Japanese style of wrestling, who made such a creditable showing against Johnnie Gyroffy last week and won a host of local admirers.

In the second main bout of the evening, Steve Snidere, the Dutch exponent of the Indian Deathlock, will meet Jack Marvin, the unmasked marvel. Once Marvin was unmasked in a local ring recently he displayed better wrestling qualities and is was only by the request of many local wrestling fans that Marvin was brought back to Belleville to wrestle unmasked. He is a veteran of the padded ring and will prove a formidable opponent for the herculean Snidere.

The preliminary match of the night is between two local favourites, Jack Pearl of Toronto and Dan Patrick, the Russian Lion. For three bouts are splendid matches in weight and ability with the result that the finest wrestling show of the year has been only made possible through the concerted efforts of the Kiwanis promoters, who aim to please, even in the cause of charity. No increase in prices were advertised for this out-standing show.

In the final playdown game in the Midget section of the local Ki-Y softball league the "Aces" won the league championship when they romped home to an 11 to 2 victory over the Belleville Athletics. The Aces had previously proven to be the class of the league and clearly demonstrated their superior softball ability in the final league playdown game. Grey also starred with five run splurge in the second inning when Quinn threw three Athletic runners.

PRINTERS WIN FROM LOBLAWS

Score is 16-15 With First Innings Splurge Helping

In a free hitting high scoring softball game the Ontario Intelligencer nine won their second game in the local Recreation League when they defeated the Loblaw entry 16 to 15 last evening. The "printers" opened with a barrage of hits in the first inning that netted them seven runs, an advantage the "grocers" were unable to overcome.

Both boundsmen were welcomed with a continued attack of hits throughout the early stages of batting hitters, although errors materially helped in the scoring of the score. Harris was on the hill for the "printers" while Niles laboured for Loblaws.

"Brown Bomber" Scores Spectacular Victory Over "Man Mountain" Carnera

HUGE CROWD

Louis Best Drawing Card Since The Days of Dempsey

(By Alan Gould)
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, June 28.— (AP)—The ringing echoes of the flatic dynamite set off by Joe Louis in the midst of the greatest fight crowd in this year's reverberated today with the conviction the "Brown Bomber" is well on the road to becoming one of the greatest heavyweight champions his race has produced.

The 21-year-old Detroit negro who signalized his Metropolitan debut by scoring a spectacular six-round knockout victory over Giant Primo Carnera last night in the Yankee stadium, unquestionably stamped himself the biggest drawing card pugilism has developed since the boom days of Jack Dempsey's prime.

In a setting reminiscent of the fight game's palmiest days, with a crowd of 60,000 yelling with celerity bustness for the "kill", Louis slugged the 269-pound Italian into submission, collecting mass and justified the gaudiest predictions of his backers.

Carnera was knocking down three times for short counts—four, four and three seconds—before Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the fight with only 28 seconds of the sixth round left.

Carnera Bleeding

The defenceless giant was bleeding from the mouth and was thoroughly shell-shocked at the end of a one-sided attack.

It undoubtedly marked end or Carnera's career as a factor in the heavyweight picture.

Promoter Mike Jacobs, one-time associate of Tex Rickard, promptly announced Louis will be matched for 15 rounds with Max Baer, former heavyweight champion, in New York this fall.

Louis told Jacobs he would be willing to fight once a month. The promoter, not to be outdone, said he would seek a match in late July or early August.

"We may try to match Louis with Jack Doyle, the Irish heavyweight who made his New York debut with a knockout this week," said Jacobs.

The fight world acclaimed the sensational negro youth as the latest successor to the dusky greats as Peter Jackson, Sam Langford and Joe Gans, another negro to hold the world heavyweight title and witness to the triumph of the "chocolate clouds" last night.

Braddock Spectator

James J. Braddock, twenty crowned king of the Heavies, also was a spectator. It remains to be seen whether the "Brown Bomber" fights his way to the top to meet the logical contender by the time Braddock is willing to consider title defence, however, is doubtful.

"Braddock will not draw the colour line," said the Irish champion's manager, "but it's too early to talk about a championship match with Louis or any other contender. Jimmy will be ready to tackle the best man in sight, I promise."

Fight critics were unanimous in ranking Louis as the greatest fighter since Dempsey. They compared him to Gene Tunney for the clinical point of his boxing skill, footwork and ability to mine openings. Carnera danced to the obvious point by remarking with emphasis that Louis hits "like a ton of murder" than Baer.

On The Way From First Round

Baer bloored Carnera 10 times against the three knockdowns for Louis. But Italian giant rallied sufficiently a year ago to last 11 rounds with the champion.

Louis established mastery in the first round with a right hand staggering blow, one of which opened a gash in Primo's mouth.

The latter was next hard knockdown punch in this or the succeeding four counts. He skidded the Italian boxing warily for openings inflicting his attack from the top of body, but always had command.

The climax came swiftly in the sixth. Louis showed inability of a terrific left hook for the first time. Primo thoroughly dazed pulled himself erect at the count of four, only to be met by another two-fisted blast. He tumbled weirdly, started to get up but lost his nerve and fell back into the ropes. He was up after four seconds, too far gone to resist the advantage of taking a longer count.

Knocked Wobbly

Helpless and glassy-eyed, the giant wobbled to one side of the ring and Louis, measuring his smash sent his spinning to the canvas again.

This time he regained his feet after seven counts, blood dripped from his mouth, his eyes were glassy, his hands dangling. Referee Donovan, however, stepped in to prevent the negro from taking more punishment.

At the finish Louis showed no signs of weariness. He walked calmly in his corner before the first bell. From start to finish "Dead Pan Joe" showed not a trace of battle, serious expression.

Score cards were a picture of fighting ease and confidence throughout. Carnera was wild and obviously helpless from the outset. Except for a few weak jabs, he did not show the edge, in landing a punch.

Speed is Large

Scarcely less sensational than Louis' victory was the size of the crowd, biggest attraction to the heavyweights since Jack Sharkey lost on a foul to Max Schmeling in a title match here in 1930.

Promoter Jacobs set the paid attendance at 57,000 but the crowd actually close to 70,000 spectators in the big baseball park. Including the holders of thousands of complimentary tickets and about 1,200 police, the public discovered the talk of possible racial distinction with a false alarm.

The gross receipts, $340,000, fell below expectations. Next year's new high for a non-title match in the last five years. They far surpassed the "live" for the Jack Braddock championship bout. The net receipts were set at $277,000.

DAY BY DAY

A lot of "ifs and ands" were heard following last night's 2 to 1 defeat of the Radios at the hands of the Perkins Regardless of what might have happened, two things cannot be denied. Firstly, the inability of the local batters to solve the deliveries of Bud Clancy, the Kingston groundsman. secondly—two local errors on one hit ball, that resulted in the first run of the game. Both were costly and the latter which could not find the pellet and St. Louis walked in to the plate without much opposition from any angle. The game was a heartbreaker for Jack Williams, who buried equally as good ball as Clancy and had he been afforded the usual support given local hurlers, well, the two teams might have been battling it out yet. It was a beautiful pitchers' battle between two hurlers, who had the matter pretty well their own way all day. One loss won't make much difference either way and providing the Radios can overcome Kingston on Friday night, all will be forgotten, wait and see.

The going is plenty tough in the Ki-Y League. Year with the pitchers having slightly the edge, as in the days of Fred Geyer, Al Heckman, Bob Daisly and the youthful Jack Williams, who still is a power of strength in the old arm Incidentally, when the Peoples scored on Williams last night it was the first time they have seen what bone plate looks like, with the latter on the hurling end as well. The Daisly-Peoples crew have scored exactly five runs off Williams in 27 innings in their fall games. Not a bad record for any pitcher, by the way, considering the smart ball for the visitors last night and he should be given plenty of credit as he stood alone, at times between the Radios and defeat. In the pinches he was given super-fastidious support by McQuade; Scruton, Compeau and R. Smith, all turning in stellar efforts. Defensively, except for that freak double inning, the Radios played marvelous ball with McIlroy and Green in their sparkling effort. Sony Grey's three hits should earn some of the veterans on the club sagely, imagine a junior playing his first year in senior company out-hitting proven seniors of years standing. Clancy proved no mystery to the locals, by the way.

"QUALIFYING"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"If I should ever want to marry a girl," said George Rollins, Children's Editor, musingly, "which I'm not saying he meant—while that the thought was quite distant from his mind) "I wouldn't look for any of the story book virtues. I don't believe in any of the old fashioned old-de-pols.

"Such as what?" asked Millicent Burke.

"Well, I don't care particularly if a girl is a good cook—or if she is maternal—or if she can sew on buttons or mend flivvers. What I would want her to be is charming, attractive, alive, good-humored, full of pep—like blind gas can proudly grape around the arm and walk proudly across a ballroom with."

"Such as—?" asked Millicent.

"Such as—yourself," answered George.

Millicent went into a peal of laughter. "Oh, I was a dress model once, you know—and I can walk across a ballroom draped on the arm of a man like nobody's business. Ask of course—."

"Of course, what?" asked George.

"Of course, you are not the sort of thing kind—and I know it was not a proposal you were hinting at—."

"Proposal. Scandalous!" interrupted George, "of course not—."

The minute died silent. For quite naturally this conversation took place in a ballroom. Millicent rose gracefully from her seat, draped her arm about George's arm, and both together floated toward the floor where they soon were lost in the mass of whirling couples.

But not for long. The orchestra was still in the middle of its te-ra-te-rum-boom-boom when the pair walked off the floor. Millicent sat down on Millicent's face and one of disappointment on the countenance belonging to George.

"I'm sorry", whispered George.

Good Excuse

"Oh, it's not your fault," said Millicent. "You couldn't help it if the big oaf stepped right into me and stained my stocking."

Both looked at the rent and it was quite serious. Well, the evening has been drawing to a close anyways—and so they might as well end the dancing.

He drove her home and bade her good bye. "I owe you a date," he said. "I really should reciprocate you for your stocking. You know, I don't expect you to sew up the torn one. I really believe in what I said."

Well, it was as good an excuse as any to give her a call on the phone number.

"I'll call you—when I get you the new pair," was his parting shot.

Within a week the arrangements had been completed and he was to call for her and her home before dinner-time.

Millicent greeted him with a smile—it seemed. She accepted gracefully the new pair of stockings—although she made a mental reservation that they might be more suitable as a style for some other girl that might need them more than she.

George being the guest at her home was somewhat surprised to be informed that dinner had been prepared, but had to agree. He had planned quite naturally to take her to a hotel restaurant.

"How do you like it," she asked him over the dinner table, "the onion soup."

"Pretty good," said George, smacking his lips.

"Well, I cooked it myself," smiled Millicent.

They proceeded with the other courses and George was compelled to admit that even the vegetables addressed the eye with quite tasty.

"I prepared it myself," said Millicent.

They finished the repast and entered the living room. In his pocket, George had two tickets to the theatre but the charm of the room somewhat made him forget them.

"Pray, excuse me," said Millicent, "help your self to the radio—I must look my little brother in before he goes to sleep."

She returned in a few minutes. "I feel," said George, "as if I have known you for a long while. But truth to tell, I had heard of you long before I met you last week. And of course, you filled the bill that very first night."

"But I must tell you," added Millicent, with a gleam in her eye, "that in addition to cooking and being maternal—I have another virtue."

"You're rubbing it in," said George, "but never mind—what's the last of your virtues?"

She pulled out a stocking—and he examined it. They carefully—there was no sign of any ripping.

"Do I Qualify?"

"Are it up yourself!" asked George.

But she laughed back. "I wove it back."

"Well," replied George, "in spite of all three faults—you are still charming and slim and good-humored and full of pep, and I think I will change my mind about proposing—what do you say?"

"I say," she replied, "you must give me at least a few hours to think it over and observe you."

So they spent the rest of the evening chatting and playing and having a generally enjoyable time. Many folks came in and out and he met them. He took out his watch and was surprised to learn it was past 11 o'clock.

"Well," asked George, "what's the verdict—and what's been the test?"

"I have always hated," replied Millicent, "a sloppy man. And I've also hated any man who spoke like you do—even if he didn't mean it—was just covering a lot of bad habits of his own."

"So what?"

"I watched you carefully all evening and never once did I see you drop the cigarette ashes on the floor. I moved the ash trays several times—but still you kept after them."

"So I qualify??"

She stretched her hand and he drew her to him.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair, and I said, Say pop, me and Sid Hunt had a fite today.

That's no bragging matter, pop said. Fighting is a deplorable relick of the barbarous age and in our enlightened civilization we can settle our differences by arbitration and all resort to brutality is impossible. Was yours such a case? Is said and I said, Yes sir, and anyways pop it wasn't quite a fite, but it almost was, pretty near. Sid dared me to touch him and I had to accept the dare, didn't I, pop? I said.

Perhaps so, but at the moment I can't think of any moral, political or religious problem on your part to do so, pop said, and I said, Sure there was, pop, so I touched him on the end of the nose with the end of one finger and then I quick drew a line on the pavement with a hunk of chawk and dared him to step over it.

Did he have the requisite courage and foolhardy daring? pop said.

Meaning did he do it and I said, Sure, he stepped rite over and then he put a matchstick on his shoulder and said it was a chip and dared me to knock it off, he said. Just a couple of young dare devils. Yes sir, and I mocked it off all rite, and just then the other kid lows got tired of waiting and went and to pic up a game of cops and robbers and me and Sid got in it with them, I said, and pop said I'm glad blushed was averted, but I still haven't learned the cause of the threatened hostilities.

Meaning what was we going to be about, and I said O, pop, I forgot now.

Yes fools, well if you remember save the information for your autobiography, pop said.

Meaning he was tired of the subject.

Conducting at through rows of tethered camels, the young Moslem led her to the women's quarters at the caravan's rear. There, smiling, as though to reassure the girl, he departed without speaking.

After a day's rest the camels, ponies and asses, laden with their precious goods, again toiled over the ancient route from east to east. They traveled now by night, for then the air was crisp and dry and the deep sky blazed with stars.

Only halting when the hours for prayer toward Mecca came, two more weeks passed. At last the ever-rolling ocean of sand and the scarcity had been left behind, and the domes of the mosques of Jaga had gleamed in the distance.

Entering through fields of roses and white poppies, past gardens, pale green canals and the buildings of the great Shah Abbas, the scene thrilled Zal, for she knew that misery awaited her at journey's end.

THE RED TIGER

By ALANSON CROSBY

WANTED BY POLICE

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

"Come on; no use standing there like a statue. They won't let us in. Poor old man!"

Mechanically, like one of those robots that go through the motions of a human being without thinking, Judith followed her roommate back to the elevator. It was as though she had been suddenly deprived of the powers of speech or understanding, but could still move her arms and legs. She was so conscious of thinking—only of a dim, blank realization that the disaster she had helped to fan had been fatal, and becoming real.

Sally, mistaking her silence to shock, was more than kind; she was maternal.

"Poor dear!" she said to herself. "It's just one thing after another with you these days. She liked old Stokes for all his gruffness."

"We'll go to the Owl and sit down, and then I'll phone Bob at his morning house," she explained, taking charge of the situation. "Bob will want to know, though he isn't supposed to be on the job till afternoon. He'll find out everything and tell us all about it. I wonder who could have killed the old man and what for. I guess he had a good many enemies."

"You girls better go home," said Bob, standing before them, a half hour later. "You can't stay here all day."

Bob looked tired, as he had a right to after his night's work on the Morning Sun.

"But we want to know all about it," said Sally, pouting.

Bob smiled, grimly.

"So do the police, I reckon. You will just have to curb your lively curiosity, Sallyfire. I know that's a large order for you, but try. Take Judith home; she looks like a ghost. I'll phone you there about noon, and you can come see me at the Metropolitan Restaurant and I'll tell you the latest. Maybe I'll have some news for you then."

Sally saw the wisdom of the plan and agreed, though reluctantly. At one o'clock Bob phoned her that he would meet them at the Metropolitan and half an hour later the three were seated at a table which Bob had reserved.

"I'll us all about it now, Bob," commanded Sally.

"Not until you've had your lunch," said the reporter. "I'm gald to see Judith looking more like herself. What will you have to eat?"

He was looking at Judith keenly as she felt the scrutiny and smiled, rather wanly.

"I'm all right now, Bob," she said. "I was dumfounded this morning—in a trance, I guess, I somehow had a feeling as we came to the office that something was wrong, and then the shock of the news completely upset me."

"She gave the order to the waiter at her elbow and the others followed suit.

"I wonder how about our jobs," said the practical Sally. "I guess they'll give me Skoop. The old man was the head, front and brains of the firm. We so seldom see Mr. Anderson. I wouldn't know he was all the firm if I didn't see his name on the door. Young Stokes is no good. If he's to be the new boss I'm sure the jobs are gone Skoopy."

"Anderson is a good lawyer," said Bob. "Quite fallow; keeps in the background. But he has prepared most of the really big cases of the firm. He'll probably take in a couple of young ambitious lawyers and carry on, so your jobs may be all right, after all." He grinned at Sally. "Anyhow, I won't let you starve, Sallyfire. I've been thinking of setting up a little housekeeping of my own, and I might consider your application as chief cook."

"Me cook!" said Sally, indignantly. "Nomination declined. I couldn't boil a potato, I'll stick to stenoging. If you please."

"And live and die an old maid," said Bob, winking at Judith.

"Let so?" Sally came back at him. "If you think a certain red-headed fresh reporter is the only man in this town that little Sallykins can make goopoo eyes at, you're crazy."

Bob chuckled.

"I guess I'm crazy, anyhow — that explains why I've fallen for you so hard. But we'll save our fighting for another time. I always like to do my domestic bawling in private. Have some more loaf ite, Judith?"

"No thanks."

"I think you've kept us in suspense long enough," said Sally. "Suppose you spill the news. Who killed Mr. Stokes?"

Bob shook his head, and a look of gravity chased the smile from his face.

"I don't know."

"Any suspects?"

Bob evaded the question.

"It as a frightfully brutal crime," he mused. "They found the old man on the floor in a pool of his own blood. He had been stabbing in the chest with a dagger-like paper knife."

Judith shuddered.

"I have seen it often on his desk," she said, "He used to pick it up and play with it when he was excited. It always gave me the creeps."

"Maybe he committed suicide," suggested Sally.

"An unlikely theory," Bob answered. "The room was in considerable disorder, with signs of a struggle. His desk had been rifled, and had been rifled in search of some paper."

"Who found him?" Sally asked.

"The janitor, early this morning."

"When do they think the crime was committed?"

"Around last night. He had been dead for hours when the body was found. The coroner's physician set the hour of death at anywhere between five and eight o'clock last night. It could not be later, as early as five, though, because the file desk was then empty."

Judith and Sally exchanged glances. Judith paled slightly.

"In fact, it must have been after six, because the charwoman came to clean the office at half past five and the old man told her to go away and not bother. At that time he was talking with someone in his private office and the charwoman said they seemed to be 'mad' with each other."

There was an ominous silence for a minute then Sally asked in a whisper:

"Did the charwoman know the man?"

Judith's eyes were on Bob with a stare of intensity. He shifted his own eyes and played nervously with his knife.

"She did not know his name. But she identified him by a picture."

"And it was Randal Spencer!" said Sally, tossing her head, "He was there when we girls left. But that proves nothing. Of course, he had nothing to do with the crime."

"Yes, it was Spencer. Unfortunately, he is the last person known to have been with Mr. Stokes before his body was found." Bob's voice was a trifle harsh.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Sally. "You're getting to be a horrid newspaper—trying to connect Mr. Spencer with the 'Red Tiger' gang and now with this murder. He ought to have you all in jail for slander!"

Bob's face had a grin as he replied:

"No doubt. You might put an ad in the Morning Sun requesting him to come forward and refute his slanderers."

"What do you mean by that?" demanded Sally.

"He can't be found."

In the silence that ensued Judith thought the pounding of her own heart must be heard by the others at the table. Finally she spoke, more to herself than to her friends.

"He couldn't have done it. It is impossible!"

"Sure it is," Sally assented loyally. "Nobody can blame him for keeping out of sight, since the police seem to have made up their minds to hang on him every crime they can't solve. I suppose," she added sarcastically, "he's not quite old enough or they'd accuse him of kidnapping the Dionnes."

Bob made no answer.

"But, Bobby," asked Judith, "have they for connecting him with Mr. Stokes' death beyond the fact that he was in the office at half past five?"

Bob replied slowly, as though he would have preferred not to speak of it:

"Mr. Stokes' body was found in a pool of blood, as I mentioned before. He did not die instantly after being stabbed. He may have lived for some time, during his life-blood ebbing away and powerless to call assistance. But he left a message just the same. It was written in his own blood and evidently intended to give the police the clue to his slayer."

"What was it?" Sally demanded.

"Just the initials of a name—R. S."

"Randall Spencer!" The words came involuntarily from Sally's lips.

Bob nodded. Judith stared straight ahead, as intend to her that the fingers were tearing at her heart.

A newsboy came into the restaurant calling: "Extra! Evening Dispatch! All about the murder!"

Judith's staring eyes rested on the great headlines of the paper he was holding out in his hand:

HEZERIAH STOKES SLAIN. THE POLICE SEEK RANDALL SPENCER

Through the mist that dimmed her eyes she saw two pictures beneath the headlines: one of the old man she had worked for, and one of the young man she loved—she knew it now beyond all doubt—who was accused of his murder.

A NUT IN THE WOODS

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

The week that followed the finding of Hezekiah Stokes' murdered body was a hard one for Judith, unsoftened by the blessed anodyne of work. Most of the time she spent in her room, trying vainly to find forgetfulness in reading, or in mending and pressing Sally's and her rather scant wardrobe. To her roommate's suggestion of movies and other mild forms of entertainment she was politely adamant; she had no heart for them.

Sally early sought out Mr. Anderson to inquire about their jobs. The office would remain closed for at least a week, the lawyer told her, but would reopen eventually. Yes, and Miss Bates would be taken back, if they wished to come. There would be some necessary changes in the firm—as Bob had foreseen—but there would be no shake-up in the clerical personnel.

Judith steadfastly refused to read the newspaper accounts of the crime and of the police's suspicion of Randall Spencer. It somehow seemed disloyal, and Judith had determined that, regardless of everything she would not admit to her mind a thought of his guilt. "The world is against him," her heart said, "but I will be steadfast."

Sally's staunch support of this attitude was a comfort at first, but at length even Sally's confidence in Spencer's innocence seemed to wane. Not that she said so in words but she sensed her protestations of it when the days passed and the newspapers continued to report Spencer missing and all efforts of the police to find him unavailing. Bob Harley avoided all discussion of the matter, but Judith felt that he had become thoroughly convinced of Spencer's guilt, not only of the murder of the invisible leadership of the "Red Tiger" gang. Both Sally and Judith were blindness personified in their attitude toward Judith, but it was the kindness of Sally, and her silence as much, as brutality.

Judith considered leaving Mrs. Heath's rooming house. That lady regarded her with very suspicious toleration now that the police were openly accusing Spencer of various crimes, and Judith knew full well that she was being closely watched by her landlady. But Sally's intervention she would be again invited to leave her home, and, for Sally, Judith would have left without such an invitation. She even suggested that she go and Sally get another girl to room with her.

"Why?" demanded Sally, "Don't you want to room with me any more?"

"Of course I do," Judith replied. "But I hate to have you, Mrs. Heath watches me like a hawk. I guess she suspects me of complicity in all the crimes they've charged poor Randall with—and it sort of offends me, you know. It ought to be a little single room somewhere and cheap, so you would not have to suffer for my friendship."

"Nonsense," said the practical Sally. "Don't pay any attention to that old hellcat. If she ever bothers you again, we'll bob leave. We would, anyhow, but I kind of like this room, don't you?"

"Yes, it's nice" said Judith "and we've been very happy here." She had to work fast to keep back the tears. She wondered if she would ever be happy again.

"It's Bob's night off, and we're going to a table d'hote. Won't go with us, Judie dear?" Sally asked solicitously. "You've been a hermit long enough."

"No," said Judith. "I couldn't enjoy it."

Mrs. Crane then sang a hymn entitled "Prayer for Peace," composed by Geo. A. Kingston of Toronto. The Scripture lesson was taken from John 17, and was read by Mrs. Geo. Hollingsworth.

It was moved and carried that Miss Ruth Emerson be tendered a vote of thanks for the work and responsibility she gave on the quilt. The sum of $5.00 was voted to Sunday school to help defray expenses. The meeting closed with singing the National Anthem and Benediction.

Young Boy Can Write In Welts on Skin

Toronto, June 27.—Toronto has a human slate, Ike John Darch, 17, whose skin responds to a stimulus in the same way a blackboard responds to chalk.

Take a stick and write on John, and what is written takes visible shape in the form of a welt that can be felt when a finger is passed over it. How long the writing remains depends on the pressure applied.

Writing on him doesn't hurt Darch in the least, but he can't do a doctor for an explanation. The doctor wrote a few lines himself and said: "My boy, you ought to be able to make your fortune on it."

John first discovered his receptive skin after a spanking had been administered. Tells set him thinking, and he spent his spare hours writing on himself on his skin. The writing is not a part of him which has not at one time or another carried a message, a word or two.

Orders for groceries never bother him. He just lets them down on his epidermis.

St. Thomas, Ont., June 27.—(CP)—Behind a line of policemen that guarded a small throng of the curious and behind the walls of Elgin County jail from a scaffold shielded from the rain by tarpaulins, and illuminated by electric light, two men dropped to their death early this morning.

Rather than have the younger face a year-old first-degree charge Frank, 53, and his son Fred Temple 21, alias MacTemple murdered a policeman May 7, 1934. Today the Crown called the case closed with the fulfillment of a jury's finding and a judge's decree they be "hanged by the neck until dead."

The father paid the penalty first, dropping through the hole in the wooden scaffold in the women's yard of the St. Thomas jail at 1.06 a.m. E.S.T., ten minutes later Ife was pronounced extinct.

Fred mounted the steps to the seven-foot high platform. Then, official witnesses crowded in the glare of an electric light bulb, at 1.30 o'clock. Thirteen minutes later he, too, pronounced dead.

More Milk from Bovines Is Seen from In-Breeding

Science Turns to Dairy Herds to Speed up Production of Milk

Minneapolis, June 27 (AP)— Science, which has speeded trains, airplanes, and automobiles, is turning its attention to the dairy herds with the hope of making cows produce more milk.

Dr. J. L. Lush of the Iowa State College told the meeting of the American Association for the advancement of science, about it today. In-breeding—the mating of relatives—something breeders would have ridiculed a few years ago, probably is the secret of stepping up the cow's milk production, he said.

The University of Minnesota has experimented some along these lines, with hogs and has attained surprising results. At the Waseca, Minn., experimental station Poland China hogs of the same family have "inter-married" through eight generations.

Such procedure, Dr. Lush said, was selected by him to yield 40 liters of degenerate pigs that would quickly die. However, most of the offspring of the eight generation are alive and healthy. The same thing, he believes, can be accomplished with dairy herds and possibly increase production per cow.

Composer Rips Off Shirt Collar, Writes Names of Music on It

Chatham, Ont., June 27 (CP)— Sigmund Romberg, noted composer of "The Student Prince" and other popular operettas treated Chatham residents to an example of "poetic license."

Romberg, holidaying near here, attended a concert of a Chatham harpist. He decided to send a note to the artist requesting some of his own selections, but was unable to find any paper about him.

Exasperated, Romberg startled the audience by ripping the collar from his shirt. He wrote out his selections on the collar and had it passed forward to the harpist.

The harpist was unable to play any of them.

MRS. COO HOPES TO ESCAPE CHAIR

Few Hours Only Separate Her From Sing Sing Death

Ossining, N.Y., June 27 (AP)— Mrs Coo refused her breakfast today and, from her cell in house of death, pled her innocence, as her attorney sought to lay before Governor Herbert H. Lehman purported new evidence in one last effort to save the doomed woman from electrocution at Sing Sing tonight.

David Slade, her counsel, said Mrs. Coo gave him some information in a lengthy conversation last night which he regarded as vital new evidence.

"This information is from a person in no way connected with the case," Slade said.

Slade said he would go to Albany at once in an effort to lay the new evidence before Governor Lehman.

After refusing breakfast, Mrs. Coo, found guilty of murdering Grace Wright, a handy man about her roadhouse at Cooperstown, believed her cry of innocence.

"I as as innocent of this crime as I could be. As God is my witness. I never killed Harry Wright or anyone else. If Governor Lehman hears all the facts, he couldn't deny me a commutation," Mrs. Coo said.

Men who have studied the legal currents which carry convicted killers through the death house believed she was grasping a straw in her fight against hope for a reprieve was Leonard Scarnici, be-ing under sentence to die tonight.

Insurance Slaying

Mrs. Coo was convicted of the insurance slaying of Harry Wright, handy man at her road house near Cooperstown. She is said to have killed him with a mallet and by driving an auto over the body. Mrs. Martha Cull, a compatriot, received 20 years.

Scarnici's conviction was for the holdup killings of a Rensselaer detective.

The worry and dreadful suspense are almost unbearable," the 43-year-old Chinese said today. Knowing I can't fall asleep until nearly morning and then I get up with a horrible headache.

Still Hopeful

"The only thing that hearten's me is that Governor Lehman is going over the papers and still considering my request for a commutation. I still believe he will do something for me."

Prison officials did not tell her that the Governor customarily makes no announcement when he will decide a case.

'21 VOCATION ACT IS UNDER ATTACK BY DR. F. WALKER

Claims Act Takes Control From Board of Education

COSTS ARE CITED

Cost of Education in Vocational Schools $146, in Collegiates $96

Toronto June 27.—(CP)—Appearing unofficially today before the Ontario Government's Special Committee studying costs of primary and secondary schools in the province, Dr. Frank Walker, member of Toronto Board of Education, advocated rescinding the Vocation Education Act of 1921 and allotting the work to High School Boards, Boards of Education and the Department of Education as in other secondary school work.

The Act, said Dr. Walker, "takes control of education out of the control of responsible members of the Board of Education elected by the people."

Composition Under Fire

"Under this act," he continued, "the handling and promotion of vocational education is taken from the usual authorities and placed in the hands of others in a manner which is contrary to all principles in the management of schools and education in the province of Ontario in the 75 years."

Dr. Walker criticized the composition of this advisory vocational committee which he said, included seven selected members against five elected members.

Cost of education per pupil in Vocational Schools, he said, "was $83, in High Schools $94, Collegiate Institutes $96 and Vocational Schools $146" he said. In 1933 government grants to Vocational Schools were $1,354,794, said Dr. Walker and grants to other secondary schools were $656,01.

Difference of Grants

Grants to Vocational schools for 1933 were more than $43 per pupil, he said, while High Schools and Collegiate Institutes got along with $3 or $4 per pupil.

"This great discrepancy was a fact notwithstanding the truth that the High Schools were carrying on Commercial and Manual work very similar to that which carried on in many Vocational classes," he said.

Referring to the report on Vocational Schools which urged strong "Vocational" bias in the curriculum of academic and vocational schools, Dr. Walker said these "core" subjects—English, History, and Civics, Geography, Science and Mathematics—are all possible and taught as thoroughly in our High Schools as they are in any of the Vocational Schools to turn out people ready to enter industry" said Dr. Minerva Reid, of the Toronto Board.

Take Billions From Gamblers Is Lottery Plan

Washington, June 27 (AP) — Rep. Kenney (D-NJ) will seek a vote at Wednesday's session of the United States Congress on his plan to legalize a national lottery and "take a billion dollars a year away from racketeers and gamblers."

The lottery would be patterned after Cuban lotteries with prizes offered monthly or semi-monthly.

Despite the fact he was unsuccessful last year, Kenney expressed confidence the ways and means committee would approve the legislation and report it to the House floor for a vote.

New Singers and New Beauties, Americans Abroad Found for 'Met'

By ANDRUE BERDING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Venice, June 27 (AP)—The cast of the Metropolitan Opera will have many changes and new beauties—as a result of the European trip of Edward Johnson general manager.

"I have been in England, France, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Italy," the Guelph, Ontario, tenor said today, "looking for young Americans for the Metropolitan and also singing in the operas in these countries under assumed names to keep their own identity which have a foreign origin.

"I am keeping the point of beauty well in mind. When we have to deal with American singers, however, this is not difficult. The average beauty of American singers I have seen on the European stage is good. Being American, they are trying to keep their figures since they have been used to exercise since childhood.

He said he regarded his trip as successful but he could not divulge the names of those to whom he had talked until he had conferred with the Board of the Metropolitan on his return to New York in August.

"Many new artists, he said, will appear, first in the spring opera season, attendance for which will be at reduced prices.

Truck Transportation Decided on as Strikers Denied Train Passage

500 POLICE PRESENT

100 Trucks Required to Move Strikers if Plan Goes Through

By SAM ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, June 27 (CP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police, it was reported in reliable circles today will stop the trek by truck of striking relief camp workers to Winnipeg, next scheduled stop on their march to Ottawa.

Attempting to dodge Federal orders banning riding on freight trains, the strikers called for trucks and automobiles to transport them to Winnipeg. Several offers were being received at Unity Centre which the strikers have been using as a headquarters.

Arthur Evans, one of the strike leaders, said the strikers were prepared to hire the cars and automobiles for the trek if they could get them at reasonable rate. Two thousand men from British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan are in the encampment here and would have to be provided with transportation.

Departure By Nightfall

The strikers planned to leave Regina for Winnipeg today and a meeting has been called for that purpose. Whether the trek by truck would start then or later in the day had not been decided, but the strike leaders planned to move out of Regina before nightfall.

W. T. Wood, assistant commissioner of Royal Canadian Mounted Police declined to comment on reports the strikers would be stopped from using trucks just the same as if they attempted to board freight trains. Special squads from the 500 police gathered here were at the Exhibition Grounds.

HARBOR WEEDS TANGLE UP BOATS

Weeds in the harbor, just like weeds on the corner lots, should be cut or pulled out before they go to seed. That's the only way we'll ever be able to keep them down," commented a waterfront resident today. With the high water this season, already a thick growth of weeds has begun to choke the smaller channels in the harbor, making it difficult for the smaller boats to navigate from shore to shore. Motor boats are being stalled by the weeds entangling the propellers. Volunteer help is being organized this season—born among the boat owners to commence the task of cutting before the weeds seed out.

PAUL HIBBARD IS BURNED AT AIRPORT

W Paul Hibbard, 19 Ritchie Ave, and chief electrician at the Trenton Airport, sustained severe electrical burns about the head and hands when he received the full benefit of a short circuit that occurred while he was repairing a line electrical line in the new administration building at the R.C.A.F. Mr. Hibbard was working atop a ladder when the short circuit occurred and received the full benefit of the voltage, but fortunately preserved presence of mind enough to keep his balance and did not fall to the floor below. Fellow workmen rushed to the assistance and rendered medical attention by Dr. Johnson of Trenton. Mr. Hibbard was able to return home, where he is today progressing nicely. The major extent of the injuries sustained by Mr. Hibbard were severe electrical burns on the hands and one burn on the forehead. Mr. Hibbard will be convalescing for some considerable period, it was stated today.

Failing to swallow the perch, the bass had been unable to dislodge it owing to its extended dorsal fin, and had strangled slowly.

HON. DR. FAULKNER BANQUET SPEAKER

President E. Sandercock Presented With Walnut Gavel

Welcomed to the city by Mayor J. O. Reynolds, delegates to the sixteenth annual convention of the Association of Homes for the Aged and Infirm held in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, Ont., on Tuesday, June 25th, 1935.

Following the welcome by Mayor Reynolds, Mr. Sandercock was then presented with a gavel made from wood taken from the walnut tree grown on the grounds of the Lincoln County Home. The presentation was made in appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. Sandercock as head of the association.

A brief address in which the Mayor and city were thanked for their interest was delivered by Mr. Sandercock.

Following the general business of the association during the afternoon, delegates were then tendered a complimentary banquet in the Belle Hotel, presided over by Mayor Reynolds and assisted by members of the city council.

As chief speaker of the evening, the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health appealed to all to help in the work carried on in Ontario for the aged in institutions.

Trades History

Tracing the history of the work in the houses of refuge in the province, Dr. Faulkner declared it was more a moral obligation upon the government to care for the aged than it was a Christian obligation. Throughout the history of the institutions to care for the aged, it was shown by the speaker that it has been an entirely progressive one.

Dr. Faulkner announced the government would establish a travelling tuberculosis clinic at Belleville, Port William and some other point to be selected in Northern Ontario, soon, he added, may be established in Eastern Canada. He asked for co-operation with the clinics in order to rid the province of that devastating disease.

During the afternoon session Miss M. Harris, manager of the City or Hamilton Home addressed the convention on the subject, "Employing of Practical Nurses and Orderlies," in which she told of progress that is being made in homes, where a system of nurses and orderlies was in effect.

Other speakers who gave brief addresses at the convention and banquet were, S. L. Charlton, Provincial Inspector of Public Institutions, Eva McClelland, manager of the Welland County Home, and John R. Mool, Warden of Wentworth County.

Following the banquet, Mrs. E. Sandercock was hostess at an enjoyable card party held in the hotel.

KIWANIS CLUB CONGRATULATES

Honors Members on Anniversary And on Election

George Griffin, genial and hard working secretary of the Kiwanis Club was congratulated by the members in attendance at dinners in the railway service. George started with the C.P.R. but switched to the C.N.R. and became one of its highest boosters. It was the first time, that the club had had a chance to congratulate Eddie Logan on being elected as president of the Ontario Jeweller's Association and the applause was well deserved. Jack Hathaway, manager of the United Cigar Store in this city, was the booster on the job and told of his business, stating there were 171 stores and that well trained men were accepted. A smile and a thank-you was the best incentive to business and that is practiced in every store. The speaker explained how tobacco was kept moist and invited the members to drop in and say hello at anytime. The winners of the prizes donated were Fred Saunders and Ed. the speaker or the day, Paul Sameson.

Mr. Sameson gave an address on the "Joy of Living" being introduced by the president of the club, Cliff Barnes. Ed. Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Fred Smythe. There was a large attendance of the members out with Phil McKee leading the community singing.

In order to give some underprivileged boy a chance to enjoy a holiday at the boys' camp at Lake Moira, the Kiwanis Club will no doubt take advantage of the offer made by Joe Shortt secretary of the "X" at the luncheon on Tuesday. Mr. Shortt told of the rate for two weeks for those able to pay but for those boys, who could not afford the outing a cheaper rate was given. There is every possibility, that the club will send at least two boys and some of the members are contemplating sending a couple on their own initiative. Only the most worthy will be sent. The boys will stay two weeks and will be under the direction of leaders and a full course of entertainment has been mapped out.

SERVICE BUTTONS USED FOR 'RACKET'

Veterans Ask That Penalties For Misuse Be Fully Applied

Aroused by the fact that transient panhandlers and unauthorized wearers of the distinctive badge are allegedly using war service buttons as a "racket" with which to solicit money from residents of the various towns and cities included on their "beat" to and fro across the country, bonafide veterans of the Great War belonging to the local associated war veterans' organizations may band together in this city as well as elsewhere in a request to the civil authorities for a check-up of wearers of the button.

Many of the possessors of the bronze badge which has been given only to those who have seen actual service on war fronts, it is pointed out, are far too young to have been able to serve in any unit during the great war. Where the buttons have been acquired in the first place has not been learned.

Belleville has not been immune to these allegedly spurious wearers of the war badge. A well-known citizen walking through the Market Square this week was approached by one ragged transient whose youthfulness was apparent.

"Pardon me," accosted the youth, "but could you change a dollar?"

A caustic and hearty voice requested 'change for a dollar' when there was no dollar—only the war veteran to back up his plea for money.

Refused a donation the youth became insulting. Murmuring about the "stinginess" of local residents he backed away from the citizen with black looks and a flood of abuse.

The citizen, wise in the ways of legal lore pointed out that the man could not be arrested for begging owing to the fact that no money was asked for but the war service button was eloquent in his request for funds.

For misuse of the button a standing penalty of $500 fine or six months' imprisonment is still in effect it is pointed out by local veterans.

Fraternity, Unity of War Days Seen at Zone Convention of Canadian Legion Held in City

Trenton Post Wimer of Trophy For Initiation Degree

100 ATTEND

Proceeding Close With Social Evening at Memorial Hall

Old Soldiers never die.

Eighteen years of peace in the workaday world of factory, farm and office may have mellowed, and grayed the temples of those who answered the call to arms in the hectic war years of the recent great conflict, but the spirit still glows undimmed beneath the bemedalled breasts of those who came back. The same fraternity and unity that enabled the Canadian Corps to cover itself with undying glory is as yet evident.

Nowhere was this more evident than at the banquet and dinner tendered in Memorial Hall in the city last evening to members of Zone 16 of the Canadian Legion who gathered here at the zone convention of the district from Trenton to Gananoque, Picton and Marmora. Represented were delegates from the various branches of Trenton, Napanee, Kingston, Picton, Marmora and Verona. With individual Legionnaires from points far outside the district.

The Zone convention held in this city for the first time, was one of the largest and most successful on record.

Trenton a Winner

Gathering at the Armouries during the afternoon, three degree teams, made up of members of the Belleville, Trenton and Marmora branches entered into competition for the large silver cup donated by Comrade Ken. Couch, Trenton. Mr. Couch's own Trenton team was announced the winner of the competition, judged by Mr. Couch and the Rev. Beaudry Payne. The competition in which several new members were initiated to the Legion was declared one of the closest yet held.

Following the exemplification workshy the teams, general business occupied the attention of the session in the Armouries during the later part of the afternoon. One resolution, which was unanimously endorsed will be sent the Provincial Commang of the Legion to be presented at the coming annual convention, to be held in London, Ont., on July 31 to August 3, asking that wreaths supplied the Legion for all occasions be of better quality.

Well over one hundred visiting and local members of the Legion assembled in Memorial Hall shortly after seven o'clock in the evening for the memorable banquet arranged by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the local Branch. Music, novelty features, songs and community singing interspersed with brief addresses of distinguished visitors who marked the occasion which was presided over by Comrade David Bradford, president of the Belleville Branch. Included among the guests at the head table were Captain R. S. C. Sisler of this city, representing the honored guest, Lieut.-Col. Rogers Vanderwater, D.S.O.; Rev. Beauchamp Payne, R.A.M., Wilberley of the R.C.A.F. Camp, Trenton, and one of the featured entertainers of the evening; Padre and Chapiain Rev. A. L. Geen and Lt.-Col. Geen of Belleville.

Scene from the highly amusing farce "Mary Jane's Pa", in which are starred Alice Middleton and Guy Kibbee at the theatre for the balance of the week.

Plea For Unity

In his brief address, Comrade Allen of Toronto, pleaded for complete unity among veterans of the Great War now comprising the associated returned men's organizations. Comrade Allen, former president of the Toronto Branch, and now active in the work of assisting returned men with pensions problems, gave a vivid outline of the troubles many "burnt out" veterans have in gaining recognition. Further amendments to Pension Acts now in existence which are expected to be passed in the near future will do much toward assisting returned men in this category, he intimated.

"The 'burnt out' soldier is only entitled to thirty per cent disability we are told by the doctors, because more than that if granted might ruin him for other occupational work," declared Comrade Allen. "We are attempting to have something done about this."

"Seventy per cent of the chronic pensioners which renders many returned men unfit for work has been caused by his overseas service", he added.

Regarding a suggested amendment to the War Veterans' Allowance Act which if put in effect would grant assistance to all returned men over the age of fifty years, Comrade Allen pointed out that this was not a true criterion of the condition of any man applying for pension assistance.

"Many of our men at thirty-five years are in far worse condition than other returned men at sixty. This is another problem that is receiving the attention of officers of the Canadian Legion".

Tough Years Ahead

Comrade Allen left a message with the local branch "During the next three or four years you will face a tough proposition as you did back in war years when you fought to gain these privileges for which you now thank. Only by unity in a body if we are to even hold these privileges which even during the past year or so have been gradually tightening up."

Among the entertainers who assisted the Legion in making such a commendable success of the convention were—R. S. M. Wibberley; James Bakker; Harold Howard; Sidney Hector; Bruce Sills; Lt. Jobson, song leader and others. Mr. Leo B. Riggs assisted during the evening on the piano.

Comrades president David Bradford, Chas. Jeffs, and Geo. Eliarby of the local Branch assisted by ladies of the local auxiliary were prime movers in the work of organizing the convention and making complete preparations for the enjoyable visit of outside members.

TINY, BUT IT'SWORTH $30,000

This "portrait of Mrs. Pemberton" brought £30,000 when it was put on the London auction block by J. P. Morgan. It was purchased by Lord Duveen. The miniature had been executed on the back of a playing card by Hans Holbein, who lived during the time of King Henry the Eighth. It was one of the gems of the financier's collection.

Police News

Arthur Stunke, Kitchener, Ont., trucker informed the local police of the theft of two crates of eggs yesterday. According to Stunke's story he had parked his truck in the downtown area loaded with merchandise on a return trip to western Ontario. Stunke then proceeded to a local restaurant, where he procured a meal. Upon his return to the truck two crates of eggs were found missing. The eggs were valued at ten dollars. No suspicious looking characters were been loitering around the truck, it was stated.

Local police kept an all night vigil at the garage of Bridge and Front Sts. last night in hopes of recovering a stolen Chevrolet sedan, taken in Cobourg early last evening. The vehicle carried Ontario licence plates number V-5473 and was not reported found at noon today.

Six tranients slept in the cell block at the police station last night free from the drizzling rain that fell. Traffic Officers today were informed of a hit and run driver at the intersection of highway No. 14 and the old Massassaga road. According to neighbors residing nearby, an unknown motorist apparently swerved from the road and struck the fence at this point, demolishing it for some considerable distance. The alleged hit and run vehicle apparently was not damaged sufficiently enough to impede its progress as no signs of such a motor vehicle were found when traffic off icer Ervine arrived on the scene this morning. This is the second time in a few months that the identical same accident has occurred. Traffic police are of the opinion that the damage is being done by motorists, who are travelling south on highway No. 14 and fail to make the lefthand turn to proceed east on the Massassaga Road, as in both cases the damage has been to the fence on the south east corner of the intersection.

St. Lawrence Baseball League Faced With Serious Matter

Ottawa, June 27 (CP)—St. Lawrence League baseball teams today faced the prospect of finishing the season minus the services of several players following action of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada in refusing to grant amateur cards to any athlete competing in that circuit.

Notice of the union's decision to withdraw their support from the St. Lawrence League was embodied in a letter to W. F. Pattis, President of the league, and signed by H. Gordon Young, Secretary, Ottawa and District Branch of the A.A.U. of C.

The letter follows:

"We certainly are not satisfied that the imported baseball players are coming in from the United States to play for the love of the game, particularly when there are so many leagues in their own country," said the letter.

TUBERCULOSIS CLINIC AT BELLEVILLE

Announcement of the establishment at Belleville of a travelling tuberculosis clinic for the district, along with other clinics at Ottawa, North Bay and Fort William is proof of the energy with which the Provincial Minister of Health, the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, M.P.P., for West Hastings, has attacked the problem of conserving the health of the people of Ontario. The new program is one which will be endorsed by every citizen of this province and by the members of the medical profession.

Tuberculosis is no longer the fearful disease it once was, for science has shown marvellous success in lowering the tuberculosis rate. Hospitals and sanatoria have proven that the disease can be cured and research has developed that the malady can be wiped from the face of the earth.

The clinics come as a result of the decision to go to the root of the conditions which cause the disease. They will reveal the first signs of trouble of this kind and be the cause of signs of incipient disease in an individual, the examination will lead to cure after a brief treatment. With the four clinics in strategical locations throughout the province, most effective work can be done. The travelling clinic is a unique one, bringing ready diagnosis without loss of time to the door of the person who may have incipient disease and early diagnosis means certainty of cure.

The sense of responsibility of being one's "brother's keeper" in this matter of health is something for which the Government and the Department of Health which is under the direction of the local member merit the appreciation and gratitude of everyone regardless of politics. It is perhaps the most important work of the Government to preserve the health of the people and the Minister, Hon. Dr. Faulkner, has shown that he is thoroughly alert to the march of progress in scientific research and in the application of the new medical knowledge to the health problems of the people. This development of disease prevention and research work today is one of the marvellous signs of an age which feels the social responsibility as probably no previous age in history has felt it.

In the district in which the clinic at Belleville will serve, the tuberculosis rate has been almost three times as high as it has been in the Niagara district where prevention work has been carried on for the past decade and a half. If this work has been so successful in that district it can be equally effective in this part of Ontario. Belleville is centrally located for this work and has the advantage that it may be operated in part in conjunction with the service rendered by the local hospital.

This district cannot but be grateful that one of the clinics is to be located here. Those who know what the inroads of this disease have meant in the past, before the modern medical warfare was carried against the disease in its primary stages, realize that any public criticism unnecessitated in such prevention work is warranted because of the salvation of many who might otherwise fall victims to the malady which was once so fearful to the people in name as well as in its results.

PASSENGER SERVICE OVER OCEAN

Next year is promised the opening of a trans-oceanic airline which will link Liverpool and New York with a passenger service.

News to this effect appeared in the press a couple of days ago. That the result may prove to be true is something for which the world may well hope as it will be a proof of the dependability of aircraft on a route which has never been attempted commercially. That the ocean service will come, no one doubts, but that the hope it will come next year caused some persons to doubt is too good to be true.

The development of services to tie the lands across the great seaways is something the world is looking forward to but does not like it to be near as yet. Yet some one has to inaugurate it.

Once a service is inaugurated will come the real test. If there is a record of flights without mishap or with only reasonable regularity, the service will be accepted by the world and people will begin to plan their travels by this conveyance. Today planes are flying in all parts of the world over lands and such bodies as the British Channel but oceanic service has been left to the last to be developed.

The plane of today is not today's new car, much more perfect mechanically than those that fought in the war; just as today's car is so far improved on models of a few years ago. Dependability is so much greater that nearer and nearer the entire conquest of the world comes—it will come with the linking of the continents across the ocean.

THE CALL OF HOME

(Written during the hot weather in India)

Oh sun, unveiled, so cruelly glaring,
Whose steady heat, intense, unsparing,
Sucks dry fair Earth's now withered breast!

Can it be you who once caressed
Me, oh so gently, far away
In the dear homeland, one spring day!
When your warm breath the cool breeze tempered,
And o'er your face the soft clouds scampered?

Oh brazen sky, so baldly blue!
Was it the same canopy, mild,
That o'er me spread its gentle hue—
Cool grey, or windswept, wild?

Instead of hard, baked earth I see
A tumbling burn, rippling in glee
Through a fair glen, where, newborn,

Primrose and violet, Snowdrops keep
A'nodding to the bluebell's bow,
Or autumn's gold wonders now
Visualise—no more sweet clean
And clad in heather's purple sheen.

Familiar things to you who ne'er
Have been exiled from Scotia's shore,
Ah! If I could their beauties share
Again, and roam no more.

—Elizabeth Beveridge,

ANOTHER UPSET in the sporting world, Carnera "The Man Mountain" is badly upset by one Joe Louis, of Detroit, who entered the professional pugilists ranks one year ago and knocked out eighteen known and unknown pugilists on his way to battle Carnera. Joe Louis is a colored boy of twenty-one years, and if he keeps his head and is not stopped by the color line, may achieve championship honors. This time the sporting writers of Uncle Sam's domain were one hundred per cent. right, which balances their placing of Jimmy Braddock in the also-ran class before he accomplished the impossible and polished off the Pacific Coast one-ring clown circus, Maxie Baer.

EXAMINATION DAYS are anxious days for the students now facing this ordeal in Belleville Collegiate Institute and other examination centres. However, it will soon be over, then the long days of vacation which will accentuate the joy of victory or temper the sting of defeat. Victory is always sweet but sometimes temporary failure is the finest tonic one can have in beginning the battle of life. Easy success tends to create carelessness, and a contempt for the things that are, a moral slackening all along the line, while temporary failure, a setback, although disheartening, is to the soul dominated by courage, just a spur to greater and more systematic effort. Whatever happens take this for your watchword in the battle of life: "I am the Master of my fate. I am the captain of my soul."

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

Before dawn the following day we started, and at the height of noon reached the well of, our desire. It was about thirty feet deep, stone-stepped, ancient and choked. The water was slightly brackish, but not ill-tasting when drunk fresh; though it soon grew foul in a skin. The valley had flooded in some burst of rain the year before, and therefore, contained much dry and withered pasturage; to this we turned our camels, to crop industriously till nightfall, then we watered them again, and pounded them under the bank a half-mile from the water, for the night: that bearing itself well unmolested in case raiders should need it in the dark hours. Two sentries heard no one.

As usual we were off before dawn and reached our stage, Khabr Abil, just before sunset, after a dull ride over a chiller plain. The good was of this year's rain, good for camels and just possible for men. Two days ago had thought to find Howeitat here, but the ground was grazed bare and the water fouled by their animals, while they themselves were gone. Auda, assured by their tracks, said he could find none: the wind-storms had swept in and face into clean new ripples. Auda, in fact, was right, away northward, we should find them.

The following day, despite the interminable lapse of time, was only our fourteenth from Jefer: and the sun rose upon us again marching, over flats of limestone gravel, towards a distant corner of the Great Nefudh, the famous belts of sand-dune which cut off the Howeitat from the Syrian Desert. Palgrave, the Blunts, and Doughty had been amongst the storied travellers had crossed it, and I began to feel a little fear of a thing and not to enter it, and their company; but he growled that men went to the Nefudh only of necessity, when raiding, and that the sea of his highland was full of big camels. Our business was to reach Arfala alive.

So we wisely marched on, over monotonous, glittering sand: and over those were stretches, "chaff" of polished mud, nearly as white and smooth as laid paper, and often whole miles square. Below, far back the sun, into our faces with classy vigour, so we rode with its light raining direct arrows upon our heads, and its reflection glancing up from the ground through our insadequate eyelids. It was not a steady pressure, but a pain sibbing and lapping at one time pilling itself up and up till we nearly swooned; and then falling away coolly, in a moment of false shadow like a cloud we crossing the retina: these gave us a moment's breathing space to store new capacity for suffering, like the struggles to the surface of a drowning man. We grew dazed, answered to one another; but relief crept in slowly, for often we halted for supper, and baked ourselves fresh bread.

After each we crawled for three hours, reaching the top of a sand-ridge. There we slept thankfully, after a bed day of burning wind, dust blizzards, and drifting sand which drew our faces fissures, and at times, in the greater gusts, wrapped the sight of our road from us and drove our complaining camels up and down. But Auda was unshaken about the weather, and whether hot head-wind would delay us a third day about the journey we had not wit nor heart enough to call us early in the morning. We lurched down from the plain of the Sisalta (so called in derision, for its huge size and flatness) before day broke. In the surface-litter of sun-browned flints we found, after a little search with our streaming eyes, but hot and hard going for our camels, some of the last scrub we should see, and sore feet.

Camels brought up on the sandy plains of the Arabian coast had delicate pads to their feet; and if such camels were taken suddenly inland for long marches over flinty or other hard-resisting ground, their soles would burn, and at last crack in a cylinder; leaving cleft, two inches inches or more across, in the centre of the pad. In this state they could march as ever over sand; but, by chance, the foot came down on a pebble, they stumbled and limped as though they had stepped on fire, and in a long march might break down altogether. They were very brave. So we rode carefully, picking our effort with camel and myself in front.

As we went, some little puffs of dust appeared into the eye of the wind. Auda said they were ostriches. A man ran up to us with two great ivory eggs. We settled to breakfast on this bounty of the Nefudh, and looked for fuel; but in twenty minutes found only a wisp of grass. The barren desert was defeating us. The baggage train passed, and my eye fell on the heads of blasting gelignite. We broached a packet, considering it carefully into a fire beneath the egg propped on stones, till the cookery was pronounced complete. Nasir and Auda, busily interested, condescended to scoff at us. Auda drew his silver-hilted dagger and chipped the top off a first egg. A stink like a pestilence went across the desert. Auda fell backwards, rolling the second hot egg before us with gentle kicks. It was fresh enough and had no smell. We dug out its contents with the dagger on to the flint-flakes which were our platters, and ate it piece-meal; persuading even Nasir, who in his life before had ever tasted only such as egg-meal, to take his share. The second egg was sour enough and strong, but good in the Bisalta.

Zaal saw an orry; rode after it and killed it. The better joints were tied upon the baggage camels for the next halt, and our march continued. Afterwards the greedy Howeitat saw more orry in the distance and went after the beasts, who foolishly ran a little; then stood still and stared till the most daring runner, and he late, ran away again. Their while shining bodies showed clearly against the dark magnification of the mirage, they winked each move to us from afar.

I was too weary, and not fit sporting, to go out of the straight path which our camels kept in the world; so I rode after the caravan, which my camel overhauled quickly in the long hot reaches. At the fall of it were my men, walking. They had shot some of the orry animals, but would be dead before evening, if the wind blew stronger, but were leading them in hand in hope of this coss were shattered last night when the cuff of his trousers caught in the machinery of the plane's 550-horsepower motor and drew his leg towards the propeller.

In a baseball match between the Ontario of this city and the team from Perth the Belleville team won, the score being 8 to 2. To Freddie Boyce the locals owe much; his clever pitching kept the Perth sluggers within bounds. The batteries were—Ontario, the Belleville team: Mills, Guyer, Gerow, Stark, Pegg; Hollister, Little, Symons and Knox.

Mrs. Charles Campagne of Avondale brought to the editorial room of the Daily Ontario today a box of new potatoes. The tubers are as large as good-sized hen's eggs showing remarkable development for this time of year. The abnormally cool season has evidently not retarded the growth of the potatoes for these were not transplanted but have lain in the ordinary manner in the early spring.

Mr. J. T. Osborne, a well known resident of this city who for some years conducted a leading grocery store here, left today to make his home in Calgary. His many friends regret to have him leave the city.

Strawberries were fairly plentiful on the market this morning and sold in some instances at four boxes for twenty-five cents.

Mr. Sydney Dettor, one of the best known musicians in Belleville in musical circle, will leave shortly for New Westminster, where he will take a lucrative position in the musical world.

Mr. W. W. Brown, president of the Belleville Y.M.C.A., will address a meeting of the members of the Kingston association Sunday afternoon.

One of John Lake's hacks when returning from meeting the night express got into the excavation at the corner of Victoria street and railway and upset. The hack was damaged but the three passengers were badly shaken up.

The Rev. J. A. McCamus and family left today for their new home in Norwood.

50 Years Ago

June 27th, 1885

It is our duty to chronicle the death of another esteemed and worthy city missionary, the Rev. Richard Jones, which occurred at his farm east of the city early this morning. He first appeared before the people of Belleville eight years ago as pastor of the Bridge Street Methodist church. After filling the position for three years with much success and great zeal and fidelity to the cause of Christianity, he resigned together with his ministerial brethren at the start he was alone and had only about $40 in his possession. One of the first supporters was Mr. E. W. Rathbun, who gave him free use of his office at the wharf in which to hold his meetings. The ministers of the city gave him ready aid and gradually the success of his labors became apparent. His was essentially a city mission and great assistance was sought from none and whatever aid he received was voluntarily contributed. In the year 1881 he undertook the erection of the chapel on Dundas street, and later purchased considerable property here and a handsome residence in the city, which he cultivated for the relief of many for whom he had undertaken to aid. In all he did self was entirely ignored, against the energies of his life in elevating the poor and unfortunate and he was eminently successful. He was in every sense of the word the poor man's friend, and it will be no easy task to find a person to take up and continue his work. He had reached the age of fifty years. He was a member of Belleville Lodge No. 1 I.O.O.F. and the funeral will take place under the auspices of that order. The widow and two young sons survive.

James Alexander, Loses His Leg in Prop of Hydroplane

Toronto, June 27.—(CP) — His leg amputated above the ankle after an accident in a new hydroplane of his own invention that he hoped one day would prove a boon to Ontario Forest firefighters, James Alexander, 52, fought for his life in the hospital today.

Unemployed for two years and with a wife and two small sons to support, Alexander's hopes of success were shattered last night when the cuff of his trousers caught in the machinery of the plane's 550-horsepower motor and drew his leg towards the propeller.

groups, a crowd of 75 or 100 people. Royal Canadian Mounted, Provincial, County and City Police, in strong, light-flipped men surrounded the Court House grounds.

They did not need to speak. Their very presence informed sensation-seekers they would not be allowed to approach nearer to the scene of Regina's second hanging in 35 years. Locale of the first hanging was the same and, through some macabre coincidence, the executioner was also a double one. It was carried out, Tuesday, June 18, 1895, upon William D. Walker and John Hendershott, two township farmers, for the $5,000 insurance murder of W. H. Henderhott, nephew of the condemned man of the same name.

The town bell had just tolled one o'clock. A few minutes passed and then, from inside the courtyard echoed a dull thud.

Task Completed

A few minutes later—32 according to the official time—they heard another sound. A dull roar was all. The executioner had completed his grim task. The crowd made no display, no comment. Each had his own thoughts, and a moment later they quietly dispersed.

Both father and son went to their death quietly, according to word reaching newspapermen outside the prison—Sheriff Brown, the orders to witness the executions.

Their last act was to attend mass in the death cells, sung by their spiritual adviser, Rev. Father Wilfrid O'Rourke.

Twelve minutes after the younger Tremblay had been hanged, Father Ian D. Cameron issued the following statement:

"Frank Tremblay, alias MacTemple and Percy Allen, alias Robertson, were executed this morning in the Woman's Yard of the Sk. Thomas' jail in accordance with the sentence pronounced by Hon. Mr. Justice W. J. Doherty at the Spring Assizes here last March.

"Frank Tremblay was the first to die, going to the gallows at 1.06 a.m. After examination by Dr. D. L. Ewin, jail surgeon, he was pronounced extinct at 1.18 a.m.

"Percy Allen, alias Fred Temple then took place at 1.30 a.m. and he was dead at 1.42 a.m. Father Cameron later—

Few Witness Executions

"The only persons to witness the execution were the Sheriff of the County, the Governor of the Jail, Major Percy Ermatinger; the jail physician, the spiritual adviser of the condemned men, Rev. Father Wilfrid T. O'Rourke, and three of the reporters.

Sam Edwards, Toronto, acted as executioner.

"Both executions were completed without any delay or mishap."

The Coroner's jury, under Acting Coroner Dr. J. C. Curtis, was empanelled at 9 a.m. The jurors, nine in number, follow: Ben Morton, Harry Clark, Ralph A. McCully, George Winter, Percy A. Locke, Albert Stipp, Gordon Roberson, William Hammersley and Thomas Fryer.

After they have completed their function it is understood the bodies of both men will be released early in the morning to the family and to the church for burial.

Explain Death

Their executions expiated the death of Constable Colin C. McGregor in Temple home, the officer, with Sergeant Sam McKeown and Sergeant Bert McNally of the Michigan Central Railway police attempted to serve the warrant. In a scuffle the wounded McKeown and Frank Temple a relative of the latter, fatally shot Gregor fatally wounded.

The Tremblay appeal in Toronto last month was dismissed. A plea of clemency directed to Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, was later rejected.

A group of Toronto artists, headed by Sir. W. Wyly Grier, President of the Royal Canadian Academy, appealed to Mr. Guthrie also, when their attention was drawn to drawings of the younger Temple, made while he was in jail, but they failed too.

'Y' Conducts Free Swimming Campaign for Non-Swimmers

Those Between Ages of 10 to 15 Years Are Eligible to Join

At their regular meeting held on May 17th the Board of Directors of the local Y.M.C.A. gave their sanction to the start of the Association to conduct a free swimming campaign for boys living in the city who are unable to swim, with the holidays about to begin, it was deemed advisable to launch the campaign as early in July as possible and with this in view the office at the Y.M.C.A. will be prepared to accept registrations during the week of July 8rd to 6th.

All boys between the ages of 10 to 15 years inclusive who are unable to swim will be given six free swimming lessons at the Y.M.C.A. commencing July 8th. If the group is sufficiently large to warrant the three divisions the boys will be taken in age groupings as follows. Boys 10 and 11 years, boys 12 and 13, boys 14 and 15 years of age. If however, the enrollment is not large as anticipated, there will be only the two divisions. All boys who wish to take advantage of this opportunity to receive free swimming instruction must fill in one of the coupons which will be found in this paper, with of course the permission of their parents and hand it in at the office of the Y.M.C.A. before the 18th of July and they will be advised as to when to come for their first lesson.

All instruction will be under the direction of Ralph Morden the physical director of the local association and he will be assisted by members of the Association Swimming Club. The boys who come in for instruction will be given every possible encouragement to learn to swim as well as the most up-to-date method of procedure in the process of learning. It is pointed out that this special effort is essentially for boys, who cannot swim at all and not for those who have already learned to swim a little. All boys who enrol and it is later discovered they are able to swim, the same will be dropped from the class which they joined immediately.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"Mary Jane's Pa"

Big Double Feature Program For Capitol's Week-End Offering

What promises to be a veritable feast of cinema entertainment is to be found at the Capitol for the balance of the week. With the engagement of "Mary Jane's Pa" in which are starred those two inimitable comics, Aline Mackahon and Guy Kibbee and a thrilling Western featuring Buck Jones, called "When a Man Sees Red."

"Mary Jane's Pa" is bound to delight the most blase movie fan, for it contains all the elements that go to make up a successful picture. It is a story of the tearful nature, played by Guy Kibbee, born with wanderlust in his heart. He leaves what he thinks is a comfortable home to his wife and children, hops a freight at night and disappears. Finally, after many years, he returns to his home town and the printing office closed and his wife and family gone, no one knows where.

He wanders from town to town, comes across a little lost waif takes her home, only to discover that it is his own child, with his wife running another paper and much interested in another man and in politics. Following many dramatic and tense situations the story closes in a most touching and satisfying climax.

Besides Guy Kibbee and Aline McMahon, who can always be counted on for an evening of laughs and humor, there are Tom Brown, Robert McWade and other prominent players in the cast.

For those who want real "human" adventure on the screen the management presents the hard-riding Buck Jones in a picture entitled "When a Man Sees Red." The Indomitable Calm it is the most thrilling picture in which they have ever presented in this adventurous individual. With him is a supporting cast that is the strongest he has ever been surrounded with. Prominent among them are Dorothy Revier, the charming Peggy Campbell Le Roy Mason, handsome villain and other expert heavies.

AT THE BELLE
"Public Hero Number 1"

Turns Searchlight on Secret Service in Combatting Crime

Reproducing a "face lifting" operation by make-up. Building a state penitentiary-filming running fights between gangsters and secret service operatives at a speed of seventy miles an hour, driving an automobile through a flooded river —these are just a few of the difficult locations and technical details that went into the making of "Public Hero Number 1" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of the fight of the secret service against organized crime which comes today to the Belle Theatre.

Stage Desperate Battle

Some of the most amazing thrills and automobile pursuits and battles ever filmed went into the new picture. Camera cars, carrying portable sound-recording apparatus as well as cameras, sped down traffic-protected roads at breakneck speed keeping two cars in range as the players staged a desperate battle. Cables connecting microphones between cars and the portable recording machine to record dialogue, shots, and the roars of motors in the thrilling chase episodes.

For the first time in the history of make-up, it was used in this picture to duplicate a "Lifted" face. Benito Calleli, stage star of "Small Miracle" was induced to have a surgeon so disguise him, by artificial means, kept a secret, the muscles of his face were lifted, exactly as is done in plastic surgery, in a make-up that required four weeks of experimenting. Plastic surgeons, called in to examine the result, declared the simulation a perfect one.

The story based on actual cases, reports and happenings in the government's war against organized crime, was filmed with every attention to authenticity. The prison break scene, in which Chester Morris and Calleli foiled up wrecking and prison board and escape in a prison car, closely duplicates the original detail, and actual escape that recently figured in newspaper headlines. The trailing of the disguised public enemy, a dramatic factor in the story, was likewise dramatized directly from official reports and newspaper accounts.

The Romantic Angle

"Public Hero Number 1" deals with the pursuit of a notorious public enemy by a government operative, with the weight of the secret service behind him. Much of the action occurs within a state penitentiary and its pulse-stirring episodes including the sensational jailbreak, are said to be the most realistic and exciting scenes of prison life to be photographed since the memorable picture "The Big House" in which Chester Morris scored one of his first big hits. Counterbalancing the more grim aspects of the narrative is a romantic angle in which Morris and Jean Arthur overcome a dramatic obstacle to the fulfilment of their romance. The cast is headed by Lionel Barrymore, Chester Morris, Benito Calleli, Jean Arthur, Lewis Stone, Paul Kelly, Sam Baker, Paul Hurst and George E. Stone have prominent roles. A funny All-Star Comedy Variety Show and Tumor's Rhumba orchestra, introducing music that soothes and haunts and ripples precede the feature offering.

FOXBORO PLANS TWELFTH PARADE

Members of the Orange Society of Foxboro village are making extensive preparations for the 1935 celebration of the Battle of the Boyne on the 12th of July. Members of the society from the city and district will go that day gather in the village and will be royally entertained. The day will be a full one with a parade, speeches by prominent members of the order, sporting events, competition for prizes for the best dressed lodge, largest lodge on parade and best fife and drum band. It is expected that it will be the greatest turnout held in this district for some years. In connection it may be stated that next year the celebration will take place in Belleville and already many lodges have signified their intention of being present. Every effort will be made to make this a day long to be remembered in the history of Orangeism.

For Clyde Beatty, the greatest and most fearless wild animal trainer ever known will arrive in person, with his newly recruited congress of jungle beasts, with the Great Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty Circus, for performances at 2 and 8 p.m. in Belleville, Tuesday, July 2.

His act, conceded the most breath-taking and thrilling ever offered the public, will be enacted before your eyes.

Armed only with a whip and a chair as a protection against the snarling creatures, he will put the tigers through their paces in the great circular, all-steel arena, under the big-top at each performance.

Clyde Beatty will demonstrate his uncanny power over the "big cats" as he fearlessly disarms the maddening clawing beasts with a revolver, and perform at his command.

The famous Clyde Beatty is but one of many acts, displays and novelty numbers to be seen with the famous Cole Bros. circus this season, which recently concluded a five year tour of Europe.

Circus day will be inaugurated by an immense street parade to be seen on the downtown streets at 11 a.m., preceding the initial performance of this the world's newest big show. One thousand men, women and horses will be seen in the picture-scope cavalcade. Trumpeting bands, rumbling wagons burnished with pure gold numbering 100 will be seen.

ALLEN KING'S MIXED GROUP OF WILD ANIMALS—NATURAL ENEMIES

Lions and royal Bengal tigers are natural enemies as well as leopards, black-pumas and hyenas. It requires months of unceasing patience and training so that they may become reconciled to remain in the same cage without mortal combat.
In the long history of the circus and the training of wild animals there have only been several trainers who have succeeded in working a great mixed group of Nubian lions, royal Bengal tigers, pumas, jaguars and hyenas. Allen King is this season presenting with the Cole Bros. Circus, the largest group of varied cat animals ever exhibited.
This great mixed group of wild animals has been assembled the past several years by Allen King. At the Chicago world's fair last summer more than seven million spectators viewed his act. During the past winter he has augmented it with newly recruited jungle animals. Followers of the circus declare it to be one of the greatest wild animal acts in all earth's history—nearly two score of varied animals, being shown in the cage of fury.
Allen King, takes very little stock in the theory of the power of the human eye over wild beasts. The organ plays an insignificant part he thinks. It is the power of the man behind the eye and the qualifications he possesses that are efficacious.
"It is a pretty thing to say, and that is all," Allen King said. "The man who wants to subdue a wild beast has to be fearless and go about his task in a courageous way and of course the eye plays its part. The man who attempted to handle a wild beast that is not chained, with nothing else than a fearless eye would be in a pretty bad hole, though. What the man must have is a good heart, plenty of pluck and unceasing patience. The secret of successfully handling wild beasts is to become imbued with confidence that all wild animals are cowardly, especially if they belong to the cat family. If you are not afraid and you know how to do it, it is easy enough."
The Cole Bros. Circus will be exhibited in Belleville Tues. July 2 at 2 and 8 p.m. Doors to the zoological collection will be open at 1 and 7 p.m. Cole Bros. free street parade, greatest ever presented, costs nothing to see. It takes place at 11 a.m. preceding the initial exhibition of the circus.

FRANK TEMPLE BORE NO GRUDGE

Brief Farewell Note Sent to Sergeant Mc-Keown

St. Thomas, Ont., June 27.—(CP)—One of the last acts of Frank Temple, executed this morning with his son Fred, for the murder of Constable Colin McGregor, was to send a message of peace to Police Sergeant Sam McKeown.
It was learned today Temple sent to see Sergeant McKeown but this request was denied. He then asked Sergeant McKeown be told he (Temple) bore no grudge against the sergeant.
McKeown received the message during the night when he was on duty. It was McKeown, who accompanied Constable McGregor to the Temple home to arrest Fred Temple, son, for theft of a bicycle and he was the officer who argued with Fred Temple not to carry out his threat to shoot the officers.
McKeown clinched with Fred Temple and fired in echo that wounded Frank Temple as he fled after shooting McGregor and wounding McKeown in the arm. McKeown was complimented by Justice Henderson at the trial for his bravery and patience in dealing with the Temples.
Quietly and without any public display the bodies of the Temples were removed from the county jail at six o'clock this morning, taken to the Holy Angels burying grounds and with a simple prayer by Rev. Father O'Rourk interred in separate graves. Members of the family and jail officials were the only one present outside the priest and the undertakers.

NO MORE TEARS OVER ONIONS!

Dr. Lloyd C. Shanklin, New York, president of the United Brotherhood of Vegetarians, holds an onion so that Dr. Irene Austinn may smell it. After many sniffs, Dr. Austinn agreed that at last Dr. Shanklin had given humanity in general and onion lovers in particular a long-sought boon—the onion that doesn't smell. Dr. Shanklin contends that his method of cross-breeding destroys the odor-producing sulphurizes the onion. He says that it is the sulphur content alone that irritates the breath and causes the eyes to water.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, June 27.—(CP)—Shares changed hands in a little better than the recent average volume on the mining section of the Toronto Exchange today, the average of 100 prices pointing very definitely in either direction. Some activity and special reasons caused a shading of prices in a couple but these were offset by strength elsewhere. On the whole senior golds were barely firm while much of the secondary golds as well as the Base Metals and Silvers presented a steady front.

While secondary golds as well as Base Metals and Silver Shares maintained a general appearance of strength, the senior gold issues were subjected to some price cutting in th early mining session today. The report that Harry Oakes had withdrawn from the Board of Lake Shore Gold Mines, caused a little selling in that issue and the price was off 61 to 220. McIntyre, Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Dome sold down moderately.

Selling of Noranda was less pressured the price came back to $26.00. In the afternoon had a moderately decline on the news that the property would not be re-opened until the price of Silver becomes firmer and the price came back to $25 Canada rallied 10 cents to 2.03 but dropped the gain.

TORONTO STOCKS, CLOSE

Toronto, June 27 (CP)—The industrial section of the Toronto Exchange exhibited a slightly heavy tone today with trade confined to small slide. Narrow losses predominated at the close. The oil group was firmer than by recent sessions and the Rogue stocks were slightly on higher at the close with Distillers Seagrams getting the main attention. Utilities, apart from a minor recovery issues supplied the bulk of the declines.

With only one more session intervening before the market closes for a double holiday, traders were inclined to avoid the taking on of new commitments and the turnover on the industrial section was in small volume. Price recessions were somewhat general on the board by early afternoon.

The new Goodyear preferred shares were in demand with the price holding at 100 and the common steady. Consolidated Smelters, selling ex-dividend, was down a couple of points at 26. Of 21 issues in the group of 34, Brazilian firmed slightly and the Power group variations of ¼ to ¾ appeared. Distillers Seagrams gained two and Walkers was unchanged. Alcohol A eased down. Food and utility shares as well as the steels lost ground.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, June 27 (AP)—Scattered stocks found buyers in today's market but the list, as a whole, showed no definite signs of being in a buying mood.

Gainers or fractions to around a point included U. S. Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Kodak and Bethlehem Steel. The oils were rather heavy, Ancerada losing more than 2 points and Standard Oil of N. J., yielding 1. Among issues unchanged to a little lower were American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, Anaconda, General Motors and Western Union. The latter was two irregular. Transfers approximated 900,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, June 27.—(AP)—The stock market again hovered over the fractional mark today and bullish sentiment for the most part was restrained.

Dome and McIntyre were bothered by tentative selling for which no stocks while International Nickel and Canadian Pacific held comparatively steady. On the curb Lake Shore eased, Consolidated Bonds ruled narrow and quiet. Canadian funds were unchanged at 99 15-16 cents.

U. S. Smelting and Cerro de Pasco advanced about a point each. Improvement was shown by American Can., Low's, Du Pont, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, American Smelting, Western Union and Bank of New York.

Amerada Corp. dropped three points and Continental Oil of New Jersey and California yielded around a point each. Consolidated Gas was off more than two. Union Pacific sagged one.

Board Room Gossip

As reported to Member and Connected by Financial Services.

Read Autsber.

With current prices of $1.88 for Sigma, $1.96 for Lamaque and $19 for No Sigma the need would be behind each Read-Autsber share outstanding is equal to slightly over $2 per share.

The market does not present very much trading opportunities these days with the result that traders are remaining on the sidelines and the only demand noted emanating from investment quarters. Flurries develop in special stocks from time to time but these movements have no "follow-through". Lack of market leadership is essentially responsible for the stagnant market locally in face of a rising and fairly active list in Wall street.

So far in 1935, a number of investment stocks have scored good gains, but none of these have been of sensational character. Considerable discrimination has been necessary in making profitable commitments. The more speculative type of security has not participated to the least in the recovery of the past few months. If we are at the beginning of a bull market, this class of issue will come in for demand when quarters who are now concerned with market appreciation join with immediate income.

Brazilian Traction offers possibilities for the reason that shareholders in time can look forward to resuming dividends. As soon as the exchange situation in that country is cleared up the directors will fix all probability consider the matter of resumption of disbursements. The one with patience, therefore, Brazilian Traction is speculatively attractive.

Canadian Colonies.

London is again buying Canadian Colonies common. That is recognized as a good sign as the bulk of the issue is owned across the Atlantic. Well informed quarters predict that Canadian Colonies common will be on a dividend basis before long. Forecasting what a board of directors might do in such cases is always a hazardous affair. Nevertheless, the price of the stock and the fact that earnings this year are running at the rate of $4 a share, gives one an idea what to expect on the matter of a dividend.

Asbestos Corporation.

Strong English interests have secured what is considered a good-sized position in the Asbestos Corporation common stock. Their average costs is much below the present day market level. For many years Financial Services has held the viewpoint that the Asbestos industry of the Province of Quebec would never be the big prosperous unit the three large producers were consolidated. Some headway along this line was made when Turner Bros. of London bought the Bell Mine and the Keasley Asbestos Company. Further developments may be in the making.

With respect to the prospects of the Asbestos Corporation Limited we shall carry a full story very shortly.

NEW PLANT AT ARVIDA FOR ALUMINUM CO.

Expenditure Will be One Million Dollars—1000 Tons Steel

Montreal, June 27.—Aluminum Company of Canada has commenced construction of a new plant at Arvida, Quebec, involving an expenditure of approximately $1,000,000. The new plant, it is stated, will treat bauxite (the ore from which aluminum is made) by a chemical process successfully used in other countries but not hitherto employed in Canada. Engineering work on the new plant is well advanced and the several contracts, including one for approximately 1,000 tons of structural steel to the Dominion Bridge Company, have been let to firms in Quebec and Ontario. By March of next year, it is estimated, the plant will be ready for operations.

As no bauxite or other ore of aluminum occurs in Canada, supplies of that material for the new plant will be brought direct from British Guiana, about ten cargoes, of which one cargo is now en route, will be imported through Port Alfred on the Saguenay River during the current season of navigation to provide supplies needed before the opening of navigation next year. In future, importations of bauxite will be at a much greater rate, it stated. Due to the fact that the ore can only be shipped into the Saguenay district during the open season of navigation, the cost of storage is an added burden on the finished product.

The construction of the plant should be of great benefit to the Saguenay district as it will give employment to over 1,300 men for from six to eight months. Operation of the plant when completed will give steady employment to about 100 additional men in the Saguenay district.

Butter Market is Firm at Montreal

Montreal, June 27.—Prices were generally steady on the local produce markets yesterday. The weekly auction of butter and cheese was held at the Board of Trade. There were 1,170 boxes of No. 1 Quebec butter and the highest bid was 19c, which was refused. The butter was later sold at a higher figure. There were also offered 1,064 boxes of Quebec cheese, the No. 1 grade at 16¾ to 17¼c.

In the afternoon the butter market was generally quoted 19¼c to 19¾c per lb. for No. 1 in cartels or 1c.l. lots, unchanged from Tuesday's prices. Some, small lots in the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 20c. Finest creamery was 21¼c to 21½c for A-1 grade and 20¾c to 21c for A-2 grade. Fresh eggs were 23c for B, and 21c for C, packed in cartons, and 1c less when bought in case lots. Fresh fowl were 18c, enough A-1 eggs coming in as yet to form a market.

COTTON YIELDS LEAD IN SECOND

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Muirfield, Scotland, June 27 (AP)—Sailing a stiff wind that at times reached gale strength, Henry Cotton, defending titleholder, yielded the lead today in the second round of the Tyrrells Hill open championship to Charles A. Whitcombe, 40-year-old veteran British Ryder Cup team player.

Starting early and escaping the inclement weather that blew up later, Whitcombe covered the Muirfield layout in 68—four under par—for a 36-hole aggregate of 139, while Cotton went out in 35 and then faltered badly on the greens, taking an incoming 39 for a 74 and a total of 143—good for a tie for second place with Alf Padgham, British professional.

Belleville Intermediates Defeat Picton 8-2 Moving To Second Place in Loop

Bud Wilkins, Local Hurler Always in Command of Contest

NICE FIELDING

Cy Barrage Plays Whole Game at Short Without Handling Ball

Behind air-tight pitching by Bud Wilkins, the Belleville intermediates stretched their standing to second position in the Bay of Quinte League, when they defeated the Picton entry on the home ice yesterday afternoon. Wilkins blanked the Prince Edward nine for eight consecutive innings, only to weakened slightly in the ninth as the visitors scored twice. Only twice prior to the last frame was Wilkins in what looked like trouble a jam, he turning around and hurling himself out of these difficulties. The local intermediates fielded well behing their pitcher and hit well with base runners on the paths, scoring eight runs before six frames were terminated.

The heralded Letty Bishop, late of Napanee, exercised the hilltop for the Doyle-led aggregation from Picton, but his reputation meant nothing to the local swatsmiths, who curtled his offering for 10 safeties hits including Murney Green's mighty triple to deep left centre in the sixth. Every member of the Belleville squad fattened his batting average with at least one hit, except Piper Latchford, who capably handled the slants of Wilkins all afternoon. Green, Ethier and Cy Barrage each collected two safeties from the deliveries of Bishop. Wilkins kept the eleven Picton hits well scattered, always having sufficient reserve strength to bear down with men on the runways and halt the parade. Bill Prout, visiting third sacker, big the hitters of the Doyle clan with a double and a single out of three tries. Mighion and Mason Hodgins each collected a brace of singles, however.

Defensively Wilkins turned in an excellent account of his afternoon's endeavours as he handled six fielding chances without a hobble. Harry Moreau in centre played stellar defence ball as did Gero at second and Chuck Barrage at third, both making sensational pick-ups. Ripley incident occurred in the game when Cy Barrage, local shortstop, went through the full innings, without batting a single opportunity to make a play or handle a hit ball. The victory elevates the Belleville intermediates into sole possession of second place in the Bay of Quinte standings, only one game behind the league leading Napanee Gibbards.

By ALANSON CROSBY

A few minutes after Bob had left us, though she were watching me with daily Mrs. Health called up the stairs:

"You're wanted on the phone, Miss Bates."

The old woman regarded Judith with unconcealed suspicion as she ran downstairs, wondering who could be calling her, "It's a man!" said Mrs. Heath severely, much as though she were saying: "You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

Judith's heart skipped a beat as his voice came clearly over the telephone:

"Judith! You know who this is?"

Judith conscious of her landlady's eyes and ears upon her, wondered if Mrs. Heath couldn't hear the pounding of her heart, suffering the name that sprang to her lips but not the feeling that made the one word a caress, she answered:

"Yes."

"I want to see you, Judith. I must see you!"

Perhaps the last time, ever. Will you come? Do you trust me enough to come?"

"Yes, indeed." She dared not say more with Mrs. Heath listening.

"Then walk two blocks, to the corner of Vine and Thirty-fourth Streets. I will be there by the time you can get there."

"All right!" She wanted to say more—to caution him to be very sure to assure him that she believed in him—but Mrs. Heath's presence almost at her elbow forbade. She heard the click as he hung up the receiver.

Without a word to the landlady glaring at her, and without going back to her room for hat or wrap, Judith walked swiftly to the front door and out into the street.

Her heart was singing a tune, "I'm going to see him, I'm going to see him," to the accompaniment of her rapid stride down Vine Street to Thirty-fourth.

A small black coupe drew up to the curb almost as she reached the corner, the door opened and the hand was thrust out to help her in.

They were off at once, down Vine street, out Fifty-first, beyond the city limits, past the Country Club and making 50 miles an hour on the concrete highway. Judith did not ask where they were going. She did not care. She trusted him. She was with him.

"We may be followed," he explained.

"Yes," she nodded.

He turned off the highway on a less used, dirt road. He reduced his speed to 40 miles an hour and drove silently for ten or 15 minutes. Then came to a place where the road forked. He took the right. It was too dark to see, but Judith sensed the fact that it was a more or less sparsely settled section and the road was rough. She did not care. She was with him. She trusted him.

Presently the brakes ground and the car stopped.

"I think we're safe," said Spencer. "If we were followed we've thrown them off the trail. I don't trust that handicap of a chauffeur."

By the glare of the flashlight which he produced Judith made out a small house, little more than a shack in a clearing almost hidden by bushes and trees.

He took her silently in his arms and kissed her long and passionately. She closed her eyes in a delicious ecstasy of surrender.

Finally he drew her down beside him on a rough bench and held one of her small hands in his as they talked.

"And you still believe in me, Judith, in spite of all the newspapers are saying?"

"I do not read the papers," she said, "I believe in you."

"And love me?"

"And love you."

It was a simple, unashamed confession of the obvious.

"And if I love you, Judith, I would not care if it were feared I had lost you. And perhaps I have lost you. Perhaps I will not be able to prove my innocence."

"I shall not lose you just the same."

He pressed her hand a little harder.

"But I cannot let you be sacrificed, dear. They must not know that you have seen me. I shall take you back presently."

"But they will see you," she warned.

"No, if they get their hands on me the fig is up. My only hope of eventually proving my innocence is in keeping out of their clutches."

"I am afraid to have you take me back," she said. "I'm afraid that I will be watching for you. I am almost certain that Mrs. Heath telephoned the police the minute I left the house. For days it has seemed like a cat would be among..."

"I suspect the old gossip, too," said Spencer. "It is even possible that she recognized my voice over the phone when I called the house, though I do not know that she ever heard it before."

"At least she knows that I know you. She was watching at the window the morning you brought me home from the Red Tiger."

"I should not have called you up. I ought to have kept you out of this. But I could not bear longer the thought that you, too, probably, had become convinced that I was a murderous monster . . ."

As soon as I heard your voice, though, I knew that you had not given up all faith in me."

"No," said Judith, "I shall never give up my faith in you."

"The love and trust of a good woman are beyond understanding," mused Spencer. "I could not blame you if you regarded me as all the rest do. The evidence is all against me."

"I do not believe the evidence," said Judith, "whatever it may be. I believe in Hilton Spencer."

"But I must protect you," said Spencer. "You must not suffer for your faith in me. I must take you back before they start to bandy your name about."

"I wish I could drive your car," said Judith. "I could go alone. I am afraid to have you go back. How far is it? About a mile's walk?"

Spencer smiled in the dark.

"At least 30 miles, No, I must drive you back. It is best to better start."

"I would rather stay here with you than have them catch you," said Judith.

"And then they would add 'kidnapping' of beautiful girl to the other crimes they have charged me with," laughed Spencer. "It won't do, dear, darling! I must think of you for me. The least I can do is to protect your good name. I shall take you back."

A PERSISTENT WOOER

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

In a few minutes the black coupe was headed back toward the city limits and Judith's heart was lighter than it had been since the first day the stigma of suspicion, of guilt, was dashed on the man she loved. Some day he would prove his innocence, and the world, so quick to condemn him, would mark him "unacceptable" again with the same easy complacence with which it had turned against him. The world's opinion, did not matter. She knew in her heart that he was good and that he loved her, and that was all that mattered.

Judith had asked him no questions and sought to press Spencer, touched by her complete faith in him, had told her:

"There are a hundred questions you might ask me, Judith, that I should not answer, for your own sake, now. Why do you trust me so completely?"

"It must be because I love you," she answered simply. "Love doesn't have to be convinced. It knows."

"That is sound philosophy," he said, with a smile, "even if it does put a pretty heavy burden on love. But it is not fair to you. You have the right to know some things. I cannot now prove my innocence of the crimes they charge me with, but I swear to you that I am innocent . . . And there is one other thing . . . The papers have published a story of a mysterious girl. It is true. I guess I thought I loved the lady—but I hadn't met you then."

"You will release you," said Judith, "if she knows you no longer love her."

"I wonder," said Spencer, almost to himself. "An ordinary woman would do her publicity with pride and indignation after all this scandal, but Miss Harriet is not an ordinary woman."

Judith felt a surge of jealousy at that. If she was no ordinary woman, perhaps Randall still loved her and remained with the object of her sex, she knew that men were influenced . . . by appearances. There could be but one man for her. There might be more than one woman for Randall.

As though he read her thoughts in the dark, Spencer answered:

"No, I do not love her—now. That is dead. I owe her an obligation, and I am paying it. Some day you will understand that, but for rest, you will have to trust me blindly."

"I do," she asserted. He almost kissed the words on her lips.

And now this was all over, and they were on the concrete road again, nearing town. Both were tense, watching the road before and behind them, but on the alert for any indication that they were being followed or that enemies lay in wait. The lights of the city twinkled ahead.

"Don't go all the way back," Judith pleaded. "I am afraid you will be caught. Let me out at the street car tracks. A car will take me within a block of home."

"Perhaps that would be wisest, though I hate to let you go a minute sooner than I have to," said Spencer. "We must arrange some means of communication that will be safe. Another phone call to Mrs. Heath's house would be very dangerous. From what you tell me of her, I'm sure she has already fully informed Captain McIntosh that you had a goose call from a strange man . . . I feel the house from that they have probably declared that you have met me, and they may even now be waiting for me to bring you back. I'm almost sorry now that I arranged this meeting, even though it has brought me the assurance of your love and confidence. I'm afraid you are going to be annoyed."

"Don't let that worry you," Judith said. "No possible annoyance would make me regret tonight. And if Captain McMahon bothers me, I will set Sally on him. She would like to give him a piece of her mind for sending a policeman to muss up our clothes."

"You can trust Sally implicitly?" "I am sure of it."

"Then if I have to get another message to you it will be through her. That will be safer. For your sake, as well as my own, I will not try to communicate with you again unless it is urgently necessary. I hope to be able to come out of hiding within a few weeks and face the world with my innocence established."

They were within the city limits now, and in a few minutes Judith was on a street car, after a reluctant parting.

She arrived home to find that Sally had not returned from her evening out with Bob, which obviated the necessity of any explanations of her absence. Mrs. Heath made it a point, however, to come into the hallway and stare at her as she tripped lightly up the stairs. Judith ignored her pointedly.

TO ASSURE clean, wholesome cooked food, utensils must be kept scrupulously clean—with Old Dutch. The reason Old Dutch gets rid of dirt, grime and stains so thoroughly, easily and quickly is because it's made with Scismotite (pronounced Sis'-mo-cite) a marvellous cleaning material of volcanic origin. The flaky, flat-shaped particles cover more surface and contact the surface completely. That's the secret of healthful cleanliness in the kitchen.

OPTIMISTIC OVER CROP PROSPECTS

West Huntingdon Farmers Pleased With Growth of Grain

West Huntingdon, June 27 — Farmers are very optimistic they say the hay is improving wonderfully, wheat and rye are filling well. The spring grain looks rank. Some pieces of corn are suffering from wet feet.

The installation of machinery at the large gravel plant is music to the unemployed, and it is hoped that the plant will operate all summer.

A rather severe electric storm passed over the northern part of the township on Monday afternoon. It was accompanied by heavy rainfall and in some parts hail knocked down the grain.

On Thursday evening the members of the local branch of the W.M.S. of United Church met at the parsonage to spend a social evening with one of their esteemed members in the person of Mrs. (Rev.) R. I. Mercer (who will be leaving here shortly). Mrs. George Cross, President of the organization called the meeting to order and Mrs. Frank Ashley read the following address:

West Huntingdon, June 20, 1935. Dear Mrs. Merriam and family:

We as members of the Women's Missionary Society have gathered here tonight to express our appreciation of the efforts you have put forth toward making our organization a success, and for the many sacrifices which we have asked from you, and which you so willingly made in order to promote the work of the society.

In our association with you (Mrs. Merriam) we have found you to possess a cheerful and sincere personality, always ready to give a warm and cordial invitation to your home and little did you consider any labor on your part if it were spent for the welfare of the organization, or the community, such a charming disposition cannot help but win many friends in the new community to which you are going. As a token of our appreciation we ask you to accept this gift.

MAYOR G.O. TICE ACTS AS CHAIRMAN

States Meeting of Mayors in Hamilton Most Successful

"It was an excellent meeting, one of the most important and progressive ones we have yet held", stated Mayor Geo. O. Tice this afternoon, referring to the special convention of Ontario Mayors and executives of municipalities of the province, assembled in Hamilton on, Wednesday.

Mayor Tice, who attended with H. B. Stock, City treasurer, was elected chairman of the Resolutions committee appointed by the general body to frame a Charter of Rights for the various municipalities, which will be submitted city and town councils and Chambers of Commerce for endorsation. Mayor Tice who was chosen from among one hundred or more delegates, who attended the convention was assisted by five other mayors appointed on that body.

The convention which was fairly largely attended, according to Mayor Tice, was given a surprise at the afternoon convention, when ex-Mayor George Lindsay of Sarnia, told the delegates that Sarnia had balanced its budget and was meeting relief costs out of current revenues, and that other municipalities could do the same if they were not afraid to tackle the problem and then face the electorate.

"A lot of people are on relief through their own fault" Mr. Lockhart stated. "They are afraid to say so at election time," he challenged.

Busy Session

"We started at 9:30 in the morning and continued without a break until luncheon" said Mayor Tice this morning. "Then we had lunch at the Royal Connaught and went back and tackled it again. We worked until 5:45 that afternoon."

Following the registration of delegates Mayor Hilton of Hamilton welcomed the various executives of the municipalities, after which followed the general business of the meeting. The resolution, which will be presented to the L.G. Germain-Council of Ontario after it has been signed approval by the city council and Chambers of Commerce here as elsewhere will ask the Federal authorities among other things, assume an increasingly larger share of the social services and provide for the cost of unemployment relief in its entirety.

It will also request the provincial government to make strong representations to the Federal authorities to give a proper measure of relief to the municipalities in order that such municipalities, both in Ontario and in other parts of the Dominion may have a reasonable chance of maintaining their solvency.

Two other recommendations are contained:

"That whereas there is undeniably, an inclination on the part of the independent municipal boards and similar civic bodies to become conscious for a high degree of the importance of their particular fields of communal activity over which they exercise jurisdiction; and whereas with the passing of time and the arising of new and enlarged functions, civic costs are become to control a very great expenditure of civic money, without any corresponding responsibilities to the taxpayers in respect to amount of taxes levied."

"That the provincial legislature should make such provision for their present highly developed programs as it deems right and necessary."

J. G. SKELCHER HEADS MOTOR CLUB

Territory Extended to Include Whole County of Hastings

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Motor Club, a branch of the Ontario Motor League, held in the offices of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce last evening, J. O. Skelcher, former 1st vice-president was unanimously elected president of the club for the current year.

He will be assisted by T. D. Rutton, named 1st vice president, J. B. Findlay, 2nd vice president and by J. O. Herity, secretary treasurer.

The territory this year under the auspices of the local club has been entered by the Ontario Motor League to include the entire county of Hastings, with the exception of the town of Trenton.

Following the election of officers at the general business meeting which followed some solution through extended discussion by members was sought for the parking problem in Belleville and other communities throughout the county. Although several important suggestions were received, no recommendations or resolutions were made. The matter will be further investigated at future meetings.

A substantial gain in membership in the club has been noted during the past year with the expectation that during the coming months further work by members in organization will result in many more registrations, it was reported by the secretary treasurer. A very satisfactory cash balance was also reported by him.

DR. F. BRITTNELL CASE IS OPENED

Many Witnesses to be Called at Preliminary Hearing

Cobourg, Ont., June 27—(CP) — Preliminary hearing of the illegal operation charges against Dr. F. Brittnell of Campbellford started today before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell. Byrne Dunlap and Alma Grace Willoughby, are also charged with the doctor.

Miss Emma Hughes, nurse, is charged with allowing an attempt to procure a miscarriage.

Archie Cochrane, K.C., is appearing for Dr. Brittnell; E. C. Richardson for Dunlap and Miss Hughes and Alan Field for Miss Willoughby.

Witnesses to be called are A. C. Hodgetts, W. C. Waller, Miss A. Holmes, Miss Grosjean, Dr. K. Hayden, Marguerite Dawson, Miss Wassell, Miss Davey, Inspector Charles Garnett, Provincial Constable W. J. Carey, Dr. E. Frankish and Roy Hutchinson.

Miss Hughes' Evidence

Miss Hughes, an attractive brunette, was the first witness called by the crown in its case against Dr. Brittnell. She testified that she was called at Dr. Brittnell's office May 17 at Campbellford.

With her was Eugene Dunlap, hospital employee, and Mrs. M. Dawson, resident at the hospital. She said she received tablets which had no effect.

Crown Attorney Col. F. B. Boggs, K.C., produced a letter which the witness said came from Dr. Brittnell.

Revealing its contents she stated Dr. Brittnell advised her to come to his office at 9 p.m., May 23, and his fee was $75, paid in advance, as it was not a legal operation and he could not take legal means to collect it. She told Dunlap the contents of the letter and with Alma Willoughby, a co-nurse with her at the hospital, they were driven by Dunlap to Dr. Brittnell's office in Campbellford.

She was placed on the operating table and Miss Willoughby administered the anesthetic and she received consciousness in about half an hour.

Says $65 Paid

"I only had $65, which I got from Mr. Dunlay, and I told Dr. Brittnell that I would pay him the balance at the end of the month. He said that arrangement would be satisfactory," testified Miss Hughes.

Dr. Edgar Hayden testified he was called to attend Miss Hughes and found her suffering May 25 from "acute peritonitis."

War Crisis With Ethiopia Faces League With Issue

LONDON, June 27.—(CP Cable) — Events move increasingly towards war between Italy and Ethiopia.

Reflection on the result of the conversations between Anthony Eden, Minister for League of Nations Affairs, and Premier Benito Mussolini in Rome has gone nothing to remove earlier pessimism. Official circles are mute. But the prevailing opinion is Mussolini is determined to go ahead at all costs.

"Things have gone so far," says a Rome dispatch to the Daily Telegraph, "that nothing short of a military protectorate on the Moroccan model can serve the purpose" points Gear to the Italian heart. These may be summarized as 1—Room for Italy's surplus population to colonize and prosper; 2—Freedom to exploit the alleged untold mineral wealth of North and North-eastern Ethiopia; 3—Control of Ethiopian Foreign policy and the right to represent the Emperor in Europe.

"There seems to be no objections to allowing the Emperor Haile Selassie to remain on the throne as picturesque survival of Oriental splendor."

Britain's only direct interest in the interior of Ethiopia is in Lake Tsana. The outflow from Tsana forms the headwaters of the Blue Nile, upon which the fertility of the Sudan largely depends. Not both for the League and for the other Western European powers, war between Italy and Ethiopia would raise problems of the first magnitude.

Geneva would be faced with the dilemma of interfering at the risk of Italy's quitting the League or not interfering and suffering a heavy loss of prestige. And if Italy embarks on a heavy campaign in Ethiopia, she will Germany do on the Danube? Will she take advantage of the Italian pre-occupation to push ahead with her old dream of political union with Australia? Mussolini apparently reckons the German impact will not have developed its full force for another two years and by then he expects he will have established his Italian protectorate over Ethiopia. It is therefore feared he is likely to begin operations when the rainy season ends in September.

LIVES OF GERMANS SHAPED BY HITLER

"Rubber Stamp" Cabinet Issues New Dictatorial Decrees

By A. D. STEFFERUD
Copyright, 1935,
By The Associated Press

Berlin, June 27—(AP)—Dictatorial decrees went into effect today shaping anew the lives of all Germans without giving them a chance either to aprove or protest.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's "rubber stamp" cabinet, adopted these measures:

1. Making labor camp service compulsory for 200,000 young men and 100,000 young women annually.

2. Demanding everyone in Germany, even "aryans exempted" here, participate actively in air protection exercises.

3. Authorizing revision of the penal code "in the light of national socialistic tenets" and regulating trials.

4. Regulating official salaries.

5. Speeding up investigation of preliminary sterilization "in order to prevent inheritance of evil."

6. Encouraging establishment of peoples gardens and homesteads.

7. Empowering Bernhard Rust, Prussian commissioner for culture and education, to deal with the church controversy.

Not since the "blood purge" last June had Hitlerism made such a show of dictatorial powers and it seemed certain the far-reaching decisions would tighten even more Naziism's hold on Germany.

Daily Short Story

"SUCCESS"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Success, say what you will, is comparative. What is one man's success is another man's failure. You know about the father who a few days ago proudly declared he had come to know success for weren't all four of his sons out of jail at the same time!

Then, there was that mother who was able to spike a love match between her daughter and a young bank clerk—getting her daughter to marry finally, a wealthy and aged society rounder. That brought the mother business in society—and her daughter misery all her life. However, success is comparative! This story has to do with comparative success. And a girl. And a man.

Jean was twenty-eight when she achieved business success. Taking over a department at the Spring Department Store, she worked late hours and attracted the attention of high executives—and incidentally, Stockholders. It wasn't long before she had two departments—and finally, she was made advertising director of the store. In her twenty-eighth year Jean Miller made eighteen thousand dollars, which is better than three hundred a week.

Now for George Marson. He was Jean's age, bright enough in a dreamy sort of way. Good-looking, he paid slight attention to his appearance, and Jean, passing the book department on the fourth floor, looked him. Her forehead furrowed. He was the first time she passed, leaning against a pillar while talking to a customer. Jean couldn't hear what he was saying but she made a mental notation that a little discipline was needed in the book department. Clerks were supposed to stand on their two feet, be respectful to the customers, and be a living picture of efficiency.

Salesman?

The second time Jean passed, she found George Marson shaking his head vigorously at a woman while taking a book from her hands. . . . . .

"I won't sell you this book," Jean heard Marson say. "You won't like it. It won't do you any good. The facts are all mixed up and the deductions erroneous."

Jean's lips tightened at that. Here she was slaving to make the book department a going concern, and handicapped by clerks who refused to sell books! She spoke to the manager. The manager passed on the book, while Jean was seated in his office.

"Well," the manager said. "I'll call Marson."

The manager came to the point quickly.

"Miss Miller doesn't see eye-to-eye with me about you," he said. "She said yesterday you were discussing against a pillar while talking to a customer and today you refused to sell a woman a book she wanted to buy."

George Marson looked at Jean and laughed. She was furious. George shrugged his shoulders. Then he spoke.

"You are a clever business woman Miss Miller," he said. "I have advised you ability in a general sense for a long time. But—" he paused—"when that is said, I've said anything. Am I discharged?"

He turned to the manager . who threw up his hands.

"Of course you are not discharged." Miss Miller's lips tightened again. "But I do think there is some explanation."

"There is an explanation," George assured her. "The man, if I remember, to whom I was talking informally with yesterday is professor Gray of the University. We were discussing something in the back to do with chemistry, and I told him that his book, Gray's Intensive Science, was terrible in that it was neither elementary nor advanced. I said him a book that was superior to his in every way. You don't sell books the way you sell ribbons."

Reasoning

"And that woman was Mrs. Nelson Burbeck. She was getting reference books on Socialism. She wanted one that wouldn't help her at all. I refused to sell the book, although I offered to let her, if she insisted, take it home and read it."

George Marson smiled wearily. Jean Miller stood up abruptly . . . and then she seated herself again.

"Books", Marson continued wearily, "aren't tidbits of tinsled knicknacks. They are living things. The right book ought to be in the hands of the right person always. That's what I try to do. But, "he added hastily, "without expending too much effort."

The manager dismissed him, and Jean watched him slouch out the door.

"Is he always like that?" she asked incredulously.

The manager laughed.

"If you fired him, I would have had to spend the next six weeks on the floor, telling people that he had left, and explaining myself. Customers like him."

"How much does he make?"

"About twenty-seven a week," the manager said.

"And he's contented on that?"

The manager smiled.

"You wouldn't understand," he said.

But that night, when Jean, worn and haggard, was greeted at the door of her swanky apartment by her maid, she took her hat and issued orders to the cook to serve dinner—that night Jean understood.... and cried herself to sleep.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on our front steps feeling kind of punk, and pop came home slapping his leg with rolled up newspaper like some body trying all the pretty, pretty. What's the word, young offspring, you look like the last rose of the summer before last.

Aw heck, I been sitting here by myself for 2 hours and nothing hasn't happened and I don't know where all the fellows are, good ole Joe sure think they'd all moved or something, I said, Mikey smokes what's a use of being vacation if you don't have any fun, and 3 wrinklers before that I wanted all a ways around to get a ice cream cone with my 5 cents and the ice cream fell out into a puddle before I hadn't hardly took the first bite, I said Blimbity chrismas, I said.

I see what you mean but I'm afraid you have the wrong slant on life, pop said. Happiness is all a state of mined and if we realize there are millions of people in the world without a roof over their heads or a cent in their pockits or even a meal to rub against another we should be happy and contented and sing all the day long. But sir the there! that we have a good home to park our good health in. That's a way! sir, and as for a few little worries roll off me like water off a duck's back, he said, and I said, Yes sir, you have to go out and play bridge tonite.

The deuce I do, he said so! pop said, and I said, I heard ma tawkin over the fone to Mrs. Hern and she made a enagement for you.

Well, I won't go, I won't go, it's too hot, hang it all I'm not in the mood pop said.

And he started to go in the house still tawking to himself, and I said, What's a matter pop, ain't you happy?

O yes, I'm as happy as a lark, I'm as happy as a lark in a cage down a damp cellar full of cats, pop said.

And he slammed the front door and like, somebody that didn't care how healthy they was or how many homes they had, and I kept on sitting there waiting for the dinner bell to ring for supper.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Within the ancient Persian city, Dick Terrel, rich young American, was enjoying the last of his well-earned holiday. The colorful surroundings and the strange peoples swarming the narrow streets interested and amused him,

Even the Oriental odors and squalor were welcome relief after the drab monotony of the Black Sea country. There, for the last ten months, he had been in charge of engineers drilling for oil under contract with the Soviet States.

Today chance led him into a congested quarter where few foreigners penetrate. Lingering in a native shop, leisurely sipping syrupy black coffee, his attention was caught by the roaring shouts of dragomen and the musical tinkle of camel bells.

Soon a travel-worn caravan rounded the corner. "Come from Turkestan—ver' far!" murmured his native boy. "Bring much riches—hides, carpets, rare herbs—maybe pretty girls!" Terrel laughed at the last suggestion.

LIBERAL PARTY WINS IN NEW BRUNSWICK

"LITTLE EVA" COO DIES PROTESTING HER INNOCENCE

Latest Appeals For Leniency Are Unanswered

IS ELECTROCUTED

Fellow Prisoner is Cheered by Doomed Woman

Ossining, N.Y., June 28 (CP) — Blate of New York today took its case against "Little Eva," Coo 43-year-old Canadian woman convicted of the insurance murder one year ago of a cripple handyman, who had been her helper for years.

Mrs. Coo, native of Salisburton, Ont., one-time Alberta rancher and dressmaker, died last night in the electric chair after bidding a fellow-convict "keep your chin up" as he followed her down the "last mile."

The once-buxom blond walked unassisted down the grim corridor that leads to Shaft Number One chamber, a flowered dress hanging loosely on her 140-pound body that weighed 170 when she entered the prison. Commissioner Herbert Lehman had denied her plea for executive clemency.

Little Eva of the Road House

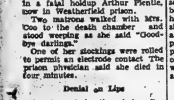
"Little Eva"—she got that name because she called herself Cooper-down, N.Y., roadhouse "Little Eva's Place", was convicted of killing Harry Wright, her handyman on a Sheppard, Alta., ranch and at the roadhouse Wright's estate, which she State set she pleaded for a year to obtain, totalling $7,000 with the amount of an insurance policy Mrs. Coo placed on his life.

On a lonely mountain road, it was charged, Mrs. Coo forced Wright on the head with a mallet and directed her co-defendant, Mrs. Harry Atkinson, to set a match to his back and forth across his body until he was dead. Mrs. Clift said the charge was true. She escaped with a 20-year sentence for turning State's evidence.

The former Calgary dressmaker passed on the death down the corridor long enough to address Leonard Scarcliff, 28-year-old detective killer,

Cheers up Scarcliff

"Keep your chin up, Scarcliff," she said as Scarcliff shuffled down to the chair with a sardonic smile on his face, flicking the ash from a cigarette and taking a last puff before he went he dictated to Warden Lewis Lawes a statement in which he exonerated from blame in a fatal hooking Arthur Pirelle, now in Weatherfield prison.



"Two matrons walked with Mrs. Coo to the death house. A police stood weeping as she said "Goodbye darlings."

One of her stockings were rolled to permit an electrician to attach prison physician said she died in four minutes.

Denial an Ego

As she sat in the chair after making an several of innocence — "never killed Harry Wright or anybody else," the Rev. Anthony Peterson, started to read the 23rd Psalm: "Though I walk in the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou art with me . . ."

Benefits of Agreements Made by Conservatives Told by Jos. Harris M.P.

Many Gather at Home of Fred Parrot, Thurlow, to Hear Address

IDEAL WEATHER

"You who mark your ballots against the present government as the coming federal election are marking it in favor of that element in this country which has a disrupting influence. If these elements are powerful enough to turn out the present administration, then it may well be said that they have won the day and we may look for things just as they like," gravely warned Joseph Harris, M.P. for Toronto—Scarborough, speaking at the Thurlow Conservative Club lawn social held on the farm of Mr. Fred Parrot, east of the city last evening.

Loud speakers and an amplifying system carried the booming voice of the Scarborough representative to approximately nine hundred people who crowded the grounds to hear the last of the day presented by Mr. Harris, W. E. Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings, James F. Hill, M.P.P. for East Hastings, and others.

The social was opened by Mr. Fred Mitchell, president of the Thurlow Conservative Club, who invited Mr. Harris, Mr. Tummon, Mr. Hill, G. A. Ryan, Warden, president of the South Hastings Club; C. A. Reid; Frank McKeown, Judge Deacon, Con. Stoke, Henry Wallace, Dr. Welch, Roslin and others to the platform. Following a few brief explanatory remarks, Mr. Mitchell turned the chair over to Dr. Welch who presided during the evening.

"Think things over before you vote. You have a real duty to perform at this coming election. Find out for yourself the real facts before you mark your ballot," repeatedly warned the chief speaker.

Warning for his subject after his preliminary remarks, Mr. Harris, moving to the front of the platform dispensed with the microphone and soldiers and relied on his sheer personality to carry his message across to the crowded ranks of his listeners.

Defends Government

Introduced to the large gathering by Mr. Tummon as the representative in this district, who had been elected to office in 1921 and had held the office continuously since, Mr. Harris in his enlivening address defended the actions of the present government, pointing out its points and asked his hearers to compare the present conditions with those under the opposition administration when it held power.

Mr. Harris' address was along opposition against proceeding had been advanced.

MILITARY STORES TO BE RESTORED

Some Repairs Will be Made at Quebec Citadel

Ottawa, June 28 (CP)—Canada's military stores and equipment, depleted and grown obsolete in four years of depression and severe economy, will be partially restored to their former standard by means under increased appropriations from parliament this year.

As opposition members complained of increase expenditure for military purposes in the House of Commons last night Hon. Grote Stirling, Minister of National Defence, stated the increases were necessary so that the economies of the past few years and to make repairs which if longer delayed would be much more costly.

The sums of money under discussion were in the supplementary estimates and included $100,000 as further amount for general stores and also amounts for engineering surveys and repairs, including plans to Quebec citadel and transfer of the Dominion Arsenal from the city of Quebec. The walls of the ancient fortress were crumbling, Mr. Stirling said, and if repairs were not made they would fall down into the streets of the city and might cause serious accidents.

Fishermen Helped

A scheme of long term loans for fishermen, received its second reading in the House yesterday without a vote being registered against it although it provoked much criticism from Liberals. The bill authorizes loans of $1,000 or less to fishermen for the purchase of gear, secured by mortgages on their land, and the opposition contended it would have benefited only the fishermen had no land. Loans up to a total amount of $2,000,000 would be possible and the scheme would be administered by the Farm Loan Board.

Despite final opposition from Liberals the bill was finally passed. Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, Chairman Osborne Gobeil reported the reading. Prime Minister R. B. Bennett said when a province is willing to put up a dollar on a dollar it did not want the act by moving to have it struck out ultra vires the Dominion Parliament should let it have its way.

Mr. Bennett announced the government could not bring in an act to provide pensions for the blind this session. Some provinces had pensions schemes. Old Age Pensions schemes under which the blind pensions are made are also being opposed.

Morgan Miniatures Sell for $349,000

London, June 28 (CP)—A total of 70,040 pounds (about $349,500)—had been realized at the Morgan collection of miniatures when the hammer fell for the last time during the three weeks' auction.

Despite the reports that Morgan hoped to get $500,000 from the sale, the auctioneers said they were "satisfied beyond expectations."

BRITISH ELECTIONS IN JANUARY

LONDON, June 28.—(CP Cable)—The general election, hitherto expected for October, may now be delayed until January.

Fliers to Keep Going As Long As Engine Perking

Meridian, Miss., June 28.—(AP)—The record breaking plane of Fred and Al Keys roared over this Central Meridian today giving no indication of descending with its new aerial endurance mark.

"We are going to keep her in the air just as long as she keeps perking," said Fred.

The brothers shattered the old endurance record of 553 hours, 41 minutes and 30 seconds set by John and Kenneth Hunter at Uniontown, Pa., May 12-13 1-2 p.m. (E. D. T.) yesterday.

Unobstructed View of Circus Parade Promised by Ban on Motorcars

Belleville citizens, and especially the tiny tots of the city may be able to view the mile long parade of the Clark Brothers' Circus on Betty Circus on Front Street on the morning of July 2nd with their vision unobstructed by parked cars along the curb.

Mayor Tice will make a special appeal to car owners to leave Front Street free during the hour or so that the parade is on there all citizens, many of whom may not be able to afford the admission price of the circus itself, may be able to view the parade. He will be assisted in the matter by police of the local force to whom a request has also been made.

"This is being arranged specially for the smaller children, many of whom are seeing a circus parade for the first time in their lives," said Mayor Tice today.

The prohibition of cars in the business section between Dundas Ave and the city hall is taken as a further safety measure in the prevention of accidents during the congestion along Front Street, it was pointed out.

BROTHERS SET AIR ENDURANCE RECORD

FRED AND AL KEY

GREAT BRITAIN MAY CEDE LAND TO COMPENSATE

Efforts at Solution of Ethiopian Crisis Continue

CORRIDOR TO SEA

Such Plan Would Allow Abyssinian Corridor to Sea

London, June 28—(CP Cable)—Reliable sources reported today Britain in her efforts to seek a solution for the Italo-Ethiopian crisis, had gone as far as to offer to cede part of British Somaliland to Ethiopia in compensation for Ethiopian concessions to Italy.

This would link up Green the African Kingdom with much-desired corridor to the sea. But Premier Benito Mussolini did not appear to be conciliation adequate.

London, June 28—(AP)— Arthur Henderson, President of the Disarmament Conference, told the inaugural session of the International Peace Congress he sees no immediate danger of a world war.

He asserted, however, "we are compelled to re-organize as movements are going on which are very near the danger point of actual conflict."

British Move

London, June 28—(AP, Copyright) —Further moves by Great Britain in the interests of peace were anticipated today following a cabinet meeting at which Anthony Eden, Minister for League of Nations Affairs, reported on the results of his continental tour.

On the 31st anniversary of the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo—the shot that precipitated the Great War—Capt. Eden described the avowed intention of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy to make life easier for Britons in East Africa.

Before reporting to the cabinet, Eden was guest of honor at the Lord Mayor's banquet.

Diplomats discussed four prospective moves on the chessboard of world peace.

Three Proposals

These were for an eastern European pact, a Dominion Treaty, an air locarno and land disarmament.

Diplomats were understood to have two major points to tell his colleagues—Mussolini's refusal to his attempts to dissuade Il Duce from an African campaign.

Britain remained adamant against any other solution of the Italo-Ethiopian crisis than by concerted action of the League.

With that course of procedure failing, Britain would not oppose the invasion of Ethiopia to effect a "peaceful solution" of the border dispute by force.

King George, Bronzed, Returns to Palace

London, June 28 (AP)—The King, bronzed and in apparent good health, returned to Buckingham Palace today from a week-end visit at Sandringham. He had been advised by his doctor to rest in order to shake off an attack of bronchial catarrh.

Rested, Unstrained Eyes Mean Better Work

The artist's brush will never falter—as long as good light flows on his canvas, and keen eyes guide his strokes. In life, as in painting, the praise is for the accurate worker, be he artist, clerk, or mechanic. Successful men know that. That is why they give their eyes the benefit of regular eyesight examination and the beauty of plasticfit light.

Old Steam Pumper Lauded As Best Bet Against Fire

Jack Roblin Tells How Pumper Pumped Weeks at Time

A city-owned steam fire pumper which did yeoman service for the corporation over a period of forty years, later to be sold to a local contractor and scrapped for junk, was the best bet this city ever had against fire and low pressures in the local waterworks system, according to Jack Roblin, well-known resident of this city.

"If the city had kept that pumper and looked after it there wouldn't be any call for a new one such as there is now. That old pumper would pump just as much water as any of these new fangled machines you could buy. And it would throw the water even farther and under high pressure, commented Mr. Roblin.

A lurid trail of glowing sparks and firebrands, drawn from the red hot grates by the forced draft of the machine as it rocketed through the streets behind a galloping team of horses marked the passage of the old pumper to the fires of bygone days in this city but once at the scene of the blaze the machine could be depended upon to perform—more than its share of the work. In action it would run steadily and ceaselessly until finally throttled off by the engineer in charge. Distance which water had to be drawn bothered the old machine but little according to the local resident who for many years was employed in its care and who accompanied it to the various fires.

"Take that big fire at Corbyville Distillery about twenty years ago. The department went out from this city and spent days fighting that fire. The old pumper went into action and worked steadily without a let up for eight days and nights, pumping water from the river some distance away. I wonder if any of these new machines could run that long. At the end of that period she was just as fresh as a daisy. She could have gone on—another sixteen days and nights."

"Pressure? Say, even with the old pressure from the pump Roblin used to be able to wash the face of this city clock, and if we wanted to step her up a little we could wash the flag pole on top of the tower, too."

POLICE COURT

For the violation of two city by-laws that are perhaps the oldest on record in the city of Belleville, Nickols Piccion and Abraham Somberg, both of this city, appeared in the local police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, Somberg pleaded guilty to driving a horse in run at large, while Piccion admitted that his cow ran at-large. Both were fined one dollar and costs, totalling four dollars each.

Neighbours of Piccion, residing on Station street, complained to the police that Picclen's cow had wandered upon their property and destroyed their garden produce. Picclon assured the court he had securely tied his animal. It had apparently broken loose. His Worship found the accused guilty and after referring to the ancient city by-law imposed the minimum fine.

Somberg stated that children had untied his horse, which has been tethered at the rear of his Station Street residence for pasture. The horse wandered away and was taken up by police. The same disposition of this case was made as in the former.

The docket was so lengthy that two cases were left over. Alderney Dr. C. Donnan, K.C., the most drawn-out case to be presented in police court, was postponed until next Thursday.

Harold Sine, Sidney, pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault and was fined two dollars and costs. During the course of the submission of the evidence, it was disclosed that Sine had slapped a neighbour lad, Gordon Yearwood, in the face. The assault terminated in altercations between the parties concerned. The fine and costs amounted to $16.70 in all.

Two Monitreal residents, giving their names as Rosario Berthiquette and Napoleon Gerow, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of property of Floyd Martin, 218 Church Street. It was established during the hearing that Berlinguette had gone into the Martin Funeral Home on Church Street and stole the raincoat while Gerow stood as sentinel outside. A sentence of two months in the common jail was imposed in each case.

During the progress of the proceedings the previous records of these men, who were arrested by Detective Isard and P. C. Taylor last Saturday, were produced. Berlinquette had previously been convicted on nine charges, like to those previously, having been sentenced to serve from ten to twenty-five months in the Ohio Penitentiary in 1933. "I don't know just what this means, but apparently you have been liberated," stated Mr. Donnan as he registered perplexity. His Worship took into consideration the minor offence and was lenient in the matter, meting out merely a one month's sentence in each case.

W. JAMES HEDGER GIVEN TWO YEARS

Pleads Guilty to Entering Warehouse of Belleville Fruit Co.

Walter James Hedger of this city, was sentenced to serve two years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary after pleading guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the Belleville Fruit Company's warehouse with intent to rob, when he and his accomplice, Mitchell Below, also a local citizen, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in police court today. Below was given three months in the common jail following his plea of guilty.

Hedger and Below were apprehended inside the premises of the Belleville Fruit Company's warehouse early last Monday morning by Sergeant Booth and P. C. Arnott, having successfully gained entrance by means of forcing a rear window. Hedger, who was recently convicted of breaking and entering C.N.R. freight cars in transient, was paroled from the Ontario Reformatory on May 22nd last and had broken his parole. R. O. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney, requested a penitentiary sentence be imposed upon Hedger, under the prevailing circumstances. His Worship, Magistrate Butler, stated to the prisoner, that he could not accept any leniency from the local court. "The parole board was good enough to release you and give you another chance. Reformatory sentence does not seem to have done you much good and you have been warned previously that a more severe sentence awaited you if you ever appeared in this court again. You did not deem it advisable to heed this warning. Have you anything to say for yourself before the sentence of the court is passed?" asked Magistrate Butler.

"Well, sir, I would like to go back and finish my term at the Reformatory," added Hedger.

"That's impossible. The sentence of this court is that you serve two years in the Reformatory at Portsmouth," concluded His Worship.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN AT 81

Longevity from abundant work and little worry—is the explanation by Sir Robert Borden of his formula for a grand old age. As he enters his eighty-second year he states himself a confirmed optimist who believes that all will be right with the world, even while he admits there are certain anomalies in our social order which require correction and while he admits there are confusing times.

While many persons may not be able to state their creed as clearly as Sir Robert there must be many persons who are just such optimists as he is. Many have had strain and stress, sorrow and loss and yet have carried on cheerfully in the full assurance that there is justice in life.

Those others who are not optimists ought to try to turn over a new leaf. Some may be chronically affected as a result of illness or self-centred existence, but even they may endeavor to work hard and live without worry. That is a goal worth striving to reach.

Sir Robert on his birthday had another suggestion to offer—that the best elements of the people should be called to public affairs. Failure to participate puts one in the class of drone, he said. Never did a time so demand the best in this age, whose very number of problems calls for the efforts of the best minds toward solution.

Men like Sir Robert are examples for other Canadians, particularly the younger Canadians, who have to look forward to many possible years in which they ought to have a hand in moulding.

SONG OF NOISE AND NOISES

Grenville Kleiser of New York has systematized the agony of living which the people of today suffer from in noise. Produced in New York, the poem he writes to enshrine these disordered sounds suits the city, for outside of the actors' rant and roar, they are all here:—

"Noise, noise, noise, noise,
Noise that murders peace and poise!
Noise of traffic on the street,
Noise of midnight tramping feet;
Noise of klaxons, hooters, drills,
Noise of singers' maddening trills;
Noise of jackhammers, clattering vans,
Noise of milkmen's rattling cans;
Noise of the loquacious bore,
Noise of fiends who slam the door;
Noise of vendors, lacking sense,
Noise of cat on neighbor's fence;
Noise of clicking type machines,
Noise of jangling telephones;
Noise of jangling telephones,
Noise of drums and saxophones;
Noise of radios, phonographs,
Noise of boisterous laughs;
Noise of actors' rant and roar,
Noise of airships when they soar;
Noise of ghostly creaking doors,
Noise of lusty sluggards' snores;
Noise of shunting trains at night,
Noise of fire-truck that affright;
Noise of ambling trams and cars,
Noise of revelers after hours;
Noise, noise, noise, noise,
Noise that murders peace and poise!"

AFTER THE CHAIN-LETTER WHAT?

Is it a conspiracy of silence or is it just that the chain letter rage is extinct as the prehistoric beasts which roamed the earth? Not a word has been heard about this form of amusement or fortune-building for some time. Concensus of opinion is that the fad is dead, extinct.

But it left some good results besides evils in its train. It boomed the sale of stamps, writing paper and letter-writing. It helped bookshops, it helped post offices. It kept typewriters busier. According to the New London Day in Denver, the post office staff of 258 carriers worked 350 hours daily overtime for three weeks and 205 clerks worked 260 hours a day total overtime. Ninety substitute clerks worked overtime, the total overtime being 1,400 hours for an average pay of 70 cents an hour, or about $980. Twenty thousand dollars extra pay was earned by post office workers.

The chain letter must have raged in that city, though smaller places all over the continent were caught in the blizzard of letters.

The only tragedy is blighted hopes and lost money—honest people who in the hope of getting a fortune sent their money and found the scheme reached them just too late. Nobody made all that was hoped out of it, for it did not carry on far enough until it should engulf the entire world.

If all men were honest which they are not; if all men had money to spend on such a scheme, which they had not; if all men in the world would agree and fall into line to carry their share of this 'philanthropic' chain, which they would not; and the post offices would have reaped billions and all senders would have been out just what they spent on postage, paper and shoe-leather.

So fare thee well, for the present, chain letter! But we doubt not but we shall hear of thee again.

A SUMMER DAY

A whispering wind the meadow grasses stirring,
The leafy branches 'gainst the blue dome showing—
Oh! what can with a summer day compare!

A drowsy note from nests all snugly hidden,
The quail's weird call across the meadow sent.

All nature seems to bow in benediction,
With love's sweet symbols seen on every hand.

TO BE ARRESTED charged with stealing his own automobile was the experience of a Belleville merchant in Toronto one day this week. Recently the car was stolen and recovered in Peterborough, after police calls had been sent out provincewide. Toronto police force evidently had not been notified of the recovery for the Belleville merchant was stopped by the Toronto police four times, talked himself free twice and twice had to go to police stations where he convinced the desk sergeant that the car was his. The last hold-up came when leaving Toronto and by that time the Belleville man's temper was just a bit strained, and what he said to the cop and what the cop said to him rather warmed the atmosphere. However, sez he, after visiting almost every police precinct headquarters in Toronto I am of the opinion that they know now that the car stolen in Belleville a week ago has been recovered. But what a marvelous system!

FINGER BOWLS do not seem so much in evidence now—at least in rural circles. Some folks wonder what finger bowls are for, others feel they are an affectation and an abomination, but a new use for finger bowls was revealed in a Belleville hotel recently. Two elderly gentlemen, who seemed to be seasoned travellers with overseas connection, dined lovingly and long. Finally the finger bowls arrived and one of the gentlemen removed his false teeth and carefully cleaned them with a small brush, using the finger bowl in the cleaning process. And so you see there is more than one use for most things, even finger bowls. Seems like a good idea at that.

ROMAN SOLDIER AND OMAHA, two of the foremost race horses of the day were both foaled last Saturday. Roman Soldier by a filly called Black Helen, and Omaha by a horse named Discovery. No doubt Roman Soldier was too much of a gentleman to beat a lady but the ladies who bet on him think he would have been more of the complete gentleman if he had romped in a winner.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE

"How's your wife getting along with her driving?"

"She took a turn for the worse last week.

Lady (very angry, to maid)—"Bridget, I heard you wore my evening dress at the dance. I wonder you were not ashamed of yourself!"

"Indeed, I was that, mum," replied Bridget, "my young man said if he ever saw me with it on again he would break off the engagement."

"So your wife takes in washing?" the Montgomery County judge asked a man who was up for vagrancy. "What do you do?"

"Well, Judge," exclaimed the accused, "I takes in the washin', the old woman does the washin', I takes the washin' back, the old woman collects the money and I talks her out of most of it."

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

There was no one behind, so I rode forward wishing to see how his camel was: and at last found it, riderless, being led by one of the Howeitat. His saddlebags were on it, and his rifle and his food, but he himself nowhere; gradually it dawned on us that the miserable man was lost. This was a dreadful business, for in the haze and mirage the caravan could not be seen two miles, and the iron ground it made no tracks: afoot he would never overtake us.

Every one had marched on, thinking him elsewhere in our long line; but much time had passed and it was nearly mid-day, so he must be miles back. His loaded camel was proof that he had not been forgotten asleep at our night halt. The Agayl ventured that perhaps he had dozed in the saddle and fallen, stunning or killing himself: perhaps some one of the party had borne him a grudge. Anyway they did not know. He was an ill-natured stranger, no charge on our hospitality, and they did not greatly care.

True: but it was true also that Mohammed, his countryman and fellow, who was technically his road-companion, knew nothing of the desert, had a foundered camel, and could not turn back for him.

I looked wealthy at the straggling men, and wondered for a moment if I could charge with one, sending him back on my camel to the rescue. My shirking the duty would be understood, because I was a foreigner; but that was precisely the plea I did not desire to use, while I yet presumed to help these Arabs in their own revolt. It was hard, anyway, for a stranger to influence another people's national movement. And doubly hard for a civilised man, a sedentary person to sway Moslem nomads. I had not felt it impossible for myself if I claimed simultaneously the privileges of both societies.

So, without saying anything, I turned my unwilling camel round, and forced her, grunting and moaning for her camel friends, back past me the long line of men, and past the baggage into the emptiness behind. My temper was very impatient. I was furious with my other servants, with my own play-acting as a Bedouin, and most of all with Gasim, a gap-toothed, grumbling fellow, Shifkanahk in all our marches, hard-tempered, suspicious, brutal, a man unsympathetic and I regretted, for of whom I had promised to rid myself as soon as we reached the camping place. It seemed absurd that I should peril my weight in the Arab adventure for a single worthless man.

My camel seemed to feel it also, by her deep grumbling; but that was a constant recourse of ill-treated camels. After a mile or two, she felt better, and began to go forward less constrainedly, but still slowly. I had been noting our direction all these days with my oil compass, and satisfied, by its aid, to return nearly to our starting place, seventeen miles away.

I had ridden about an hour and a half, easily, for the following breeze had let me wipe the cruel from my red eyes and look forward to it without pain: when I saw a figure, or large beast, or at least something like ahead of me. The shifting mirage disguised height or distance; but this thing seemed moving, a little east of our course. On chance I turned my camel's head that way, and in a few minutes saw that it was Gasim. When I called he stood confusedly; I rode up and saw that he was nearly blinded and silly, standing there with his arms held out to me, and his black mouth gaping open. The Agayl had put out last night in my absence, and this he spilled madly over his face and head, in haste to drink. He stopped babbling, and began to wail like animals, while young, pillowed on the camel's rump; then stirred her up and mounted.

At our turn the beast seemed relieved, and moved forward freely. In spite of our double weight she began to stride out, and at times even put her head down and for a few paces broke into a canter. The most comfortable shuffle to which the best camel can be induced, was very quickly shaken out of me. Gasim, pillowed on the camel's rump; then stirred her up and mounted.

A. Kofford, Rev. W. Ireland, Rev. F. G. Johnson, Father Farrell and Rev. Hurst Dean Caldwell of Marmora. At the conclusion of these addresses Mr. Hyman of Marmora, rendered an interesting solo. ROSE GARDEN IS BOWER OF BEAUTY

A bower of beauty aptly describes the rose garden now in full bloom at the home of Alderman and Mrs. Frank Domenico, Dundas Street East. Mr. Domenico is very proud of the garden and invites any of the citizens who delight in the beauty of flowers to visit the garden at anytime. Every rose, that will grow out of doors, is in the collection and a great deal of time and attention is spent on their culture. Mr. Domenico suffered a heavy loss in the cold winter of two years ago, many of his most valuable specimens dying out, but this has been rectified with the purchase of those varieties destroyed and again the garden is one of the beauty spots of this city.

Canadians Small Cheese Eaters Meeting is Told

The last weekly meeting of the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce until September was held on Thursday and considerable untinished business was disposed of.

Mr. R. F. Hart of the Belleville Cheddar Cheese, Limited, was a guest at the meeting and in replying to the welcome extended to him by the president, Mr. J. B. Boyce, he spoke briefly and interestingly on the cheese situation. The export of Canadian cheese to England has fallen off greatly, Mr. Hart said, owing to the increase in production of cheese in the Old Country for home consumption, and also to the importation of cheese to England from New Zealand at a lower price. Canadian cheese is superior in quality and the competitive prices cannot be met and yield a fair profit. Although Canada is a great cheese producing country, the people of Canada are small consumers of cheese. With butter the case is entirely the opposite, the Canadian people being the greatest consumers of butter in the world per capita. Mr. Hart advocated endeavoring to formulate some plan to increase the demand for cheese in Canada.

The annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce will be held in Toronto on Sept. 6th, 8th and 6th and Mr. J. O. Herlly was appointed to attend the meeting as official delegate from the Belleville chamber. It is likely that several directors of the Chamber will also attend the convention.

The following were present at the meeting: President J. B. Boyce, Mackenzie Robertson, H. W. Ackerman, H. E. Fairfield, Leo. B. Riggs, W. C. Springer, E. P. Bernstein and the secretary-manager J. O. Herlly.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"When a Man Sees Red"
Thrilling Adventure Story That Will Delight Filmgoers Double Bill

One of the most beautiful sections of California is to be seen in "When a Man Sees Red" the adventure story that stars Buck Jones, now showing at the Capitol Theatre, along with the hilarious comedy "Mary Jane's Pa".

There are shots that take in a vast sweep of river, valley and rugged mountain background so beautiful as to make one gasp with wonder. The old time railroad station three reels in imagination and recalls the Old West that is now but a memory.

One of the most thrilling scenes in the picture is where Buck Jones, single-handed and unarmed attacks an entire gang of cattle rustlers down by the bank of the river Kern. The picture deals with the efforts of a ranch foreman to save a beautiful girl from her own stubborn self, and a gang of rustlers whose leader endeavours to marry the girl and get her ranch and wealth. In the cast are Le Roy Mason, Peggy Campbell, Dorothy Revier and many others.

In "Mary Jane's Pa" the second feature of this bargain bill, one can find rollicking humor, pathos, fast and intense dramatic action and romance, all skillfully handled by those two able favorites, Aline McMahon and Guy Kibbee.

The picture is a whimsical story of a small town printer who is born with the wanderlust and who cannot resist the call of the road when a train whistles. Deserting his wife and family he wanders the world over, returning after many years to find his family moved, no one knows where.

Kibbee has the role of the tramp printer and Aline, who buys a newspaper to support her family, is the deserted wife who makes good on her own and subjects her husband who finally finds his family, to the role of caretaker to the children, who do not know him.

While comedy is the dominant note throughout the story, there is dramatic strain that closes in a most touching and surprising manner.

Besides the aforementioned players, there are Wan Gray and Tom Brown, as the two youthful lovers, Robert McWade and Oscar Apfel to add to the comedy.

An interesting newsreel showing the latest news events of the day, including some close ups of the giant ocean liner the Normandie coming into New York Harbor on her maiden voyage.

Beginning next Monday and continuing for three days the Capitol Theatre will present a feature program that embraces "The Marines Are Coming" with William Haines and Esther Ralston, also "The Case of the Curious Bride" that features Warren William and Margaret Lindsay.

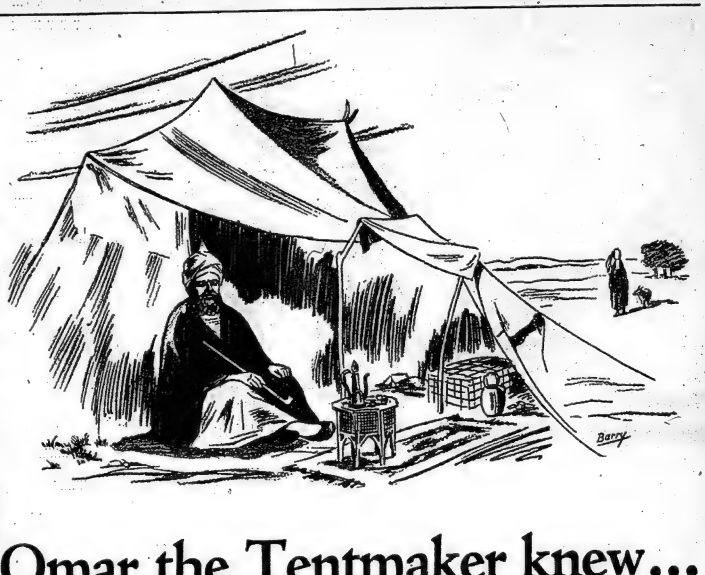
AT THE ELLIS
"Under the Pampas Moon"
Baxter Outshines His Famous "Cisco Kid" in New Character-Insides

Warner Baxter is appearing in a role even more romantic than his "Cisco Kid", which catapulted him to meteoric fame and popularity on the screen. Only a ton of dynamite adjectives could describe the splendid romance, drama and music revealed in his new sparkling hit.

In "Under the Pampas Moon", which comes to the Ellis tomorrow (Saturday) the popular Mr. Baxter portrays an Argentine Pampas gaucho who can ride, throw the bolesdore, sing dance and woo the ladies more profficiently than any of his comrades—a role far more colorful and romantic than the original "Cisco Kid".

Co-starring with Warner Baxter, in this colorful production, is Ketti Gallian, who sprang into instant popularity in her recent picture "Marie Galante". Miss Gallian portrays the role of a beautiful cabaret entertainer from Paris who, bound for an engagement in Buenos Aires, Argentina, meets Baxter on the plane becomes disabled and lands in the vast expanse of the pampas.

Baxter falls madly in love with the beautiful "angel", but Ketti departs for Buenos Aires, where later their romance flowers amid exciting adventure and conflicting emotions.



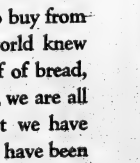
Velez and Yolanda, the celebrated dance team that has long been a favorite in South America and the United States, are featured in the film in a new sensation . . . "The Cobra Tango". The supporting cast includes John Milian, J. Carrol Naish and Soledad Jiminez, among others.

Sparkling Junior Features

A splendid array of varied junior features have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including "Two Lame Ducks" a threaring Oswald Comedy with a large cast of famed Hollywood filmdom's kinsfolk of the "ins" welcome Walt Disney Silly Symphonies "Cocka's Carnival" produced in full-beautiful three dimension Technicolor and the latest News Reel revealed in the popular Bells World News; Rex, King of Wild Horses, and Sun-Thu-Thu, the screen's wonder dog portray the leading roles in a further adventure of "The Law of the Wild", to be presented at the Saturday matinee performances.

"Public Hero Number 1"

Thrills in the work of the Government secret service agents, pitted against organized crime, to whom a rob-step or recognition means death, form the background of "Public Hero Number 1", Metro's amazing and gripping document of the war of the Department of Justice on gangland, which closes a highly successful engagement at the Bells tonight. Chester Morris who has given the screen many fine performances plays a pivotal role in the story, together with Joseph Calleia, Jean Arthur, Lionel Barrymore and Lewis Stone have leading roles.



Omar the Tentmaker knew...

OMAR certainly knew the value of publicity—wherever his poetry was quoted, people spoke of his tents. Probably they were good tents—they might have been the best procurable—it is also quite likely that people from far-off villages came to buy from him, but—it was eight hundred years before all the world knew of him and his famous pre-prohibition slogan, "A loaf of bread, a jug of—" (pardon us). Eight hundred years after he died, we are all convinced that Omar made tents—not only that, but we have heard so much about them we are convinced they must have been GOOD tents. Were they obtainable today we would probably buy one. However, poor Omar has been gone nearly nine centuries.

TORONTO STOCKS
(Close)

Toronto, June 28 (CP)—The laymen and ails came to the rescue of the pre-holiday session today on the Toronto Industrial Share Board, trading in both groups was heavy and prices were strong. Gains up to a point were shown in the latter through most of the day but profit-taking pared the gains slightly before the close. Other sections of the Board were quiet with prices mainly firm. Gains and losses about balanced over the Board.

Action centred in the liquor shares on the Industrial Section and gained as much as a point. Interest was divided for the leaders, Distillers-Seagrams, Walkers common and Industrial Alcohol A. Bullish rumors were floating around about Seagrams but there was nothing official locally to account for the heavy buying. The whole list displayed more strength than weakness.

Oil stocks had narrow gains by early afternoon and higher prices ruled in the food and heavy industrial group. Nickel, Brazilian and trial groups also lifted the up side. Ford A. all held to the up side.

Volume on the whole was small, influenced no doubt by the impending double holiday. With the close today trading will cease till next Tuesday.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, June 28.—(CP)—Displaying neither strength nor weakness, the Mining Section on the Toronto Exchange wound up the morning today with under-sized turnover. The list appeared generally strong around mid-day but a late weak spot made it look less confident before closing time. Pickle Crow was sold for a loss of about 30 cents and the Silvers, after showing early gains, closed off narrowly.

The Mining list maintained a steady tone in the closing session of the month with volume down. Some of the Senior issues including Dome, Lake Shore, Teck Hughes and Kerr-Addison, were firm, Kerr gaining 50 cents to $37 and the secondary issues were steady with exception of Pickle Crow which declined to 2.28.

Silver shares were higher in the early trading but dropped the gains after mid-day although the Silver group of the New York list advanced.

Disappointed over the passing of the dividend by Mar. Oil, holders offered stock down 15 cents to 80. The other oils were quiet.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, June 28—(AP)— Forward leanings were evident in the post financial markets today despite the apparent scarcity of tangible stimulants.

In the Canadian division of the list, Dominion Stores and Canadian Pacific sold a shade lower while Dome and International Nickel ruled steady. On the curb Lake Shore and Hiram Walker were both firm. Domestic government issues were narrow. Canadian dollars were unchanged at 99 15-16 cents.

Share gainers of fractions to a point or more included Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting, U.S. Smelting, National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern Union Pacific, Air Reduction, Ford, Chrysler, U.S. Steel, Low's, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and Westinghouse.

Demand for some of the silver mining group was attributed to rumors the United States Treasury might again lift the domestic rate for the metal.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York June 28—(AP)— The stock market retained its steady to firm appearance during late trading today with a few leaders extending early advances to more than a point.

At the beginning of the final hour shares selling 1 to 2 points higher included Air Reduction, American Can, International Harvester, Westinghouse, Cerro de Pasco, National Distillers, Schenley and American Telephone. Major fractional advances were shown by Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific and New York Central. The late tone was steady to firm. Sales approximated 700,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip
As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

The article in the current issue of "The Northern Miner" is somewhat misleading. First, the shares were never listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The stock is traded in on the unexpired department of the New York Curb Market and it was admitted for trading on that market at the request of New York brokers. The time for registration on that section of the New York Curb Market only expires May 31, 1936, Financial Service learns and not on July 15 next.

Standard Statistics states that the near term uncertainties confronting the security markets are growing in number and importance. The summer decline in business, plus the set problems created by further legislative enactments now being jammed through Congress, combine to taint to exert an adverse influence upon stock prices during the next several months. While the longer term prospect for broad economic recovery remains essentially unaltered by these forces of nearer term significance, individual investment policy should remain conservative, with continuing emphasis upon adequate income.

President John F. Hickell of the McIntyre Porcupine told the shareholders at the company annual meeting that no increase in dividend payments could be looked for. Mr. Hickell has been responsible in no small way for the position that McIntyre enjoys in the mining field today. He leans to the conservative side when it comes to the question of paying out money. Many holders of this stock do not think that it is necessary to carry a surplus account that is equivalent to $12.50 a share.

Duncan McLaren, president of Canada Bud Breweries, Ltd., has issued the following letter to shareholders:

The policy of Canada Bud Breweries Ltd. has always been to keep the shareholders well advised as to the progress of the company. It is gratifying to report that net earnings for the five months ending May 31, 1935, are greater than in the corresponding period of 1934, and there is every reason to think that the business for the balance of the year will continue to show an increase in profits.

Notwithstanding this situation, it is our experience that about 50 per cent of the year's business is done in the months of June, July, August and September. This seasonal character of the brewing industry is an important factor to note that this season, your directors feel that the question of further distribution of profits is one that should be left for consideration later in the year.

Produce Markets Remain Firm

Montreal, June 28.—Produce markets showed little change yesterday, continuing the steady tone of the previous day.

The butter market was quoted mainly 19 3-4c to 19 1-2c per lb. for cwtots or 1-c.l. lots of No. 1, Creamery, 93 score, but loss to the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 20 1-2c for solids and 21 1-2c for prints.

The cheese market was 10 1-2c to 10 5-8c for No. 1 Ontario, and mainly 10c for No. 1 Quebecs. Receipts, 1,500 boxes.

The egg market was unchanged. Graded shipments arriving in carlots or l.c.l. 104 were mainly 22 1-2c for A-large, 20 1-2c to 21c for A-medium, 18c-20c for B, and 17 1-2c to 17 3-4c for C. Receipts, 1,392 cases. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by wholesale jobbing houses at 26c for A-large, 24c for A-medium, 22c for B, and 21c for C, packed in cartons, and 1c less when bought loose. Dealers say there are not enough A-1 eggs coming in as yet to form a market.

Toronto, June 28.—Local produce prices yesterday were unchanged but in the main firm. Trading again was on the quiet side.

No. 1 Ontario butter solids continued at from 19 to 19½ cents, with some quarters of the trade reporting the higher level difficult to obtain. The west was said to be still asking 20 cents for No. 1.

Egg quotations again reflected firmness, while cheese and churning cream prices marked time.

SHORT INTEREST IN MART STATED

McIvor Gives This Evidence Before Commission

Ottawa, July 28 (CP)—Supporting the statement made by Premier R. B. Bennett in the House of Commons that John I. McIvor, General Manager of the Government Wheat Agency, had from 25,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels more under option than there was a visible supply of Canadian wheat to fill, George A. McIvor, assistant to Mr. McFarland, gave evidence before the Banking Committee on the Canada Grain Board Bill today.

This evidence was in contradiction to that of Grain Exchange witnesses, who claimed the difference between the 300,000,000 visible supply of Canadian wheat and the 238,000,000 were legitimate hedges covering floor, wheat afloat and wheat in other positions.

"My view," Mr. McIvor said, "is to analyzing the figures of the Canadian visible and having in mind the amount of wheat which is on hand for stabilization purposes, is that there is no justification for more than a large short interest in the Winnipeg market."

ALFRED PERRY WINS GOLF CROWN

Equals Record of 283 Set by Gene Sarazen And Cotton

Muirfield, June 28 (AP)—Alfred Perry, 30-year-old British Ryder Cup team player, won the British open golf championship today with final rounds of 67 and 72 for a record—equalling total of 283.

Perry, who previously had failed to finish in the money in the open championship, had a 12-foot putt on the 18th green to set a new low score for the tournament. He putted boldly for the cup and a birdie three but the ball slid inches past. As it was he tied the winning record score of 83 hung up by Gene Sarazen in 1932 and duplicated by Henry Cotton in 1934 at Sandwich.

The Englishman's victory gives Great Britain its fourth of firm grip on the championship, which before last year had been dominated for a decade of years by invading Americans. It was the first time in 14 years Britons have won it two years in a row.

THE RED TIGER

By ALANSON CROSBY

The next morning Judith was honored with a phone call from Captain McMahon requesting her presence at the police station, thus proving that her suspicion of Mrs. Heath's spying was well founded. Judith then, bravely, determined that she would not betray Randall, come what might.

Captain McMahon greeted her with elaborate politeness.

"It's sorry ondade I am to have to be bodered you, Miss Bates," he said.

"That's all right" said Judith lightly "but the next time you want to examine my wardrobe I wish you would send somebody who knows how to handle women's things without mussing them up. My roommate, Sally Foster was terribly provoked to find our clothes dumped in an indiscriminate heap in the middle of the floor."

Captain McMahon's eyes twinkled as he apologized.

"Sergeant Cheney is clumsy. I'll give the bye a dressing down. I'm sorry, Miss Bates, we had to do that. We have to do many things we'd rather not do."

"Yes," said Judith. "This summons, I suppose, for instance?"

Captain McMahon frowned slightly. "Yes. I see there is no need to bate about the bush. We know, Miss Bates, that you met Randall Spencer last night. We are obliged to insist that you tell us where he is."

Judith laughed.

"You might as well insist on having the moon . . . I don't know where he is, and if I did know I wouldn't tell you."

"Do you realise that you are impending Justice?" said Captain McMahon sternly.

"No, I do not think I am. You are trying to fasten crimes upon Randall Spencer of which he is innocent... You will get no assistance from me in that effort. Perhaps you have the power to put me in jail. Do that if you wish. I will tell you nothing."

"You are a very stubborn and very much deceived young lady, Miss Bates. But I will not put you in jail. Randall Spencer cannot escape us. We will have him before the week is out. You can go."

"Bedad, she's a game one," the Captain said to himself when Judith had left. "It's a pity such a fotin' young woman should fall for a handsome villain like Spencer." He sighed sorrowfully, "But that's the kind that always do."

MENTHOLATUM Gives COMFORT Daily

Judith was glad to receive notice that afternoon that she and Sally could resume their places in the office of Stokes, Anderson & Stokes the next morning.

She found the external appearance of the offices much the same as before, though Mr. Anderson's name-plate was on the door of the private office formerly occupied by Hezekiah Stokes. Miss Seltzer was Mr. Anderson's "Mother Goose", much as though she had never moved from the stiff-backed chair she was sitting in when Judith and Sally left at five o'clock the evening Mr. Stokes was killed. The two other girls besides Judith and Sally were back at their old places. Mr. Anderson came in and went to his own office, without a word or look, soon after Judith and Sally had taken up their old duties. They learned from Miss Seltzer that Mr. Grover a young lawyer, was occupying the office formerly assigned to Mr. Anderson.

Judith took some dictation from Mr. Anderson, whom she had seldom served in that capacity before, and found him a pleasant, middle-aged man with a keen mind and a characteristic manner. She imagined that he was "doing her up" as she made her notes from his dictation but she could see that he was not the type to make himself obnoxious to a pretty stenographer. He inspired friendliness and respect.

In a pause in the dictation Judith's eyes wandered to the floor near the corner where Mr. Stokes had kept his desk. Mr. Anderson had had it moved to the opposite side of the room. A piece of the linoleum covering the floor, about six feet square, had been removed and replaced by a new piece, which, while of the same pattern, was a little brighter, by reason of its newness, than the surrounding fabric.

"That", said Mr. Anderson, noting her glance, "was where Mr. Stokes' body was found. The old linoleum was so blood-soaked had it removed and a piece set in. Perhaps I should have had it all taken up, but somehow I like this pattern."

Judith shuddered at the thought of the old man who was so kind to her in his own gruff way weltering in his blood on that spot.

Mr. Stokes thought a good deal of you, I have reason to believe, Miss Bates," said Anderson.

"He was very kind to me," Judith acknowledged.

"A man of peculiarities, but of sound heart," said Mr. Anderson, and proceeded with his dictation.

Just before noon Judith was summoned to Harold Stokes' office. She answered the summons almost rebelliously. The last she came in contact with this man, she thought the better.

She stood with one hand on the doorknob, eyeing him in no friendly manner, half inclined to tell him she would take no dictation from him even if that meant she must lose her job.

"Shut the door, please," he said ingratiatingly, "and sit down. . . . I want to talk to you on a very important matter."

"I'll stand, if you please," said Judith stiffly. "What is it?"

"Don't be like that, Judith," Stokes pleaded. "I'll admit that I treated you badly that night at The Red Tiger, but that you have reason to dislike me, I was drunk and didn't realize what I was doing. Listen Judith! I'm crazy about you! I want you. Will you?" Judith had turned toward the door. She paused with her hand on the knob as Stokes rose from the desk at which he was seated.

"You know the old man left me all the money. Judith my beauty! Can you afford to turn me down?"

WILL

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Judith's instinctive dislike of Harold Stokes mounted to contempt and loathing with his light reference to the "old man" whose misplaced affection had brought fortune to the heartless nephew.

"I'm sorry," she said curtly.

"Sorry? Sorry for what?" young Stokes demanded.

"Sorry he left you his money. You don't deserve it," was her frank response.

"I suppose," sneered Stokes, "you think you deserved it. Oh, I'm no fathead! I know how you worked around the old man, and I know he was kind of soft about you. But this is his will!" —Stokes picked up a document from the desk and flourished it triumphantly— "and outside of a few charitable bequests which he might just as well have omitted—they're all fakes —he left everything to his dear nephew"—sne.

"See! It's signed and witnessed all in due form. I'm going down now and have it probated. The old man's estate will run close to half a million dollars, and it's practically all mine, Judith! All! It is cast-iron and unbreakable. If there's any other will, I'll eat it."

"Why tell me all this? I'm not especially interested," said Judith.

"Because I want you to have her price, and I can afford to pay yours now," said Stokes confidently. "As soon as I can get my fingers on this dough I'm going on a world tour and I'm going to take you with me, Beauty!"

Judith's first impulse was to slap the insolent face leering at her, though contempt restrained that movement. Harold stepped back out of reach and eyed her coldly.

"Don't put on any high and mighty airs, Beauty. You're a vamp of the old-fashioned. You'll like me when you know me a little better. I'm not a bad sort, at that. Stick to me and I'll treat you right. We'll have a swell time, see things, and I'll dress you and jewel you in a way you've never dreamed of. You'd mind it a lot better than slaving over a typewriter at twenty dollars a week."

Judith put her hand on the doorknob again.

"Your proposition doesn't interest me in the least," she said coldly.

"Don't go," said Stokes hastily. "I'm not through talking with you yet. Listen! I know you've fallen for this chap, Randall Spencer, pretty hard, but that's no good, Beauty. You may as well forget him. He's cleared out to save his skin, and if the police ever get their hands on him he'll go to the chair for the murder of my uncle." Stokes' lips twisted in a crooked, sinister grin. "He did me a good turn there. The old fossil might have lived quite a while yet if Spencer hadn't killed him, eh?"

"That's a lie!" said Judith quickly. "Randall Spencer didn't kill Mr. Stokes, and you know it."

"What do you mean?" Stokes shot a sudden, startled look at her. "What do you know about it?"

"I know it's all a lie, and Mr. Spencer is innocent. He would be incapable of such a beastly thing!"

Stokes gave a relieved laugh.

"Oh, still your hero, is he? Well, you're wasting your time and emotion. There's not the goods on Randy all right. If quarrelled with the old man the evening of the murder, he was the last person with him, and his initials were written in blood by my beloved uncle as he lay dying on the floor of his office. Many a man has gone to the chair on less conclusive evidence than that. So you may as well cross your hero off your books, Beauty, and accept my offer. Do it and we will be sailing on a liner within two weeks for Paris, London, Rome or what have you. What do you say?"

"I say that you are very insulting —and goodbye."

"Not on!" Stokes seized one of her hands as she was about to open the door. "Don't go yet. I haven't played my last card."

Seven months ago Cole Brothers-Clyde Beatty Circus was just an idea. Today it is the largest independent circus in the world and all credit is due to Jess Adkins and Zack Terrell, veteran circus executives, for the remarkable manner in which they assembled, built, and created this show, the talk of the entire amusement world.

When the Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty trains arrive in Belleville next Tuesday for afternoon and night performances at Pine and Dufferin streets, spectators will see the finest circus trains of the present day. And when you look at the long line of flat cars, stock cars and Pullman sleepers, as well as the parapernalia, wagons, horses, elephants, and other circus equipment remember that last November it was only starting to grow, from an idea to a reality.

Probably no other circus men could have accomplished this seemingly impossible task, but Messrs. Terrell and Adkins knew just where every piece of idle circus equipment was located. They knew where elephants, horses, animals or wagons were for sale. They had money and cash brought about instantaneous transactions. They surrounded themselves with the best bosses in the white top field, so this show grew and developed so rapidly that the day the show opened in Indianapolis, they ordered a new canvas, the biggest tent to ever be carried by any circus!

The names of such men as Fred Seymour, P. J. McGrath, John Eberle, Roland Diller, M. W. Campbell, Earl Lindsey, N. D. Burkhart and Ernest Tucker mean little to the circus enthusiast, but to those that know the circus business they are the best staff of bosses in the game. All have years of experience and they know every town, every lot and every situation that will come up during the summer months!

Not only back with the show, but ahead, Messrs. Adkins and Terrell engaged agents that were capable and efficient. Floyd King the general agent has been connected with shows since 1911. Robert K. Hickey, general press agent, has been handling celebrities and big shows since 1918. William Backell, manager of the advertising car has been in charge of bill-posting since 1912. Clyde Willard, Frank Mahara, M. J. Lyons, Klara Knecht, Rex Backwell, Earl Dechinger, Al Ringman and Clarence Adolph all know the "entire North American" continent as well as the school child that has just received 100 in geography.

Mr. Terrell started in the show business in 1903 with the John Robinson Circus and has been a circus manager since 1916. Since prior to the war he has held executive positions with all the high-end shows. And as for Clyde Beatty himself, everyone knows how he went from a menagerie attendant to the highest salaried and most popular star in spangle-land.

That is the organization of the Cole Bros.-Clyde Beatty circus and when the show appears here next Tuesday the circus fans of Belleville are going to have the pleasure of seeing the world's newest, big circus that has been endorsed by every critic and every patron. Words of praise have been heaped on constantly since the show opened in Chicago.

First Car to Close the Gap Between Low Price and Fine-car Performance

THE FORD V-8 occupies a distinctive place among automobiles. There is no way to compare it with any other car because there is no other car like it.

The Ford enables you to step up into the fine-car class in performance, beauty, comfort and safety. But there is no stepping up in price. That is kept down by Ford low-profit policies and unique manufacturing methods. These are as different as the car itself.

What the Ford has done is to establish a new standard of value. Now, fine-car performance isn't limited to the well-to-do. The Ford V-8 has made it possible for the average motorist to have the kind of car that used to be beyond his reach.

It takes eight cylinders to give modern performance. And the Ford is powered by a V-8 — the finest type of eight-cylinder engine. You have to pay more than $3500 for that in any other car.

BENEFITS ARE TOLD BY M.P.

of the country, free trading with British markets, better prices for Canadian produce and better conditions as regards employment were only a few of the benefits enjoyed during the regime of the Hon. Mr. Bennett and his government, claimed Mr. Harris.

Unemployment was admittedly a problem with which the present government was now coping, but little help was being given by the Ontario Government in this matter, it was stated. Unrest had been noticeable in the ranks of the workless. An element, which was distinctly not Canadian had crept in and fed the smouldering unrest to activity. An effort, it was intimated, was being made by this element to break up constitutional law and order in this country.

"Think of that when you mark your ballot. Remember, when you mark it against the present government you are marking it in favor of this element," again reminded the Toronto M.P.

Over one thousand pages of new legislation aimed solely for the betterment of conditions of the people of this country have been enacted by the present Bennett government during its regime, embracing farm loans, relief, old age pension, sickness and health insurance, Labor laws and social legislation, all of which has kept the country abreast of the times, it was pointed out. Yet little was said of the problems, which confronted the country could be had from those who represented the opposition, it was charged.

Draws Comparisons

Sketchily, yet in figures, that left little to the imagination of his hearers, Mr. Harris drew comparisons of the past several years.

"During the nine years between 1921 and 1930 this country and other countries throughout the world reflect tariff walls against our products. One of the greatest offenders was the country south of us. When the Bennett governmental came in it was found that we could not break into these markets and we appealed to the Old Country. In 1932 we had a Prime Minister, who saw a market established, Heads of countries of the British Empire were brought together and trade agreements were worked out. Exports to Britain increased fifty-four per cent.; imports twenty-two per cent. Exports of pork products, minerals, all showed a remarkable increase. In lumber, the extra, shipments over, and above that of previous years would have built a 4-pin floor between Halifax and Vancouver. Other exports showed a like gain over and above those of the preceding period.

"Then the Liberals rise and say that nothing has been done to gain markets for our produce, then they are not telling the truth," declared the Toronto M.P.

"When hogs sold on the Chicago market for four cents two years ago, farmers of this country were getting eight cents because they enjoyed the quota for pork products on the British market," continued Mr. Harris. "There were forty-eight millions of dollars more in 1934 over that of 1932 for the same production in this market, and not even then were we able to reach the full quota."

"Five times as much nickel was shipped overseas during 1934 as in 1932; apples, fruit and other commodities also gained the same ratio of sale in the Old Country markets. If nothing else had ever been done you have enough justification there to return the Bennett government again reminded the Toronto M.P.

Always Pay Dues

"The Conservative party has played the game, that is the answer to the question of what it has done," continued the speaker. "The Bennett government has kept things in line. The country owes the present administration its thanks. Had the present administration turned out, the slump will set the wind is in their back and they will now do as they please."

"What would they have said to the representatives of those unfortunates out of work when they came down to Ottawa? Don't you think the answer would be, R. B. Bennett gave them was more to the point than the one which Mackenzie King would have given?"

Pointing out that the backbone of Ontario and this country was made up of the English, the Irish and the Scotch residents, kept Canadians all, Mr. Harris urged them to consider the fact, that in them alone lay the power at the coming election to decide the fate of the country by which they lived.

"You are the keystone of the arch of the Canadian Federation," and again: "Think things through," urged Mr. Harris in his concluding remarks.

James F. Hill, M.P.P.

C. A. Payne, K.C., introduced, was brief and to the point. Declaring, that he would much prefer to sit and listen. He thanked his sponsors briefly for the introduction and voiced his appreciation at being asked to address the audience

James F. Hill, who followed pointed out that it looked well for the Conservative party to have a gathering such as the one he faced. Thurlow was to be congratulated upon the splendid organization work that was being carried on in that section, and for the special efforts that was being made to have a good such organization intact and working.

"My past experience has taught me to depend on Thurlow always," added Mr. Hill.

The present sitting members of the Conservative party have a lot to be thankful for that Premier Hepburn is in the Ontario Cabinet, declared the East Hastings representative.

"It has just been one blunder after another since he went in there, and the Bennett government is benefitting greatly through this."

"Hepburn and his government have left a trail of broken election promises ever since they went into power," declared Mr. Hill. His contrasted conditions of employment before the recent election with present day conditions. "Then we had men working on the roads at a good rate of pay. Now we have practically none working," declared Mr. Hill.

"Hepburn has preached economy. He told you he was going to save money as soon as he got in there. He was going to turn out all the superfluous workers. He did turn them out, but the ones that were turned out were all Conservatives and he put back Liberals two to one instead. Thousands and thousands of dollars are squandered by Hepburn and his government day after day," said the speaker.

"But what else heard a lot about relief. Men have been started to think the same things were done. Relief up. Why? They say that it is on account of the Prime Minister Bennett not giving them any help. Now they spend about $750,000 a month for relief. What would happen if King was leading the Federal government?"

The actions of Premier Hepburn are having a good effect on the Conservative party and will count a lot at the next election, maintained Mr. Hill. The speaker urged his hearers not to underestimate the strength or the organization of the opposition and next year, he pointed out, they were organized "second to none" and the strength of the organization is still being kept up, he added.

Speaker Predicts Win

"The country will go Conservative at the next election, but it means hard work for us and complete unity within the ranks; everyone must work toward that end," warned Mr. Hill.

Prime Minister Bennett was cited by the speaker as the most outstanding man in Canada. "Those will know the sacrifice he has made to save the credit of this Dominion and the efforts he is putting forth to help the country in spite of the fact that he has received no assistance from those on the opposite side. There has never been a man in power who has done as much to get trade in this country as Mr. Bennett.

Mackenzie King on the other hand has not offered one single constructive suggestion that might react to the good of the country or assist her out of the depression," he said.

Mr. Hill reminded that there must be no "personalities" in the coming election, but rather a good straight fight that would return the Bennett government to power with a sweeping majority.

W. E. Tummon M.P.

Facing the assembled hundreds and declaring again his appreciation for the honor of being selected standard bearer for the riding of South Hastings at the coming election, Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P. promised that he was ready to go out and give his best to the people of the riding in the best interests of the party.

Mr. Tummon made brief mention of the relief work question.

Propaganda Rampant

"There has been persistent, malicious propaganda of those connected with the Hepburn administration, that the reason the road work was closed down was because the Dominion government had refused to give the aid they should. Going further back to the days previous to the recent election, they said then that if they were elected, wages would be increased, there would be more work, and the money would be taken out of the gas tax and motor vehicle licenses to pay for it. In confirmation of this I can quote from a speech delivered by Premier Hepburn previous to the election, and printed in a Belleville paper of June 13, 1934 'If elected to office I will see that all unemployed are given jobs without an extra assistance, though federal unemployment be withdrawn, that's what he said' added Mr. Tummon.

"When the Hepburn government took office all the work on the roads was shut down. Then the road camps closed," continued Mr. Tummon. "I have learned that the boys in the camps were told the reason for the shut down was the Dominion government refused to give any aid. I was also told, that a person of South Hastings, who was discharged from one road camp was told, that it was the means of having him fired. I of course, have a lot of influence with the Hepburn government's, declared Mr. Tummon with a wry smile amid laughter.

Agreements had been entered into with the Federal government which ran from April 31 to March 31 ending on the fiscal year. When Mr. Hepburn took office these had expired, it was pointed out. Then the Dominion, it was claimed, had offered a lump sum to be used as the province saw fit. Since July 1st 1934 to May 17, 1935 the Dominion gave for relief the sum of $13,500.00 in the 12 month period, declared Mr. Tummon.

"And that wasn't all," he continued. "On May 18 in addition, it passed, under order-in-council, an act authorizing nine hundred and forty-two thousand dollars toward the construction of certain provincial and municipal relief works. The Dominion offered to pay fifty per cent of the cost of construction of a new highway two and one half million dollars and in addition, made an adjustment of work done for three millions and agreed to pay for same."

Tummon Asks Question

"During the Hepburn regime they have received more than Mr. Henry did any of the years he was in power, yet what is he work? What are they doing with the money? I don't know of a single piece of work carried on of their own accord by the Provincial government. The Hepburn government has also received more during the past year for relief than any year in which Premier Henry was in power," declared Mr. Tummon.

Other days are coming in which these questions will be discussed and dissected more thoroughly, said the speaker. "No government has ever had to face more and more strenuous years than the Bennett government during its administration," he continued. "Yet I challenge anyone to tell me of any constructive suggestion ever made by the opposition to assist us through this period or to help along conditions. When bill after bill was introduced to try and help they fought them and said they were no good.

Mr. Tummon referred to the establishment of the dairy industry, which is to be made possible through an amendment to the Marketing Act. It was through his own efforts that recognition had finally been given this matter. "I don't mind telling you I worked day and night on this thing declaring even that the government was opposed by the other side."

Through this new amendment stabilization of the dairy industry will be undertaken through the diversion of surplus milk to the cheese factories instead of using it to make butter with which Canada can not hope to compete with other countries. On the other hand cheese, which has always enjoyed premium sales in Great Britain will be the major industry in dairy products, and will again be in a position to recapture the overseas markets, this declared Mr. Tummon, will be one of the best things, that has ever happened to the Bay of Quinte district.

Mr. Tummon related the story of the dairy farmer who grew no produce because bull weevil attacked his cotton, potato bugs the potatoes and like pests his other crops. "He grew nothing and wasn't bothered."

"That's the attitude of the Liberal party right now, just when the country is going through the most difficult years of its existence," he declared in conclusion

Vote of Thanks

Ex-Mayor Geo. A. Reid of this city in the briefest of addresses moved a motion of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Parrott for their efforts in making the social such a success on their grounds. It was promptly seconded by Mr. Frank McGovern.

"This crowd looks good for the party," declared Mr. Reid. "Last year we were in somewhat of a Rip Van Winkle position, we went to sleep, and we didn't wake up in time. But there won't be any Rip this time."

"Why is a Liberal like a hole in a silk stocking?" Mr. Reid asked. "Because it is on its last legs," he answered.

During the evening, novelty songs and recitations by volunteer entertainers enlivened the scene, while at intervals the Baxter orchestra assisted with excellent musical selections. The social was concluded by the serving of refreshments and coffee by the ladies in attendance.

In the provincial field, the Liberal sweep were the election of Walter W. S. Foster, 27, youngest candidate in the field, and the defeat of Hon. Dr. H. I. Taylor, Minister of Health and Labor.

Mr. Foster, son of Senator W. E. Foster, a former Premier of New Brunswick, led the poll in King's after his first election campaign. Dr. Taylor met defeat for the first time after a career of 27 years in the legislature.

The Dominion Marketing Act was regarded as the main issue in Carleton, a potato-growing county which

Loss of deposits by nine Conservatives and two Independents gave the Liberals additional gains, including seats in previous Conservative strongholds such as York county and Saint John City.

In provincial field, the Liberal sweep were the election of Walter W. S. Foster, 27, youngest candidate in the field, and the defeat of Hon. Dr. H. I. Taylor, Minister of Health and Labor.

Mr. Foster, son of Senator W. E. Foster, a former Premier of New Brunswick, led the poll in King's after his first election campaign. Dr. Taylor met defeat for the first time after a career of 27 years in the legislature.

Marketing Act Issue

The Dominion Marketing Act was regarded as the main issue in Carleton, a potato-growing county which returned three Conservatives. During the campaign Liberal candidates signed creation and operation of the Eastern Canada Potato Marketing Board had resulted in "great issues" to potato growers and shippers.

The three Carleton Conservatives were Hon. P. G. Squires, Speaker of the last House, G. W. Perry and R. W. Merrill. Their only campaign on the opposition side of the next House will be Robert McAllister and A. G. Smith, elected in Saint John County.

Thus the 49 legislative seats will be occupied by five former government supporters and 43 Liberals, a complete contrast with the standing at dissolution: Conservatives 27, Liberals 14, five Conservatives and two Liberal vacancies.

Four cabinet ministers were defeated in two constituencies. Premier Tilley and Hon. W. H. Harrison, Attorney-General, in Saint John City; Dr. Taylor and Hon. G. H. L. Dickburn, President of the Executive Council, in Charlotte.

Verdict on "Essentials"

Other defeated members of the government are Hon. Lewis Smith, Minister of Agriculture; Hon. Dr. D. A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works, Restigouche; Hon. A. J. Leger, Provincial Secretary-Treasurer, Westmorland; and Hon. E. A. Reilly, Chairman of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission and ex-Minister without portfolio, Moncton City.

"The result of the election in New Brunswick has been similar to the result of elections in other provinces, where governments have been in power during the time of depression," said Mr. Tilley, who succeeded Hon. G. Richards as Premier in 1923.

Mr. Dysart, whose party returned to power after ten years as an opposition, thought a verdict had been rendered on essentials."

"Through the broad vista of the country, our program inspired hope," said the Liberal leader, "and it shall be the aim of the new government, soon to take over, to give effect to that program."

A general re-organization of governmental departments, with establishment of a special department to deal with matters of a federal and inter-provincial nature, has been announced as a Liberal policy, and A. P. Paterson, Saint John City, is expected to head this department.

During his campaign Mr. Paterson said the electorate of New Brunswick would have the opportunity "to say whether or not they wish the agreements of confederation to be carried out."

Canton, China, June 28 (CP)—The magic word "gold" has sent the natives from all over the country to Dragon Head peak, highest peak on the Tai Ming mountains, about 30 miles north of Nanking in Kwangsi. Washed down the mountain slopes by heavy rains, vast quantities of gold were reported discovered in the bottom of a very clear pool of water.

Yankees Increase Lead in American to 3 1-2 Games

Boston Red Sox Drop Due to Ineffective Hurling

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

After nearly half a season of trying to make the best of things, it begins to look as if Boston Red Sox again will have to resign themselves to taking a place among the also rans of the American League until they can get more effective pitching.

There are several other clubs in the same predicament and the Sox haven't stopped trying, but the wonard lost records speak in no uncertain tones. Wes Ferrell is the best record of the Boston flingers and he has taken his lumps frequently, absorbing his eighth defeat of the season against 10 victories yesterday. Letty Grove, with six victories and six defeats and Johnny Welch with a 5-3 record are his other stand-bys, as none of the other members of the mound corps has proved dependable.

A's Win by Big Count

The Sox just couldn't do anything right yesterday, against the Athletics, who in turn couldn't do anything wrong and as a result Philadelphia won 16-2. While Johnny Marcum was pitching fourth rate ball for the A's, Pinky Higgins connected for three home runs, two with runners on base. Bob Johnson slammed his 12th circuit drive of the season and Marcum teased in one among the 15 swats of Ferrell and Henry Johnson.

The Athletics' heavy hitting set the example for the entire major league program. The Yankees, relying on four pitchers for 19 hits, including Ben Chapman's circuit clout, looped Washington 15-8 and increased their lead over the idle Cleveland Indians to 2 1-2 games.

The only bright spot of the game for the Senators, who made 14 hits off Red Ruffing and still couldn't get anywhere, was the mound debut of Ralph (Red) Kress, veteran utility infielder who apparently has decided to follow in the footsteps of Bucky Walters of the Phillies. He appeared in the eighth, just after a seven-run Yankee rally, and managed to put the side after giving one hit.

Tigers Move Up.

The Tigers went after the third place White Sox with 6 home run barrage topped by Hank Greenberg's 30th four-ply drive of the year and came out with a 9-5 decision which put them into a virtual tie with the pale hose. Pete Fox, Chesley Gehringer and Mickey Cochrane also hit Tiger homers.

The Braves and Phillies shrieked it out in a doubleheader that was the only National League affair scheduled and wound up on even terms. Boston won the opener 11-3 as Dutch Brandt pitched five-hit ball and Wally Berger smashed his 18th homer with the bases loaded. The Braves also threatened to capture the second clash, bringing the count up from 7-0 to 7-7 in the late innings, but finally went down 9-7 when Johnny Vergez hit for the circuit in the ninth.

All-Star Team From American Is Announced

(By Paul Mickelson)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, June 28.—(AP)—After almost as many sleepless nights as he spent last fall worrying over his World Series lineup, Manager Mickey Cochrane of Detroit today announced his American League lineup of twenty players, for the third All Star game against the National forces at Chicago's Comiskey park, July 6.

Every club in the circuit was represented in the lineup selected by Cochrane with the aid of seven baseball experts in the league, the New York Yankees and Detroit leading with four and seven, Philadelphia and Boston each placed third with two and Washington two each, and St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox each one.

The line-up consists of two pitchers two southpaws in Lefty Gomez of the Yanks and Lefty Grove of the Red Sox; three catchers, six infielders and six outfielders.

The lineup, allowed at the last minute because of the injury to outfielder Earl Averill of Cleveland, batting star of last year's American League strumming, follows:

Pitchers—Mel Harder, Cleveland; Robert Grove, Boston; Vernon Gomez, New York; Schoolboy Rowe, Detroit; Tommy Bridges, Detroit.

Catchers—Cochrane, Detroit; Bill Dickey, New York; Rick Ferrell, Boston. Infielder—Lou Gehrig, New York; Charles Gehringer, Detroit; Joe Cronin, Boston; Joe Kuhel, Washington; Jimmie Foxx, Philadelphia, and Eddie Mayo, Washington.

Outfielders—Bob Johnson, Philadelphia; Al Simmons, Chicago; Joe Vosmik, Cleveland; Roger Cramer, Philadelphia; Jimmy Foxx, New York and Sam West, St. Louis.

Batting Practice Battery—Earl Keefe, Philadelphia, pitcher; Ralph Tyrkin, Boston, catcher.

Trainer—Dennis Carroll, Detroit.

Coaches—Jimmy Dykes, Chicago; St. Louis; Del Baker, Detroit.

KIWANIS WRESTLING

An example of one of the favours he held sway by the herculean Elmo Lovely, the second Dutch debutt, who wrestles Jack Mawtin, Belleville's entry in the semi-final bout of tonight's Kiwanis wrestling show at the Belleville arena. Lovely, who is a protege of the famous Indian Deathlock, was held best of the evening bout by George Richards, the Jewish title-holder in Canada, lakes on Walter Parnell, Canada's self-styled heavyweight champion and professional boxer player. The opening bout sees two local favourites in Jack Peart and Jimmy Crockett, all contestants have tried and proven artist in the grunt and groan circle and should provide top-notch attraction staged by the local Kiwanis Club for their charity causes.

The latter board has to be appointed by resolution of responsibility are Jack Andrews, Wally Hilton and Jack Keegan with Andrews being in line for the position of head hut leader of the entire camp. The date for the midsummer fills has completed arrangements to have Frank O'Neill of the St. Michael's A.C. attend the camp for three weeks, where he will be achieved expert tuition in athletics. Young O'Neill will be given the opportunity to increase his knowledge of track and field sports at the suggestion of the Ontario Athletic Commission, all of his expenses being defrayed by the Commission. Local athletes of promise may also be sent to the palatial camp at Lake Couchiching. Incidentally the first three local boys named are to be employed for the entire duration of the camp's season. Their appointment were made possible through the efforts of Commissioner Mills.

The wrestling at Kingston the Stewart-Warners are scheduled to re-play their the game of May 22nd when the all circuit are to meet on this game as the winner will be declared head in the loss one soon. A win for the Radios will give them six victories with four defeats, while a win for the Packs would leave them five wins and only four defeats. A local victory would back actually nice to bring home to the fans. Both clubs are scheduled on journeys to Peterboro for a meeting game on the holiday. In all probability Art Collins and Ed Cheney, the two pitchers to oppose each other in the original four all games will prove healthies. As a team the Radios are not hitting quite as well today as they were two weeks ago, when the first release of the season was given to Ted Sabol. At that time the Stewart-Warners were hitting exactly .19% better than now. When they released Ed Kingston, this afternoon they were without two pakers under that picture, as at the .325 clip, a figure much too high to be maintained for the season. Of the regulars, Johnnie Kerr is leading the parade with an average of .367, with Beny Gery second with an average of .357 for ten games played. Carl Calhoun and Lefty Reid are the boys in hitting, his average being .352. Just imagine not a regular member of the Radios in the first ten and .300 class, no wonder the other clubs in the league are calling the Radios the hitting wonders."

It is likely that the sponsors of junior O.B.A.A. baseball in Belleville started the ball rolling. The Belleville and District junior league is officially affiliated with the parent body, but as yet nothing has been done in the matter of organizing a league. It is a well known fact about town that the local Kiwanis Club is ready and willing to sponsor a junior baseball team in Belleville, but if this team is chosen, they will have little opportunity to engage in league competition before the O.B.A.A. play-downs commence, unless the officials of the Hastings County junior league show some kind of action. There is sufficient junior material in Belleville to garner a right smart junior club, but if such a team is not afforded practice and more especially competitive matches versus other clubs, they cannot be expected to do justice to themselves when they face teams which has been playing all season; i.e. Peterboro juniors.

All local sport fans, boys and highways lead to the Belleville Arena tonight for the all-star Kiwanis wrestling show. Without fear of contradiction the Kiwanis promoters advertise tonight's show as the big-gest attraction of the season. "We have endeavored to bring the cream of the crop together for this show and will continue to do so for the balance of the season in order to like an elimination contest," stated Chairman George Lee and it is to be intimated, that when the weather becomes more favorable Friday night wrestling shows would be disseminated until next Autumn. At any rate the Kiwanis promoters and the Arena tonight need no introduction as a large crowd is anticipated. The promoters have such ring celebrities as Walter Parnell, Elmo Soldiers, George Richards, Mr. Marvel, Ed Petraff, Jack Peart all available the same night, well the show speaks for itself and should draw the largest crowd of the season. Incidentally there has been an increased demand for ringside seats during the period of Cricket and Lee has set aside 1,000 is being booked for. "Neff sed, come early and make sure you get a good seat."

Horse racing in this district is being kept alive by the local established Napanee Driving Club and on Monday's a real card is being offered for the lovers of the harness horse. To date the genial secretary, Lester Byers has received seven entries for the 2.25 class, and eight for the 2.34 class. The fast class has an entry list, or four with more to come. The Napanee park is one of the most picturesque in the province and a pleasant place to spend an afternoon. There will be ball games both hard and soft for those enjoying this sport.

Lovers of lawn bowling will be treated to an extra special event in the line of sport, on Saturday when the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will hold its annual doubles tournament. Belleville has always been the mecca for lawn bowlers in Eastern Ontario and Dominion bowls for. Lawn bowlers from all parts of Eastern Ontario have been invited to compete.

Apparently smarting under two previous reverses the Young Canada entry in the Senior Softball loop turned on the league leading Aylmer Club and gave them a 11 to 3 drubbing last night. It was the losers' third loss in five outings, while in the bantam series of the K.I.-Y. Juvenile loop Aylmer evened up the final playoff series by taking the long end of a 7 to 5 count over their Tigers. Each team has now won a play-off game and the third and final game for the bantam softball championship of Belleville will be played between these two teams this evening.

A new world's wrestling champion was crowned at Boston last night when Dan O'Mahoney, the Irish contender, took the only fall of the night after 76 minutes of rugged grappling before over 30,000 fans in Boston. It was the Irishman's 50th consecutive victory on this continent in something like six months, while with one exception, the Salt-rodd incident, it was the Golden Greek's first reverse in six years, result a new champ.

LETTER EXPLAINS RECENT FIASCO

Secretary of the O. A. C. Writes to Commissioner Mills

A letter received today from J. P. Fitzgerald, Secretary of the Ontario Athletic Commission by Commissioner W. J. "Penny" Mills respecting the non appearance of Frankie Genovese at the Kiwanis wrestling show last week speaks for itself and is herewith given.

June 27th, 1933.

Mr. W J Mills,
16 Chatham Stress,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Mills:-

Please convey to the Belleville Kiwanis Club the sincere regrets of the Commission at the failure of Frankie Genovese to report as per contract in time for their show here last week.

The blame rests entirely with Genovese as for reasons, best known to himself, arrived in Belleville at 1.30 in the morning.

I may say that, had it not been for the plea on behalf of Genovese by Mr. Meagher, he would have been suspended. As it was he was fined $100 and suspended until a reception of that sort of thiuk by him or any other boxer will mean that the delinquent will be set down for a good long period.

It was very decent of Mr. Meagher who, I presume, spoke the feelings of the Kiwanis Club, to have given the benefit of any doubt and Thursday night he reasonably supported some foundation for it that he did go Belleville, even if, too late.

Trusting that the Belleville people will affix the blame where it belongs, I am,

Yours sincerely,
J. P Fitzgerald,
Secretary.

ORIOLES, TEAM TO BE FEARED

(By the Associated Press)

A short winning streak by any one of six clubs can cause a complete upheaval in the International League standings and Baltimore Orioles, resting in third place only one and one half games behind the leading Buffalo Bisons and only one half game behind second place Montreal, appear,to be in an ideal spot to do that.

The Orioles are the proud possessors of a two-game streak and with the return of Chief Meeker from Newark Bears, the third pitching staff has been strengthened materially. Meeker, Harry Gumbert, Bill Kohlman, George Darrow and Fred (Sheriff) Blake will be the starting hurlers with the veterans Al Thomas and Austin Jonnard on hand for bullpen duty.

It is early in the season, but the heavy stick-work of the Orioles, that accounted for their second straight victory over Syracuse Chiefs yesterday, despite the fact they were out-homered 5 to 3, the Birds won out in the 11th inning 9-8.

Vines Hits 22rd

Henry Cana collected two circuit clouts with Glenn Wright, Legett and Johnny Kroner also deftswung his 23rd of the season for the Birds.

Toronto and Newark kept pace with the Orioles, receiving the games from Rochester and Albany.

The Bears had it fairly easy as Ted Kleinhans held the Seminoles to seven well scattered blows, while his teammates connected for 16 safe six to one.

Cal Chapman's two long homers enabled Toronto to make a success out of his night game with Jersey City, defeating the Wings 7-5. The Leafs landed on Pearce and Hollingsworth for runs in the second to overcome a 5-2 lead. Chapman's second homer was the difference.

Buffalo and Montreal were rained out.

DAN O'MAHONEY NEW CHAMPION

Boston, June 28. — (CP) — Dan O'Mahoney, young giant from County Cork, who married in the rank of the Irish Free State Army only seven month ago, paraded today at the head of some part of other of the heavyweight wrestling division.

The Irish grappler last night stripped Jimmy London, Great Admirer, of whatever claims he had to the title he won a crowd of 30,000 fans.

The 23-year old, 224-pound Celt who had won his provisional Boston American matches, ended a one fall match by pinning London's shoulders with a flying body, six scors after an hour and 16 minutes

Daily Short Story

THE PRESTIDIGITATOR!

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Look," said Mushky McGonigle as he was ushered into the office of the Donovan Amusement Co., Inc., of which I am the Inc. "Look, I gotta good one for you this time." And I took up at his then and put that tired feeling in my voice as I said him to scram.

"But Bill," he pleads, "this is a natural. It's a wow. It's—"

"Yeah, I know," I cut in. "It's a sure-fire knockout and all you want is a ten percent cut of the dough you're expecting me to support until I find out he's a flop like the rest of your 'finds!'"

"Bill!" insists Mushky, "I know I've given you flops, but this guy ought to be the greatest wrestler that ever came over the pike, he's a—"

"I know, I know, he's a marvel, he's stupendous, he's magnificent, he's even got a new twist—what can be this time? An Algerian camel driver, like the last one you brought me, or a Patagonian Hypnotist, like the time before?"

"He's neither of those things," said Mushky seriously. He's (and here he used one for effect) He's a prestidigitator!"

I got sore.

Another Fursuit

"Listen," I yelp, "I don't care what the guy's religion is—what I want to know is, is he a wrestler?"

Mushky looks pained.

"Ain't I just told you that he's a prestid—a prest—a presti-good—aw, I can't say it again. Anyway he's the greatest guy with his hands I ever saw. All I ask you to do is try him out—and I bet you this—even if he don't wrestle a lick he'll prove him of the greatest drawing cards in the business."

So once again I fall for Mushky's line of fast talk and I agree to give his presti-er-juggler a crack at the noble and gentle art of self defense.

Mushky brings him to the gym later that afternoon and I look his boy friend over. I see a tall hunky guy with polished off black mustache who looks like a truck driver at a masquerade ball. The thing that attracts me to the guy is his hands. They're never still! For a minute I had Lenny Nau enough to snap a football like a marble, besides they had ripples with muscles.

While I was talking to him he unconsciously began toying with a ring stanchion and when Mushky says something that makes him laugh he holds on to the pipe and when he recovers from his mirth, the 3-inch steel pipe looks like a pretzel. What a man!

I took him with a couple of roundheels and true to form they roll over and play dead after a few minutes in the ring with my new boy, whose only fault, as far as I can see, is his addiction to that moustache I have heretofore mentioned.

I plead with him to get rid of it but he says no. He says he likes it and is going to keep it. Knowing and is going to keep it. Knowing the wrestling profession, I feel deep foreboding about this, going to happen to it when he tangles with a tough one some-day, but he tells me he's got an answer to that and to stop worrying.

Everything is hunky dory then, until we tangle with Slugger Slavin, whose reputation for roughness is only exceeded by the truth. Slavin is the guy who introduced the neck into the profession and while other wrestlers learned holds, he used his neck for punching heavy bags for exercise.

Well, there's a pretty good crowd in the house when I toss my jurgler to the lion and they roar when Slavin comes tearing out of his corner and bets the lad across the face with his elbow.

But that's nothing to the roar that goes up when the lad grabs the elbow as it's sliding by under his nose and twist Slavin completely off his feet and with a swing and a heave as a beggage man's got a trunk, tosses him neatly into the lap of one of the sports writers who has been making derogatory statements about the famous moustache.

New Contract

I see the sports writer whispering to Slavin as the bruiser climbs off his lap and I immediately get suspicious. And no sooner do I get that way than those suspicions are confirmed. Slavin, back in the ring, takes a flying dive at the boy and down they go in a heap. Slavin on top, his body covering the lad's face and torso as well as his right hand which he is working very vigorously in a pulling motion. My heart bleeds for that moustache which is no doubt, being torn from the roots. The crowd roars as the boy howls with pain.

All you can see of my boy is his hands and arms, which seem to be waving aimlessly about. But I'm watching closer than anyone else because I have a suspicion of what's coming.

Suddenly the boy's hands sneak down from the water bucket to the rim of Slavin's tights. One hand holds the elastic away from the body, the other reaches in and pulls forth a white rabbit, which scampers quickly across and around Slavin's broad back.

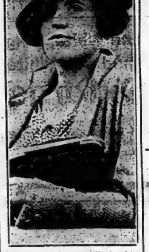
The crowd howls again, this time with laughter, and Slavin, his contrasted map a picture of amazement looks back over his shoulder to see what's it about. He spots the rabbit and yells letting go his hold at the same time. The boy rises in his wrath, with his moustache hanging by a hair, promptly tosses Mr. Slavin in his spine and wins the bout.

I'm in the office the next morning when the kid comes in. He looks woefully young without the moustache and I hardly recognize him except that he absentmindedly tears a telephone book in half while getting seated.

"Look Bess," he says, "did you like—like—"

"Yes," I say, "I saw 'em," I said coldly. "He drawed a deep breath.

"Boy what a kidder!" he murmurs. Then he squares his shoulders. "I suppose, you'd like to have your contract back after what happened last night?"



"Right," I say taking the contract from his hands and tearing it.

He stands up and starts to go. "But I call him back.

"Listen," I say, "as a wrestler, you'd make a good actor. So if you'll sign this contract, maybe we can get together again.

He smiles and signs and that, little children, is how I come to be manager of Marco the Magician, who is laying them out in aisles from coast to coast. P. S. Mushky still gets his 10 per cent.

Having nothing better to do, the American followed the caravan toward the bazaars. "Perhaps," he thought, "I can pick up some souvenirs or a rug cheaply." An hour later, satisfied with his bargaining, he was departing.

Then a great commotion amid an excited crowd about a silk draped platform attracted him. Edging through the throng he saw a number of girls reclining upon cushions or undulating about, obviously displaying their charms.

They were of various ancestry, color and comliness. One by one as he watched, each slave girl fell to the highest bidder, claimed by some Turk, Arab, or other bearded son of the Prophet. Now the "auctioneer" began a long harangue.

Evidently he was holding the buyers in anticipation. Then the silken curtains parted and Dick saw a lovely, slender, dark-eyed girl appear. As her veil was thrust aside, in startled amazement he cried: "My God! A European woman!"

Little Benny's Note Book

Mr. Riley the hookrn ladder driver was sitting outside of the fire house smoking his corn cob pipe in his blue shert and slipers and I stopped going passed and started to ask him questions and talk to him, saying. Who was the hardest person to save you ever tarred, Mr. Riley?

Tiny Tillie the fat lady in the time museum, Mr. Riley said. Partly due to her weight and partly due to her disposition. I had quite a time with her. You see, she had a grate reputation for stubbornness and contrary acting, and instead of saving herself like the other freaks at the last fecned out the window and yelled till somebody went up after her, he said.

And that was you, heh? I said, and Mr. Riley said, Unfortunately it was. I made my grate mistake when I warned her not to faint, because I'd hardly got the words out of my mouth when over she came like an elefant out of the skies rite into my arms, and although I'm a strong man bieeve me I knew I had something.

Did you carry her all a ways down, stark? I said, and he said My boy, I'm a heavy man myself, and our combined weight, together with the fact that I happened to be wearing all my meddles at the time, was too much for the stairs and they collapsed right under us like so much tissue paper and the next thing I know we was in the celler with me on the bottom, being naturelly an unlucky man, but at least we was out of the smoke and flames and I tried to show me way out through the celler window and that's where I made my 2nd grate mistake, because I got stuck half way as tite as if she'd been bill in there with the bilding, and it took 4 plumbers to get her out, and being the kind of a person she was sent their bills to me, and being a gentleman I naturelly payed them, and if you know anything about plumbers bills you can imagine 4 of them.

O, I said, and he said, You bet your boots, and now run along and let me read me paper.

Wich I did.

LIQUOR FIGHT MAY BE CARRIED TO PRIVY COUNCIL

Peel, Huron, Perth Stay Wet in Court Finding

C. T. A. RULES

Conference Will be Held At Queen's Park

Toronto, June 29.—There probably will be an appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada that the Ontario Temperance Act is in force in the counties of Peel, Huron and Perth, Premier Stephens said yesterday.

Not until the Premier consults with the attorney-general's department next week, will the course of the provinces be decided upon, he unofficially predicted last night that an appeal to the privy council would be launched.

Attorney-General Roebuck would not discuss the ruling. Administration of the Liquor Control Act now rests with Premier Hepburn alone, he pointed out, and he believed comments should come from the latter.

"I would say that it would probably be the Premier," Premier Hepburn stated last night.

The Peel-Perth-Minden case carefully qualified his statement by saying that such action was dependent on the result of detailed conference at Queen's Park.

"I haven't had time to go into the matter with the Attorney-General," he said.

At the same time the Premier stated that the present liquor facilities permitted in the three counties under Ontario law would not be immediately closed down. No order to that effect would be issued, he said, until the Premier had considered the Supreme Court of Canada judgment in detail.

On the other hand, the Premier stated that it was unspeakable that any new authorities would be issued in the three counties where the Liquor law is in force, pending cancellation or granting of additional rights under the Government's policy.

The Premier announcements of last night formed all the official light thrown on the legal impasse precipitated by an Ottawa decision at Queen's Park yesterday.

Supreme Court Decision

OTTAWA, June 29—(CP)—Three Ontario counties, Peel, Huron and Perth, are under the prohibitory provisions of the Canada Temperance Act until they vote themselves out, the Supreme Court of Canada decided today in dismissing an appeal by the Dominion Government, to extend the scope of the Ontario Liquor Control Act is not in force in these counties. The decision clears the confusion caused by the administration of liquor laws in Ontario.

BOROTRA'S DUEL IS CANCELLED

Bounding Basque Says Everything Satisfactory

Wimbledon, Eng., June 29—(AP)—Threatened duel between Jean Borotra, French tennis champion, and Didier Poulain, Parisian sports writer, has been called off, Borotra revealed today.

The two were to have met on the field of honor as a result of an exchange of acerbities in the Paris newspaper L'Auto over Borotra's decision not to play with Poulain in singles this year although he entered the Men-Doubles championship at Wimbledon.

"Everything has been settled to my satisfaction," the bounding Basque said, "and I have been assured that Poulain is a gentleman. I was a poor sport.

In the 1934 singles here because the Wimbledon courts are grass. It would have been quite a different matter, he said, if there had been such courts as would have been necessary in the Davis cup matches."

"With the right hand, the man averaged 364 tremors a minute," he said. "The women averaged 232 tremors. The men averaged 274 tremors a minute with their left hands and the women 221. Left-handed women performers had 239 tremors to 233 for users of the right hand. However, extreme use of tobacco increases hand tremors.

Tax Rate of 49.2 Mills Struck by City Council At Adjourned Meeting

Unemployment Relief and Gas Company Adjustment Responsible For Higher Rate

STATEMENT GIVEN OUT

Chairman of Finance, Alderman T. Y. Wills Explains in Detail How Money Used

The tax rate for the City of Belleville was struck at 49.2 mills at an adjourned meeting of the City Council held on Friday evening in the City Hall, the meeting concluded shortly before one o'clock. The meeting extended for two hours. The rate is higher than last year, which was 47 mills, but the council were forced into this action due to the unemployment relief estimates and provision having to be made for other expenditures not controllable. The session in committee was a lengthy one due to some members holding out for a lower rate than was struck, but the estimates could not be reduced in but this was impossible and take care of all that was needed in the estimates. All members of the Council were present excepting Ald. Foley and Ald. Barlow and when the session was completed there was only ten present. At one time there was talk of a meeting in the chamber and the Mayor notified the council should one care to leave, the council would automatically be declared adjourned. However, the estimates were put through and the bylaws duly ratified.

STATEMENT GIVEN

After introducing the bylaws to raise the rate a financial statement prepared by Chairman of Finance, Alderman T. Y. Wills was read by the chairman, and later added to the press for publication. This statement explains why the rate had to be raised this year and included the items which caused the increase. At one time in the proceedings the rate would have been 50.3 mills but James Howard of the Colonist Institute Building made application for $8,000 and the application was accepted by the council, and this being placed in the Mayor's hands was responsible for the rate down a little better than a mill. estimated receipts brought the rate down a little better than a mill. The statement of the Chairman of Finance is herewith given along with the estimates as passed:

In introducing By-law containing the estimates of receipts and expenditures upon which the taxes for the current year will be determined, I beg to call your attention to the substantial increase on various occasions in the tax rate. I think the committee has made every effort to reduce expenditures where it could be possible and has exercised every vigilance and care to them to find a method of increasing the revenue to meet these expenditures without having to resort to further taxation. The Finance Committee has carefully considered the question of applying the earned surplus from sinking fund investments over and above the amount required by the Act, with a view of reducing the sinking fund levy this year, but upon obtaining advice that this course was not considered improper and constituted good business practice.

I feel, however, that I must make the comment that if this is the law, such law should be altered. I do not believe that the legislature ever intended municipalities to accumulate large surpluses and to actually require them to levy sufficient money for sinking fund purposes.

In summarizing the estimates submitted it will be seen that the actual estimated revenues for the current year are somewhat in excess of 1934, although because of a much larger surplus carried over from the end of 1934 than from the end of 1933 the total revenue for 1935 and of 1933 than from the end of 1934 the total revenue for 1935 and may be somewhat less. Except for the item of St. Agnes Manor. The slight variation is not responsible for any substantial change in the tax rate. The many economies in the way of savings have been effected and the amount estimated for expenditure this year is less than last year and the only item that shows a substantial increase is that for unemployment relief.

RELIEF UNDER PROGRAM

It might be possible to reduce a few of these expenditures by small amounts by adopting a process somewhat similar to that followed in the Township of Thurlow, but I am convinced that could be thus saved would not make any substantial difference in this year's tax rate.

In 1934 the sum of $37,000.00 was raised for relief and the amount spent only totalled some $30,000.00. In addition however a substantial amount of relief was given through various forms of work projects and the Government the costs of which were met by the issue of debentures and were therefore not provided for by any rate for current purposes. The debentures have been retired for and as the city has been forced to spend some $20,000 of May last, for relief purposes, the $50,000.00 estimated for this for 1935 is considered absolutely required. The debentures issued for the relief work of 1933-34 are now requiring an annual levy to retire them, which represents an amount of $17,000.00 per year for the next ten years. It is thus clear that the total amount required to be levied for purposes for this year will be some $37,000.00 which is an increase of $12,000.00 over last year's levy and is the equivalent of a tax rate increase of approximately 5 mills.

There is one other substantial item that has been added to 1935 expenditures which did not appear at all in the 1934 estimates, and that is the item of $2,000.00 for gas. I do not think it is necessary at present to go into the question of how this arose and the various discussions

Army And Navy Veterans in Canada

The Army and Navy Veterans is a composite body of returned veterans and locally they are to be congratulated on the magnificent way in which they are looking after the interests not especially the widows and orphans of deceased comrades, but have instituted a system of giving to the children and dependants, that they have been able to give the orphans a glorious time and a never to be forgotten event that they invite all members of soldiers veterinties to attend the celebration at Oak Lake about July 15th, 1935.

Remembering that this is Jubilee year and so the A.N.V.O. thought fit to get all ex-soldiers organized, so by meet and undertook the year with one accord of goodwill and fellowship. The first meeting was held 16 days gone by.

"Ten cents each," was the little last reply.

"Are they male or female?" asked the lady.

"Both, mam, they're just kittens," came back the unexpected reply from the little lass.

FIRE PUMPER IS PURCHASED

don't do something pretty soon, the coal is going to be quite heavy. We can put the light in pretty good safety with the purchase of a pumper and I think that the city should purchase a machine for the protection. It has been suggested a Ridde machine is the all Canadian machine of standard value and I think it would be good business to make the purchase. The machine must come from Belleville if it is accepted."

Alderman Guthridge— "I am given to understand, that the condition of the water is improved over that of last year and that the water is considerably higher and that there is not as much algae, also against increasing the rate but could see the money saved in buying this pumper be used to legally put off some of the debt of the city."

Alderman McCreary—"The complaint we have was built up by the water consumers of this city and the purchase of a pumper will mean putting off a larger expenditure in the form of a duplicate of the installation of duplicate filter beds, which will be far more than is being asked for the pumper."

Alderman Hill—"After the expenditure of $2,000 recommended from the Ratepayers' Association at a previous meeting, I would be very satisfied for the council to act promptly and purchase the pumper purchased in the neighborhood of $4,000."

No Reflection Intended

Alderman Sale—"When I vote against the purchase I do not wish reflecting on the honesty or integrity of Chairman McCreary, but I do admire your frankness in dealing with the matter but we have to do what is necessary and economical. I know it is true this purchase will not affect the rate but it will be the payers' money and if we can't afford it we can't afford it, that's all there is to it."

Alderman Bowen—"I would like to have the opinion of the Fire Chief on this matter as to whether he is in favor of the chair and have no right to take part in the discussion, but I am personally opposed to any money being taken from the sinking fund for any purpose to reduce the tax rate. That is their money accumulated by the consumers and they are entitled to the protection, that a fire pumper will give them. Mr. Ray Fretwell was the condition of the water and pressure last year due to the fact he asked what would have happened had an accidental fire such as happened in Trenton had occurred here with the pressure in same condition as it is at present. I am not opposed to what I want all to understand, that the $2,000 was offered for filters but that it was intended, for, to the protection of property and the fire department, but the "algae" condition made it very difficult. There's only one thrill that the little boy likes better than a trip to the main zoo are, and that's the circus. Especially the travelling circus boy. If you have children of your own, you can wait in their eyes the thrill that you once had when you saw the "big show." If you are single, and have nieces and nephews younger to take you to the circus, you have a thrill coming to you.

That is the quiet time when the old-fashioned Scotty Circus with its trumpeters, its gilded wagons, spangles, its beautiful parade, its fascinating side show, trains is scheduled to arrive at dawn, and Connaught Park railroad railroad from Peterboro.

In anticipation, an end of youngsters will be up at 4 o'clock, and with the alarm clock set for an unearthly hour, be dressed at a peak in the very front row with the spectacle of human and animal acrobats bleeding him kisses from the backs of galloping horses or out of trapezes, and the big top. Above all, however, the love of the circus is by no means confined to the folks, and many of the "boys" who have been waiting for the early arrival of the big show, range in years to seventy.

But the arrival of the circus will dispel all such anything happenings and the day is going to be one that is bound to find a goodly gathering of journeyers from the nearest to the railroad yards. But just to see the beautiful and trained animals, the hundreds of horses, the gaudy wagons, and the red and red camels and pads meeting in the show grounds before the big "free show" not to be overlooked.

Trumpeting bands, moving calliopes, rumbling wagons of red and gold, prancing horses, and the thumping camels will take possession of the downtown streets shortly before noon Tuesday when the big show will open its doors for parade of the Cole Bros.-Clark Bros. Stretching from one end of the line to the other hundreds and hundreds of horses in gorgeous trappings, and the camels will be in evidence, and the magnificent five street processional ever given in this or any other country.

CANADA'S BIRTHDAY

Canada is at the beginning of her sixty-ninth year. So year by year Confederation recedes into history farther and farther.

It is significant that this Dominion was created at the time of a crisis of affairs, and the spirit of the confederacy was such that it dominates even at this age nearly seventy years after, despite the fact that new and unexpected problems have presented themselves and are pressing for solution. But whatever the difference of the times of 1867 and 1935, the attitude of the people must be the same as it was so many years ago when Canada came into being as a unity. To depart from the intention that was in the minds of those who sat at the board when the provinces came together in an enduring compact has never entered the mind of the people of this day. To think of it would be disloyalty to the founders.

Into the sixty-eight years of our life as a nation many events have been crowded. Canada as a Dominion came on the stage of the world theatre when the most momentous events in the world theatre were preparing and this country had but caught its stride when it was called to put down trouble in the West, then to serve in the South African campaign and then to play no small part in the greatest expedition in history when six hundred thousand citizen-warrior sons and nurse-daughters of Canada crossed the stormy Atlantic to bear a share of the world's burden in a foreign land and for defence of the imperial tie. Meanwhile she had been meeting the solving of internal problems and at last she figured among the great of the nations as an international force in world thought and in world commerce.

For some years the Dominion, like other countries, has been facing gigantic problems, the solution of which can only be reached as we continue in the spirit of the pioneers and founders and of the Fathers of Confederation. Such an attitude will not only solve internal problems but will help to solve the international orises as they develop.

The Fathers of Confederation gave Canadians a heritage—the brightest in all history—a virgin land waiting development under the modern conditions. So far Canada has made good in the effort; from one end of the Dominion to the other there is the same loyalty to the ideals set forth by the men of "sixty-seven". Signs point to the continuance of this stern rugged steadfastness.

But as Sir Robert Borden pointed out a few days ago on his eighty-first birthday, the times demand the participation of all men. Only by such can the Dominion represent all men, who desire to have a hand in forming this nation in its vivility and seat of youth so that it will go far as a world power for good.

THE ELEPHANTS

With the coming of the elephants to Belleville a few days older citizens will think of the old times when a circus used to draw from the farthest extremities of this county and district, when it was the greatest event of the year in popular appeal. Some may perhaps think of Jumbo, the elephant, which was killed at St. Thomas. (By the way, St. Thomas is to hold an Old Home Week celebration taking its motive from the Jumbo incident, life-size pictures of the elephant to be posted about town, while miniature representations of Jumbo will be fastened on lamp poles and arches.)

Now the story of Jumbo ran like this. Jumbo had a great name as the greatest and biggest of the pachyderms in captivity. He was making his way to his private car when a freight struck him and ended in the height of glory the career of one of the big things of its earth.

An elephant made news in Belleville. Many do not forget the incident one day years ago when one of the elephants used for moving circus wagons out of the mire at the crossing in Bridge Street, Bridge became so annoyed with the mud and the rain which had made work unpleasant even for a circus elephant that he bolted to the west. He started, tank held aloft, through the railway yards and hundreds of spectators with one accord performed like frightened simians or monkeys, trying to get up on box cars, or like fugitives from flood waters or from fire. This elephant ran to the street and after a while was overtaken by keepers who had raced after him on horseback and was led back gently to the railway yard where he performed his work faithfully and quietly.

Young and old have always been attracted by the circus elephants about which stories are retold and retold, stories which will live to time's end.

The elephants and the associate animals which make up a large part of a circus are always sure of a welcome. Somehow the big man and the little boy think the same about these animals ever since they were large enough to look into a Noah's ark.

THE BOY WHO DIDN'T PASS

(Republished by Request)

A sad-faced little fellow sits alone in deep despair
There's a lump arising in his throat and tears stream down his face;
He wandered from his playmates, for he doesn't want to hear
Their shouts of merry laughter since the world has lost its cheer.
He has sipped the sup of sorrow, he has drained the bitter glass,
And his heart is fairly breaking; he's the boy who didn't pass.

But he doesn't seem to hear it, showing plainly something wrong;
Comes his faithful little spaniel for a romp and bit of play,
But the troubled little fellow sternly bids him go away
And alone he sits in sorrow, with his hair a tangled mass,
And his eyes are dim with weeping; he's the boy who didn't pass.

Oh, you who boast a laughing son and speak of him as bright,
And you who loved a little girl who comes to kiss you 'night,
With smiling eyes and dancing feet, with honors from her school,
Turn to that lonely boy who thinks he is a fool,
And take him kindly by the hand, the dullest in the class;
He is the one who most needs love—the boy who didn't pass.

PUBLICITY EXPERTS of the Gala Bros. Circus certainly know their business—their high and lofty billposting is an artistic triumph in paste and paper, while the newspaper advertising is of high calibre. Even a blind man would know that the circus is coming to town Tuesday for if he cannot see he can hear the kiddies shouting the glad news in front of the billboards.

SETH PARKER and the Jonesport Folks will be back on the air Sunday evening at 10.30 radio time, or 9.30 Eastern Standard Time. Seth has been trapaizing around the world in an old-time sailing vessel to fulfil a dream of his youth that has quit the sea and returned to his loving friends in Jonesport. Seth's voyage with broadcasts en route was not a howling success for the storms came and the winds blew and the schooner just laid down and almost died in the trough of the sea, busting the expedition with its college hats and all right there and then. Seth radioed a SOS call and with his usual luck brought a royal prince in a warship hastening to his rescue. Now Seth Parker and his pals, back in the peaceful atmosphere of Jonesport, that quiet little village on the coast of Maine, will radiate peace and good will through the good old-fashioned hymns that our mothers used to love so well. Welcome back Seth, all is forgiven, and the Jonesport Folks will again send many listeners to bed Sunday nights with a good taste in their mouths and a song of joy in their hearts.

BUGS IS BUGS, but there are big bugs and little bugs, bugs we know and bugs we do not care to know. Big bugs eat little bugs, and the best way to eliminate bugs which destroy crops and trees is to find out their deadliest enemies in the bug world and turn them loose upon them. Then if the enemy bugs are found to be a menace find some other bugs which will put them "on the spot." Roughly that is one of the many and devious ways of entomological experts such as are gathered in the Dominion Entomological Laboratory on Dundas Street, Belleville. There the life and habits of insects destructive to agricultural life are studied and protective measures devised. The news that an appropriation of $60,000 has been passed by the Dominion Government to promote the battle against bugs at Belleville is a sign that bugs expecting to enjoy a profitable season in the Bay of Quinte region had better pack up and git while they are able for the mortality is bound to be great—other sections of Canada please take notice also.

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

Over this stiffe affair hours had passed, and the rest of the day seemed long; though the heat became worse, and the sand-blast stiffened in our faces till the air could be seen and heard, whistling past our camels like smoke. All around was flat and featureless till five o'clock, when we saw low mounds ahead, and a little later found ourselves in comparative shelter among sand-hills coiled abruptly with tamarisk. These were the Kaaem or Sirhan. The bodies and the camels made the rocks by now sunset, and the evening mellowed and reddened on us from the west. So I wrote in my diary that Sirhan was beautiful.

Having took a mouthful of water we of course ate nothing: which made it a continent night. Yet the certainty of drink on the morrow let us sleep easily, lying on our lee to prevent the infusion of foodlessness. Arab habit was to fill themselves to vomiting point as well, and either to go dry to the next day, or, if they carried water, to use it lavishly at the first halt, drinking and bread-making.

Next morning we were down slopes over a first ridge, and a second, and a third; each three times as steep as the other; till at eight o'clock we dismounted by the side of a valley of the utter-smoothing sand, so called, being fragrant all about us. The camels, unloaded, ate eight-seven feet, to water creamy to the touch with a powerful and most brackish taste. We found it delicious and since there was greenstuff enough for camel food, decided to stay here the day.

CHAPTER IX
Feasts of the Tribes

Next morning, at a halt, a fast march of five hour four camels being full of life after their case of yesterday. Soon after we started we met palm trees, with tamarisk clumps between and there, and presently, in about seven feet underground, tasting sweeter than the water of Aaron. Yet this side camp of Auda's proved "Sirhan water," the first unfriendly well of the desert, which refused a halter to soap, and developed (after two days in closed vessels) a foul smell and a taste destructive to the inlaned flavour of coffee, tea, or bread.

Verily we were tiring of Wadi Sirhan, though Nasir and Zeid still assigned works of plantation and reclamation here for the Arab Government when by them settled such vanishing imagination was typical of Syrians, who easily persuaded themselves of possibilities, and as quickly reached forward to lay the present responsibilities on others. "Zeid," said I one day, "your camel is full of mange." He was, and slackly agreed he nourvilly, "in the evening, very quickly, when the sun is low we shall draw her skin with ointment."

During our next ride, I mentioned mange once more. "Ah," said Zeid, "it has gone now. I have given curative the establishment of a Veterinary Department of State for Syria when Damascus is free, and we shall have a staff of skilled surgeons, with a school of probationers and stalesals, in a central hospital, or rather hospitals, for camels and for horses, and for donkeys and cattle, even (why not?) for sheep and goats. There must be scientific and bacteriological branches to make researches into universal cures for animal disease. And what about a library of foreign books?" —and district hospitals to feed the central, and travelling inspectors."

"With Nesib's eager collaboration he earned Syria into four inspection circuits, each with a sub-inspectorate.

Again on the morrow there was mention of mange. They had slept on their labour, and the camels were reunting well. "Yet, my dear, it is imperfect; and our nature stops not short of perfection. We grieve to see you thus satisfied to snatch the merely opportune. It is the English certainty, lifted into their vein. "O Nesib" said I, "and O Zeid, with your partners, even in the midst of things, entail the ending of this world's ills by the time I am fifty. I am angry I pray God to swing our globe into the fiery sun, and to make the human race not-yet-born: but when I am content, I want to lie for ever in the desert. I'll become a shade myself." Unsaintly they allotted the task to Allah, and on the sixth day the locust camel died. Very truly "Zeid" said, "Inshallah, Allah willing, He did not drew her." Auda, Nasir, and the rest of us kept camel riding and constant care. We could, perhaps, just starve the mange off the beasts by many and frequent near by under some thorns, while we ate the camel-boiled meat, an estimate of our numbers, and prepared roasts for us in the evening. In the morning it was its little batch of visitors. The meal took hours to consume, and it was long after dark when they called us to it. I woke and stumbled across, ate, made my way back to our couched camels and slept again.

Our party was prosperously over. We had found the Howeitat: our camels were in excellent fettle; we had our gold and our explosives still intact. So we drew happily together in the morning to a solemn council on action. There was agreement that first we should present about thousand pounds to Nuri Shaalan, by whose conference we were in the desert, and that from him liberty to stay while enrolling and preparing our forces; and then we should be moved off we wanted him to look after their families and tents and herds.

Daily Short Story

MOVING DAY

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Phil Harris yeared at the list of names in the vestibule of the apartment house, found the one he was seeking and rang the bell. The lock clicked.

He went up carrying the lamp cradled in his arms. The girl was standing in the doorway at her apartment the light making a faint halo behind her. Phil said, "Miss Barton?" She looked at him and said, "Yes, I'm Miss Barton. Aren't you Mr.—?"

"Mr. Harris—Phil Harris," supplied Phil. He shifted the lamp. "I used to live where you did," he continued "You moved today, didn't you?" She nodded and then said, "Won't you come in. The place is in a frightful mess." She looked at the lamp as she stepped back.

"Yes, it's yours," said Phil, interpreting the look. You see, I moved today, too, and they must have gotten out things mixed up. I called the moving company and they said you had reported the loss of a lamp."

Explanations

Helen Barton quickly cleared a table. "Put it here" she said. "Don't stand there holding it. I know how heavy it is."

She remembered him now, the young man who had lived on the third floor. She had often met him in the hall or on the elevator and exchanged a few words with him, to speak to her. And sometimes she had wished that he would But he didn't and then, it wasn't well for a young woman to strike up an acquaintance with any man just because he lived in the same apartment house. Or, so she had decided.

Phil placed the lamp on the table and looked at the unpicked furniture and inevitable confusion of "moving in."

"I wish I could help you with this," he said. "I've just gotten my own stuff in place. It's no fun. And some of these pieces look right heavy for you."

"Thanks, but I won't need any help," she replied. "A friend is coming to help me tomorrow." He turned to go and she hastily added, "I, girl, I mean. She has good taste. She knows how to arrange things. I just put them any old way."

Uneasy Laughter

They both laughed, during the instance a little. Then Phil picking up his hat which had dropped to the floor unnoticed, said, "I would have brought your lamp earlier only I had a hard time getting hold of the moving man. He gave me your address."

She said, "It was certainly very kind of you. It wasn't worth much but an aunt gave it to me and every time she comes to see me she looks for it. You know how relatives and presents are!"

They laughed again the laughter of ease, and once more Phil said, "Well." If only he could sound the proper pay note on which to leave, he thought. He just couldn't say "Well," thump on his hat and move out. He was sure he'd stumble before he reached the door.

So she took courage of despair and said, "I hope you don't mind if I say that I'm glad you made the mistake I mean, that I got your lamp. Because, well, because you see—I had noticed you, before and, well, I wished I know you so that I could meet you and—" And she stopped.

She stood before answering. Then. "That wouldn't have been any great crime—speaking to the girl," she said. "And we know each other now."

Phil said, "That's right, we do. I was wondering if sometime we couldn't go to a movie or—or something."

It was very painful, exceedingly painful to Phil. He did stumble before he reached the door but once outside, that didn't matter. He was going to see her again and that was all that counted.

His felt like kicking himself down the stairs when he thought of all the months he had wasted. And how with his things so that he could return it to her.

He was whistling as he went out on the street, and walked two blocks in the wrong direction before he noticed it.

"When a Man Sees Red", a thrilling drama now showing at the Capitol Theatre, featuring Jean Parker and James Dunn, is starred Guy Kibbee and Alice Mathison.

FINE PEONY DISPLAY AT LOCAL NURSERY

Possibly the finest display of peonies that may be seen in any part of the country may be viewed at the nursery of Mr. Lorne Brooks, Dundas Street, where thousands of blooms are now at their height of perfection.

There are some unusual specimens including one whose shading is such a dark red as to be almost chocolate and another that has a distinct tinge of yellow.

The syringas are also at their best and make a splendid show while the mauve and white "Pinks" fill the air with their spicy fragrance.

Mr. Harold Reid has every reason to be proud of his flower show and it might be added that he welcome all lovers of flowers who may like to go in and wander down the many rows of beautiful blooms.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Under the Pampas Moon"
Warner Baxter Star of Many Successes, Scores Again

Warner Baxter proves his versatility when he plays the role of Cesar, the gaucho, in Fox Film's "Under the Pampas Moon," which has been produced by C. D. DeMylrea, directed by James Tinling and features the tango before the picture ends. Tuesday, Wednesday and Monday, matinee and evening.

Baxter sings, dances, plays the guitar, throws the bolas and rides a horse in addition to playing a number of romantic scenes.

The star could sing, play the guitar and ride a horse before he began making the picture but he had to learn to throw the bolas and dance the tango before the picture could go into production.

The studio procured a bolas expert to teach Baxter the art of throwing the bolas, the South American form of dance and Rita Cansino, expert in all styles of dancing, was engaged to contract to Fox, taught Baxter the tango.

As for singing, that's another story. Fox screen actors excel Baxter in his art.....as he has proven in more than thirty pictures he has made for Fox Film, beginning with "In Old Arizona" in which he portrayed the "Cisco Kid" that catapulted him to screen fame, and he gives a greater and more romantic role in his newest picture.

Ketti Gallian is co-starred with Warner Baxter in "Under the Pampas Moon", and the supporting cast includes such well-known personalities as Joan Bennett, the famous dance team of Velos and Yolanda, John Miljan, J. Carrol Naish, Soledad Jiminez, Jack Latzke, George Irving, Blanca Vishor, Rita Cansino and Arnold.

Selected Short Treats

"Two Lane Drive" is a very funny Cornet comedy with a cast of famed Hollywood favorites and lead by Billy Lee, News of the World, and "Cookie Carnival" another of the famous Our Gang comedies, fully Symphony Kartunes in new third dimensional Technicolor and the exhibition of the feature attraction.

Will Rogers, Sunday

Will Rogers fans all over the country are looking for the laugh holiday that will give them their favorite star in "Doubting Thomas" coming to the Belle Theatre Tomorrow (Sunday) evening at 12.00, 2.45, 5.30, 8.15 and 11.00 when the funniest role he has yet assigned to a picture fan will whirl cyclone by itself.

The favorite star is supported by a great cast of stars including Billie Burke, Alison Skipworth, Sterling Holloway, Frank Melton, Gail Patrick, John Qualen, Johnny Arthur, Helen Flint, Fred Wallace and "U" Rex Bell.

"What, No Men" a kmetri musical comedy by the beautiful Technicolor, Poppye in "We Aim to Please" and Movie Hill Show, a melodious Novelette will be exhibited.

Sealed tenders addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Campbellford, Ont.", will be received at this office until 4 p.m. (daylight saving) Tuesday, July 14, 1936, for the erection and completion of a Public Building at Campbellford, Ont.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied by the Department and in accordance with the conditions set forth therein.

Each tender must be accompanied by a certified cheque on a chartered bank in Canada, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to 10 per cent of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If a bond is required instead of a certified cheque, the Department will notify us within ten days of the opening of tenders. If not returned within that period the deposit will be forfeited.

By order,
H. DESJARDINS,
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, June 20, 1936.

AT THE CAPITOL

"When a Man Sees Red"
"Mary Jane's Pa"
Powerful Human Interest Drama, Beautiful Feature

Once in a lifetime there comes to the screen a picture that contains such a definite quality that it hits straight to the heart of every man, woman and child.....

Such a picture is "Mary Jane's Pa" now showing at the Capitol along with a thrill packed action Western picture, starring Buck Jones and entitled, "When a Man Sees Red" at the Capitol.

Guy Kibbee gives an excellent characterization of the happy-go-lucky tramp printer, kindly, good humored but who is constantly swayed by an inborn wanderlust to seek new climes.

Alice Nicholson has the stellar role as wife of Kibbee, who, when deserted, starts a small-town newspaper to earn a living for herself and children.

Much pathos is supplied by Kibbee when he accepts a position of housekeeper in his own family unknown to his children. An intensely dramatic climax furnishes the theatre patron with a most unexpected thrill and unravels the plot to the satisfaction of all.

The other half of the bargain program is supplied by Rock Jones in a rousing hard-riding Western picture that enables that virile hero to demonstrate some expert horsemanship. The scenes are gorgeous laid in the wild and mountainous mountain country. Peggy Campbell, a Vancouver-born girl who was schooled in the art and lead in "When a Man Sees Red" and portrays her role like a seasoned veteran of the cinema.

A Fox Movietone Newsreel is also shown and displays some extraordinary shots of the spectacular new ocean liner, the Normandie. Other news events from the various parts of the globe prove interesting.

Coming Soon—Series, Tuesday

The screen's ace western star, George O'Brien comes to the Belle on Tuesday in his new thrill packed action film "The Cowboy Millionaire"; beautiful Evelyn Bostock and Edgar Kennedy appear in leading roles. Preceding Western, Merkel, Conrad Nagel and Harry Langdon appear in "The New York Night" on the same program. Continuous show Tuesday commencing at 1 p. m.

NEW YORK, CLOSE

New York, June 28 (AP) — The stock market ended its second quarter today in a fairly cheerful frame of mind although the usual Saturday profit taking prevented a resumption of yesterday's advance.

Legislative influences vied with business hopes and some continued traders stood with reporting more definite developments. The close was a bit irregular, with prices unchanged 200,000 shares.

It was one of the dullest sessions since the latter part of March, brokers said that many of their customers had gone on a week-end holiday early.

The news was neither particularly good nor bad. The utilities inclined to dip on the metals and scattered specialties were in demand. Rails and issues were virtually unchanged.

Realization that the week had its sensational spurt of Friday and cotton did little. Sugar, up in the Foreign exchange were featureless.

In the Canadian section of the list, Mackay, Dome Mines, International Nickel were easier, while Canadian Pacific held unchanged. Gains on the curb, Hiram Walker got up a major fraction but Aluminum pulled at a trifle. Dominion Government 4½ were a shade lower. Canadian dollars closed unchanged at 15-16 cents.

Mining shares may have improved in response to the advance of ¼ of a cent an ounce in the price in New York price of imported bar silver. But this group was firm yesterday when most issues showed fractional lower.

U. S. Smelting and Eastman Kodak got up about a point each. American Telephone and United Corporation improved last as did also International Business Machines dropped two points. Chrysler, G. E., Steel, Santa Fe, Westinghouse, General Motors, Chrysler and many others moved only a shade in either direction.

Board Room Gossip

With the payment on August 1 next of the dividend of 7 cents a share just declared by Base Metals Gold Mines Limited, shareholders will have received in all a total of 13 cents in dividends. The company paid 6 cents a share on March 1, 1935, 7 cents a share on February 1, 1935. This far in the current year 14 cents will have been paid out in dividends. Another dividend of at least 7 cents a share is expected in the fall.

The mill is currently treating over 300 tons daily of ore from the ore. Costs have been lowered since the recent increase in tonnage as deepening of the ore zone has not increased costs and $4.50 a ton. Net profits are currently running at an annual rate of better than 40 cents a share.

That the amendment to Title I of the U. S. National Housing Act increasing bank loans for modernization from $2,000 to $50,000 under 20 per cent guarantee is expected to result in a market for many millions of pounds of copper and its allays is the prediction of Bertram B. Caddle, secretary of the Copper and Brass Research Association of New York. Mr. Caddle expresses the belief that within the next twelve months the consumption of copper and its allays for the building trade will reach a total of more than 300,000,000 pounds.

According to private information received from a usually well informed New York source, Washington has resumed its program of purchasing large amounts of silver in the world markets. But a few days ago a number of senators made a protest and are administration to pressure silver purchases.

During the ten months ended May 31, 1935, the U. S. mint of monetary silver has been increased by 421,497,000 ounces. Secretary Morgenthau recently stated that 283,000,000 ounces have been purchased, 112,-850,000 ounces domiciled under the nationalization order of August 9 last year and 24,647,000 ounces of newly minded domestic silver received under the executive proclamation of December 21, 1933.

At the annual general meeting of Sylvanite Gold Mines Ltd., president Edward L. Koons informed shareholders that "the plant is in the very finest condition and power enlarged and improved mill is unusually well designed and installed, and running smoothly with the greatest efficiency and a minimum of attention. The mill is being operated at full crowded with a daily tonnage of over 400 tons. The north vein system on the upper levels continues to yield new ore and has an excellent outlook for future needs of the mill that no plans are at present being considered to shift to the south vein. Since the annual report appeared, under date of Nov. 6, new and important ore has been developed between the 2,000 and 3,000 foot levels."

The final session of the week on Canadian stock exchanges did not change the general liquidation that appears just prior to the three-day week-end holiday. Trading was narrow and fractional gains were fairly common.

The return to the investor who buys Canadian stocks at the market is at 2.14 per cent. The high price for 1935 is the basis for this computation. The main explanation would seem to be that capital is apparently willing to pay the high price for the stock because it appears a good hedge against the large loss in unknown monetary future. An advance in the dividend rate to $1 a share is expected in some quarters.

The resignation of Harry Oakes from the board of directors of Base Mines Limited is officially announced. In some quarters it is believed that Mr. Oakes will go back to the country because of high taxation. Mr. Oakes is reported to own over 50 per cent of all the capital stock of Lake Shore Mines Limited.

Produce Markets Remain Firm

Montreal, June 28.—There was a steady demand for eggs on local produce markets yesterday. Arrivals were of the quiet side, with pre-holiday spirit in the air.

The butter market was 1½c to 1½c per lb., mostly the latter, for creamery in cartons of 1-1. lbs. of No. 1. Receipts, 6 boxes. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted up to 26½c per lb. or solids and 21½c for prints.

The cheese market was 10½c to 10¾c for No. 1 Ontarios, mostly the latter, and generally 10¾c for No. 1 Quebecs, with the range 9¾c to 10c. Receipts, 8,931 boxes.

The egg market was steady to firm, with graded shipments arriving fairly freely. Trade was mainly 22½c for A-large, 21 for A-medium, 19½c to 20c for B, and 17½c to 18c for C. Receipts, 1,040 cases. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by wholesale jobbing houses at 24c for A-large, 24c for A-medium, 22c for B and 21c for C, with some variations, and 1c less when bought loose. Cooking eggs were not enough for a-1 eggs coming in as yet to form a market.

Toronto, June 20. — Freshsilver dullness prevailed on the local produce market today, with wholesale trading being unusually quiet. Not at all, buyers apparently having decided to await the publication of the final-of-the-month average figures before making commitments. It was reported, however, that some wagon butter was sold during the day at 25c.

Egg prices were mainly unchanged, but the market undertone continued decidedly firm. Cheese also was on the quiet side.

PROGRESS SEEN IN BUSINESS TRENDS FIRST HALF YEAR

Review of Activities in Canada Indicates Upswing in Business

(Canadian Press Financial Writer)

The jagged line of Canada's economic chart, stumbling, falling and rising again through the war years and sweeping to new heights and depths in the decade beginning with 1925, has continued to the first half of 1935 the upward phase started in February, 1933.

Recovery in recent months has failed to approximate the rapidity of the upswing in the first 18 months of 1934, faltering quite definitely in the spring months. But a more reassuring condition has developed in recent weeks. The commodity-export index figure for the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at its latest June adjustment stood at 97.8 compared with 91.9 at the corresponding period of 1934.

Despite domestic and international disturbances, trade has recorded steady expansion, production has increased, employment improved and volume of the basic industries, particularly farming and gold mining, achieved marked progress. Highlights of the first quarter in the last half year was the production of wheat, cars, iron and steel output, improved markets for cattle and hogs, increased production of some lines of foodstuffs and revival of the building industry.

Gains in net available employment figures show an aggregate payroll of $92,506 for manufacturing, mining, farming, the federal bureau unadjusted index for a standing of 93 compared with 92.0 at the same period of last year, an increase of 3.5 per cent. Similar gains are reported by all provinces with Quebec in the lead.

Construction And Trade.

Building operations have recently returned to a semblance of activity, pressing needs in the matter of commercial and residential structures being augmented by a heavy program of public works, authorized by the federal government, mainly as an unemployment relief measure. Reconstruction indicates the whole Dominion, issued in the first five months of this year totalled $57,973,-000 compared with $37,700,000 in the same period of 1934, a gain of 17 per cent. However interest rates on new mortgages are a factor in the revival of home building.

In field of international trade Canada continues to hold her credit-balance position with the national. Both exports and imports have increased, the favorable balance of exports slightly larger than for the first half of last year. Exports in the first five months of 1935 totalled $246,295,250 compared with $231,-000,000 in 1934, an increase of 6.6 per cent. Imports totalled $213,946,700 against $201,303,958, an increase of six per cent.

The balance of exports over imports was $24,767,946 compared with Canada's favorable balance of $30,419,975 in the same months of last year. Total external trade in the five months was $460,244,954 against $432,303,958 in the corresponding period of 1934, Mr. Oakes is responsible for 50 per cent of all the capital stock of Lake Shore Mines Limited.

ROAD CONDITION IS DISCUSSED

Cheese Board Asks City Council to Fix Dock Road

At the Belleville Cheese Board today (Saturday), some discussion took place relative to the condition of the road leading to the dock where weekly cheese is loaded upon the steamer Glen Allan.

Mr. Jas. H. Cook opened the discussion by stating some action should be taken to have the road in question placed in a proper condition for trucking of cheese and other merchandise to the boat at the dock. The road was in a bad condition and he considered that the city council be asked to improve same. Cheese being transported over it foled to a considerable extent.

Mr. G. F. Cahrom—"The road in question should be made smooth. He had requested the Public Works department to place it in a good condition by scarifying, rolling, filling and oiled. Could be done a short distance to do.

Mr. W. B. McCamus—The Harbor Commissioners had been spoken to in regard to the place of road in question. They had objected to the paying for the oiling of that part of the street.

Mr. Cook—"If you want the Cheese Board to make a grant."

A motion moved by Mr. Cook, seconded by Mr. Ostrom prevailed, that the City Council be requested to place that portion of the road in good condition.

Dividend Payments in June Established New High Total

Canadian Corporations Disburse $55,054,508 or Amount Greater Than Total of Past Five Months —Five Million Over Previous Record

Toronto, June 29.—Dividend payments in stockholders of Canadian corporations in June established a new high record for any one month in the history of the Dominion, surpassing the previous high mark established in January, 1931, by almost $5,000,000.

Distribution for the month, as reported by E. A. Pierce and Co., members of the Toronto Stock Exchange, amounted to $55,054,508, contrasted with $41,298,249 for the corresponding month last year, and $17,993,417 for similar month of two years ago. June, 1935, is the first month to see only surpassed the previous high peak of $50,260,651 of December, 1930 but was the second of the total payments of $50,894,151 for the first five months of 1935.

In the first six months of the current year Canadian corporations have disbursed dividends in excess of $100,000,000, with the total for the period reported by Pierce and Co. against $97,324,219 in the first half of 1934, and $84,330,834 in the same of 1933, $64,035 for corresponding months of 1932.

Evidence of Improvement.

Large contributions to the total dividends for the month were made by Imperial Oil Ltd. and its subsidiaries, International Petroleum Ltd. Imperial Oil rewarded stockholders with the regular semi-annual dividend of $1 a share, as well as a 37½ cents a share, or a total cash bumsement of $2,874,918. International Petroleum paid a dividend for the half year of 75 cents and a bonus of 50 cents a share, making a distribution of $1,905,110. Andian National Corporation, Limited, associated with the above-mentioned companies, in addition to the regular dividend for the half year of 75 cents and an extra of $1 a share, or a total of over $5,000,000.

Evidence of continued improvement in gold mining conditions in the Dominion is to be found in the favorable dividend action by a number of companies in June. Acadia Gold Refining Co. and Corrugated Paper Box Co. were able to make payment on account of arrears of preferred dividends and declared a first distribution on this security since June, 1930. Canadian Wineries Ltd. increased its regular quarterly common shares from 10 to 15 cents, and the dividend of 50 cents a share on the ordinary stock of Barcelona Traction, Light and Power Co. was the first since June, 1934. The only unfavorable action was the deferring of the dividend on the preference stock of Western Canada Flour Mills Ltd.

International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, Lake Shore Mines and Noranda Mines Limited, Canadian Canners companies to pay dividends in excess of $1,000,000 apiece.

Tax Rate of 49.2 Mills Struck by City Council At Adjourned Meeting

and arrangements that have taken place between the City and the Ontario Shore Gas Company, as this has all been previously considered and a source of action decided upon. It suffices to say that the amount to be paid on the gas debentures this year is estimated at some $11,000 against which may be set an expected revenue of at least $3,000 making this an additional $8,000 that did not have to be provided for in 1934. This is equivalent to another 8-10 mill in the tax rate.

EXPENDITURES UNCONTROLLABLE

"It is thus apparent that the increase in expenditure of some $40,000.00 requiring 8 to a rate increase of 4 mills is directly attributable to provision being made for the full cost of unemployment relief out of ordinary revenue and the increase occasioned by the gas plant liability. Both of these items I consider to be in the class of uncontrollable expenditure. They do not take an increase provided for in previous years since which the City has no control and an unexpected expenditure of some $2600.00 in the costs of the Vermilyea trial which are further uncontrollable expenses that add to the burden of taxes this year. As a result of all these circumstances I think it is quite clear that any increase in the tax rate is occasioned solely by matters over which the City has little or no control and if these could have been eliminated there would actually have been a reduction from last year.

LOCALS OUTHIT At One Time, Radios Enjoyed Three Run Lead

Displaying their poorest form of defensive baseball, the Radios and Stewart-Warners literally tossed away their O.S.B.L. re-play game at Kingston Thursday when the home-towners came from behind to eke out a belated ninth inning rally with the score at 9 to 4 in a hectic, thrilling innings struggle. The result of the game, which practically affect the standing of the league because it remain locked at the top ladder, while the Radios are still in second position, tightened considerably at both clubs displayed their entire roster of pitchers during the contest, Kingston entering three moundsmen, while the Locos trotted out two.

Calhoun and Jamieson were the starting hurlers, with the local hurler having a shade the better of the argument until the sixth, as the Radios jumped out in the first with a three run rally in the fourth. A couple of poorly engineered defensive plays for the Ponies, a walk, a wild pitch and feeble fielding efforts on the sixth paved the way for the more and subsequently see the locals scored one run, tying the count, but failed in the fielding efforts to retain the slender margin. Kingston, starting in the sixth, a pinch hitter took Williams out of the pastime and Ernie Smith, substituted, promptly banged out what the one he walked scoring on Conway's single, chalking up the day's lone hit him, after pitching to only three home town batters. Tommy Meadmore, who succeeded on the mound for the Daily-ied clan and was nicked for three runs in the fourth, found Green's double drove Jamieson to the showers in the ninth with Stud Clancy back on the relief hurling duties. Then Sero promptly cuffed the next pitch for a single which sent Green and knotting the count, that Kingston united with their initial winning rally for one. Clancy, despite the fact he pitched to only three Most Valuable batters, was credited with the victory. Calhoun yielded eight hits and two walks, while Jamieson was touched for three safeties and a walk and Meadmore allowed six safeties and two walks in one inning. Calhoun walked two as Jamieson passed one, R. Smith, first batter to the fielder of the day, while Coompeau and St. Louis were the only safeties, both getting three hits, including a triple each. Dean Ford and Sandy Ferguson stopped doubles for Belleville, as Roy Smith, and Dave Hill in the former's case, while Coming through as a pinch hitter.

The Play

The Stewart-Warners opened occasionally as Grey welcomed Jamieson's assertion, Ferguson's fly ball ringing single. Kerr duplicated this feat Barclay bunted along the first base line for safety, Grey was nailed on third, he having reached that far on Ferguson's attempt to catch Barclay's eastbound. (This play proved very crucial in the run decide then failed to score). No further sign of scoring was in evidence until the fifth inning when Barclay greeted with a sharp single to left. Calhoun was hit with a pitched ball two on. Green popped to second and as Roy Smith rifled a bit to left, Barclay was nailed at the plate, while Calhoun and R. Smith both scored on Ford's double to centre. The Radios did not have a chance to score again until the sixth when Mills, hitting for Williams, grounded out. Green doubled to centre and scored on Sero's single. The locals did not score in the initial frame even after getting two singles and a double play saved the locals in the second and it was not until the fifth that the fire was kindled in the home bench opened. With one out H. Smith walked, Jamieson sacrificed, a hit passed third, both base runners advancing a base. Then came a wild pitch of Scrutton's single that went between Kerr's legs for three base. Scrutton scored, Jamieson scoring, but out at the plate by Calhoun and the latter was nailed trying to steal second. St. Louis singled and scored on Joyce's double to right, Joyce on the score and again in the eighth St. Louis put the Ponies one up when he tripled to left and scored on Joyce's sacrifice. Scrutton walked in the ninth, went to second on Smith's sacrifice and scored on Coompeau's single, to win the ball game. The local defeat gives the Ponies wins and an equal number of losses, while the Ponies are leading the C.O.B.L. parade with five victories. Belleville plays Kingston at Belleville play in Peterboro on Monday.

"RECREATIONS" WIN BY 18-12

In a free-hitting contest the Recreations moved up a peg in the local Mercantile softball loop last evening with an 18 to 12 victory over the American Hardware nine. The Recreations moved out in front in the initial frame and were never headed.

Carson, on the hilltop for the Recreations, settled down to pitch practically shut-out balls from the fourth inning until the final out while Graham, his opposing mound-counterpart was nothing to the Recreation batsmen. The victory elevates the Recreations into second place in the league standing, the London Lunch aggregation having yet to taste defeat in the Mercantile loop.

The line-ups:

Recreations—Tapp, Relyz, Mansfield, B. Relyz, Morgan, Carson, Foley, Hayward and Hopkins.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

It was tough enough to take the 9-4 trimming in Kingston last evening on the diamond, but when the Radios dropped the O.S.B.L. game this afternoon, well it was a little too much for the good-willing. Considering the first loss they took was the ball game, the Radios coming out on the short end of the score in the O.S.B.L. club executives and league officials all know, last night's game was a replay of the four-all tie played in Kingston on May 31st, the locals being the home club constitution the visiting club, Belleville in this case, is to play the re-play game in the event of the twelve players, a total of $60.00, is to be split among them. Following this the expenses of the game are to be deducted and the remainder, if any, is to be divided among the two contesting clubs and the league. Well when the gate receipts of the Kingston executive handed the locals $28.00 and when Skipper Calhoun asked "what's the split" the reply was, "well that's all that's left after the expenses are paid" and they were in reality what we are actually getting at is the fact that the expenses charged up by the Kingston Club for last night's game were exactly $116.07, the gate receipts and attendance was not as long as your arm; for as a matter of fact the attendance was the lowest of the season. Just what the old saying, "something about a good thing."

In regards to the actual game there can be little said, except that it was the worst exhibition from a local angle, but from the home town viewpoint we suppose it was hotsy totsy, when you're left with a ninth inning rally. As a rule the Radios have had little trouble with their swats but yesterday they looked woefully weak in this department, errors of omission and errors of commission, spelled defeat and more especially the latter. The Radios took an early game lead and seemed headed for victory in sure-fire victory, but a little dumb baseball was the most inopportune time cost Calhoun and Co. the game. When in the spectators saw an array of pitchers, starting in the Kingston ranks and the Ponies two. A rather queer angle occurred when Clancy was announced as the winning pitcher and Ernie Smith chalked up with the loss. Clancy pitched only one inning Belleville batters and is credited with three outs, while Ernie Smith had Smith faced the same number of Kingston hitters and lost. All of which goes to show that Skipper Calhoun deserved a better fate than he received, he pitched the full nine game long enough to stem the tide of the Kingston onslaught hurled a fair art of a game, but as we have stated, poor fielding, or perhaps we should say poor baseball on the locals a game, after they had it well in hand and on the ice. "Let's hope the game at Peterboro brings better results.

Unfortunately we were unable to attend the Intermediate ball game being which, according to the street talk, were also played this afternoon. The Richards-Parnell bout had all the making of a real fast one and while it was abruptly terminated by the hour limit. Not being present we cannot make comments on the bout but it just looks like something went wrong, that's all.

Monday, Dominion Day, sees no great amount of sport activity locally, but a few events will attract a large public, particularly in the morning the annual Y.M.C.A. across-the-bay swim will be held, starting from the government dock. In the afternoon the Belleville Lawn Bowling clubs will commence its annual doubles tournament while at the same time golf matches have been arranged at the Belleville and Bay Shore clubs. Besides these attractions the fast Oakwood senior softball team from Toronto will play at Cenral Park for two games with the local Aqnsa A. C. The games will be played early in the afternoon and again at twilight. Many local sporting clubs will undoubtedly participate at outside points, however, as the Stewart-Warners play a O.S.B.L. game in Peterboro in the morning, the local South End A. C. punching bags are going to participate in a galaxday of aquatic sports, while the Adanac Canoeists are competing in the annual Toronto Dominion Day canoe regatta. Getting back to the local angle, we understand that a large entry list is being compiled by the executives of the "Y" across-the-bay swim, including many outsiders.

According to the C.O.B.L. schedule Stewart-Warners will journey to Belleville home game all next week, appearing at Peterboro on Dominion Day and back up in Belleville on the week following. To date the Radios have a commanding lead with "Big Ben Cronin" and the local executive could do worse than endeavor to have this game played after the termination of the C.O.B.L. has issued orders that all postponed games must be played before the termination of the regular league schedule, one of the reasons being that on Civic Holiday Monday, the heralded Toronto invasion of baseball will take place, when for was held up until July 1. The Radios need more baseball and with the home game of May 29 postponed, next week would be an ideal time to stage this game, owing to the fact that there is no senior game scheduled for Monday and on Tuesday would be an ideal date.

The senior softball loop is becoming more screwy every day. For instance — on Thursday the Toronto Canadas walloped the league leading Belleville nine on Friday the same Canadas were defeated by the Belleville batters and is credited with three outs, while Ernie Smith had Smith faced the same number of Kingston hitters and lost. All of which goes to show that Skipper Calhoun deserved a better fate than he received, he pitched the full nine game long enough to stem the tide of the Kingston onslaught hurled a fair art of a game, but as we have stated, poor fielding, or perhaps we should say poor baseball on the locals a game, after they had it well in hand and on the ice. "Let's hope the game at Peterboro brings better results.

Parnell - Richards Bout Ends In Draw but Not Before a Lively Tussle Witnessed

Contestants Battle Outside Ropes in Main Bout

SNIDERE WINS

Strong Man Experiences Little Trouble With Marvin

With each contestant in the main bout having taken a fall, the George Richards-Ted Parnell main attraction of last night's Thursday wrestling show was abruptly terminated at the end of the limited hour, the bout being called a draw, the bout ended following a fistic encounter outside of the ring during which Richards drew blood on the Jewish grappler and he was bleeding copiously as the contestants re-entered the ring just prior to the final gong. In the semi-final bout Elmo Bolden, herculean Dutchman, proved too strong for the ex-masked marvel, and won easily, while in the preliminary bout Jack Pearl won over Billie McDougall.

The third or main bout was by far the most exciting as the more lithe and agile Richards moved slightly too fast for the method-ical Parnell, who in turn gave no quarter and continually bore down the Jewish lad with punishing holds and body slams. However, Parnell won the first fall of the best following a series of flying tackles. The second saw Parnell resort to pugnacious antics as he drew the wrath of the fans upon his head, but the more agile Richards, cool and composed, eventually won over his heavier opponent following a series of flying tackles terminated by a body slam and main bouters returned for the third fall and one hour just wearing the fans up when a regular disturbance started as they left from the ring and started a belly royal, that terminated when Referee Wells and the second interfered, but not until after Richards had been cut following a blow of a well-placed fist by Parnell and the blood was flowing freely from Richard's face as the contestants re-entered the ring. At this point the bout was stopped and abruptly terminated by the timer's gong, Referee Wells calling the bout a draw.

In the semi-final bout of the evening Elmo Snidere, the 230-pound Dutchman, proved too strong for the Jewish lad from Montreal and won his bout with a body slam after only twenty minutes of wrestling. Snidere applied many punishing holds, but the defensive tactics of Marvin prevented a clear-cut fall defence and it was only after concerted efforts on the part of Snidere, that the ex-masked marvels shoulders were pinned to the mat. In the preliminary Jack Pearl experienced little trouble in defeating McDougall, of Greendale, Cal., with a back slam.

Following the bouts Jack Evans announced that another card would be presented next week at which time Al (Bunny) Dunlop and Jack Pearl will appear as opponent. It was with regret that the locals wrestling fans learned of the untimely death of Chris Gallipeau Monday, who died suddenly at his home on Thursday and is being buried today.

Trenton and District

Action of Council Members Upheld by Meeting of Body

Erection of Two Pillars Causes Lengthy Discussion

TRENTON, June 29 — (Special) — Several items of interest were discussed last night at the regular monthly meeting of the Town Council which was held in the Municipal office. Mayor Harry Cory and all the Councillors Hugh O'Rourke, R. J. Whitney, C. H. York, E. Ellis, R. S. Westfall and George LaBrash were present. An amendment to the present parking by-law was passed which is effective at once. From ten a.m. until ten p.m. no parking will be allowed on the east side of Sidgwick street from Dundas to Elgin streets, on the west side of Front street from Dundas street to Middle street, on the west side of Albert street from Dundas to Quinte street, and on the south side of Dundas street in front of the Post Office block.

Several cases of relief workers being discharged will be investigated by the Mayor.

The erection of two pillars in front of the Royal Hotel caused much arguing by Councillor Whitney. The week was started early in the week with the understanding that it would be passed without difficulty at the meeting. Councillor Whitney stated that he did not believe in putting things over without a meeting. Mayor Cory said that sufficient inquiries of the householders had been consulted before the permit was granted. He stated that the mayor had learned four or five that altogether as had not. Mr. Whitney said that the owner of the hotel got everything in order, the pavement, gravel and trucks that the town paid for. "He did not", shouted Councillor Whitney. Councillor Whitney returned. His stated that Mr. Cory was misinformed the material and the town did the work. When Councillor Whitney asked if he knew of the permit being granted he answered in the negative. He was in favor of it. He also stated that he is easy to get in touch with for the pre-arrangements. When the vote was taken it gave the Mayor the right to enter into an agreement with the hotel owner whereby he will pay the town one dollar per year for the rent of the pillars on the town property and relieve the town of all responsibilities, that may arise.

Maurice Feckes will be paid $30 for two motor cars of an indigent person who passed away. Permission was given for the opening of a junk yard on the Sidney street property provided the junk dealer puts up the transient trader's fee and erects a fence to hide the view of the junk from nearby residents. $60 was authorized to be paid Herb Mayhew for water supplied for one year for fire protection in North Trenton.

A resolution was passed to the effect that if the Department of National Defence and the Trenton Public Utilities Commission enter into an agreement for the town to supply water to the airport, the town will furnish all labor in laying the main from the easterly limits of the town to the connection at the airport providing the Department of National Defence furnish all materials.

Mayor Cory stated that last year at this time the town owned the Bank of Montreal $100,000 in comparison to the $83,500 owing at present. The new Community Hall was discussed but will not be dealt with until a later date when the keys arrive.

The cut-of-town bread question was again brought up. The Mayor made the following statement to the press for the grocers and bread dealers to read.

"At a former meeting the council passed a resolution of which all grocers were supplied with copy advising them that out-of-town bread must not be accepted on relief vouchers. At the last special meeting of the council the police department reported to the council that with various bakers to ascertain how much bread was taken by the grocers and the information is to be checked against vouchers issued to the various stores for that given period. It is the intention of the council that where it was found that where the resolution is being ignored the penalty will be applied and that no further vouchers will be issued on these stores until they agree to abide by the resolution".

CABOOSE AND SIX CARS DAMAGED

Rear-end Collision Occurs Between Freight And Passenger Train

Welland, Ont., June 29.—(CP)—Crashing into the rear end of a standing Pere Marquette freight train on the Welland Division Central Railway yards early today the New York-Advance mail section of the Toronto-Buffalo flyer wrecked the caboose and six freight cars. A fuel tank, fifth car from the end, was smashed, and although it was rammed halfway into the sixth car there was no explosion.

It was reported members of the freight crew, seeing a smash was inevitable, jumped to safety just before the crash.

Officials refused to advance any reason as to the cause of the smash pending an official investigation.

Persons in the vicinity at the time of the crash said a caution light was burning at the rear end of the freight train.

The passenger train was able to proceed after a 15-minute delay. The fact that the crash occurred just west of the yard switches unlocked re-routing to be carried out with little delay.

THE RED TIGER

By ALANSON CROSBY

"I don't care to hear any more from you," said Judith, but not raising to make a scene in the office she waited, withdrawing her hand from Stokes' clasp.

"Listen, Beauty, I can't let you go like this. I've got to have you! I—I'm crazy mad for you! I'll marry you today, Beauty, I'll get the license right away!"

"Don't bother," said Judith dryly. "I'm not marrying anybody today."

"Do you mean that you are refusing my offer of marriage?" demanded Stokes, incredible. "You won't marry me?"

"Not today, tomorrow, or ever," said Judith firmly. "I don't want you, Mr. Stokes, on any terms."

And without waiting for an explanation, Judith opened the door and walked out, leaving Stokes to ponder the credible fact that a poor stenographer had refused an offer of marriage from a wealthy and not bad-looking man who had just come into an inheritance of a half a million dollars.

That she had incurred young Stokes' deep enmity by her refusal to marry him, Judith did not doubt, but her nature to overlook what she would be disposed to regard as the whims of a spoiled child, was a vain thing to do little, Stokes, incapable of viewing his original proposal in its true light as a insult to the girl, and thinking he had made a wonderful and magnanimous concession to her scruples in offering to overwhelm her last with a marriage ceremony, would now consider that he had been deeply wronged and affronted by her refusal to consider him even with a wedding ring. Judith knew that now, more than ever before, she would have to count him an enemy both to herself and Randall Spencer—and an enemy whose power and resources might be considerable, even if it were a million dollars to ten against them.

That gentleman was seated at the desk so long used by Hezekiah Baxter, but Judith scarcely noticed in deep reflection.

He looked up as he heard Judith's step and smiled pleasantly, fleeting her indicated chair with what said:

"You won't need them, Miss Bates. I have a matter of importance to discuss with you. Please be seated."

Wondering vaguely what was coming, Judith took the chair he indicated, facing him.

"You have worked in these offices about a year, haven't you, Miss Bates?" began Mr. Anderson.

"A little more than a year," said Judith running it over in her mind. "Fifteen months."

"I haven't seen much of you. Miss Bates, as you have mainly my dictation. I learned from Miss Selmer, though, that you have been very efficient."

Judith inwardly thanked Miss Selmer, rather surprised that, the "Mother Superior", who had seemed to resent her from the first, should say for her, should have been so gracious.

"You did a great deal of work for Mr. Baxter, also, I remember, lately deceased, didn't you?"

"Yes he called me in nearly every day for dictation."

"I remember how, his remarking once that you were a capable stenographer that you made very few errors and that you were a fine young woman and he was going to do something for you. I gave it little thought at the time, as the impression of that remark is impressed upon me now."

Judith was mystified at the trend Mr. Anderson's talk was taking. Obviously though there was nothing for her to say.

"Did Mr. Stokes ever indicate to you that he intended to—to—remember you in his will?" Mr. Anderson continued.

"No, sir," Judith replied. "He was very kind to me, but I was not expecting anything in that way."

"Well, he has done so," said Mr. Anderson, "and I am glad to offer congratulations you, and I am glad to believe that his not inconsiderable fortune has been left to be bestowed."

As he spoke, the lawyer picked up from his desk a sheet of folded paper, straightened it out and handed it to Judith. She recognized the scrawled handwriting of Hezekiah Stokes. Her astonishment showed in her face.

"Quite a pleasant little surprise, isn't it?" smiled the lawyer. "You how well he liked you, he wouldn't need your note book and pencil."

"But I don't understand," said Judith, bewildered. "Mr. Harold Stokes had told me that a typewritten will, signed by his father, in which he left everything, except a few charitable bequests, to his nephew."

Mr. Anderson's eyes narrowed.

"If so," he said, "Another will! Well, it won't stand up against this one, for the was written on the day Hezekiah Stokes died. I found it just this morning, after you left me. My partner had quite an ingenious hiding place for papers in his desk—and the will was in it. I suppose I remember his telling me a month or two ago that if he were to die suddenly I should remember this desk thoroughly for special papers. Well, I remembered it before—by his murderer—but he overlooked the secret hiding place. You will notice you a very healthy young woman, Miss Bates."

Judith was staring at the bit of paper in her hand, but not reading it. "Murdered!" she cried. Mr. Anderson took the paper from her and indicated the signature.

"It is a holograph will, you see—that is, written wholly in his own handwriting. Therefore it needed no witness to its signature, and I and everybody in this office can testify that the whole instrument is in his handwriting. It leaves his entire estate, without reservation, to you."

PERSONAL COUNSEL

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"You take it very calmly," said Mr. Anderson at length. "Do you fully realize, young lady, that you are coming into a fortune of several hundred thousands of dollars—not some time in the distant future, but at once? It will enable you to make quite a change in your mode of living I imagine. You can buy and sell out, perhaps, many interesting foreign countries. You can throw away that notebook and pencil."

Judith was gripping them with unusual intensity and the lawyer noticed with amazement as the dog as the faraway look in her eyes as she sat staring at nothing. Brought to herself by Mr. Anderson's dismissal Judith replied:

"I hope you do not think me ungrateful Mr. Anderson.

"I wondering if I really ought to take this money. I had no claim on Mr. Stokes of any kind." I wasn't aware that he even liked me. I thought the coolness of the dictation I took for him. I do not feel that I have any right to his fortune."

"Your scruples are creditable to you, Miss Bates," said the lawyer, "but if you will reconsider you should feel rather foolish in the circumstances Mr. Stokes had no near relatives except his nephew. If you refuse the legacy the estate will revert to him under the terms of the earlier will which young Mr. Stokes seems to have come in possession of. Personally I think my law partner did a very fine thing when he changed his mind and bequeathed his estate over to you instead of young Mr. Stokes. We can have the will admitted to probate at once. Incidentally he names you as co-executor with you and I shall be glad to serve in that capacity. My familiarity with my partner's investments and affairs will probably be of some benefit to you when you an immediate advance of—say, a thousand dollars—for personal and incidental expenses while the legal preliminaries are being gone through with." Mr. Anderson drew his personal check-book toward him. "Of course, you will not want to work here any longer. We will miss you, but the time has come for me coming in to consult us occasionally on the business of your estate, unless—he smiled quizzically—you have yet decided to put your business to another firm."

He extended a check for $1,000 to Judith, who took it mechanically.

"Pay to the order of Judith Bates, one thousand dollars," she read. It seemed a dream, from which she must awake soon.

"Thank you, Mr. Anderson; you are very kind. It all seems incredible that this money can be mine. And I can use it for any purpose I see fit?"

"Of course. Buy yourself a lot of new dresses—though, I don't see but who you look as well-dressed as any woman need to be. If the thousand dollars isn't enough for your immediate wants you can draw on me for more of course. The income from your estate Miss Bates, if you leave the investments as they stand, will run close to $30,000 a year. Do you think you can get along on that without touching the principal?" Mr. Anderson's gray eyes twinkled and his face relaxed in a smile.

Thirty thousand a year! And she had never earned more than a thousand, Judith tried to realize it, but failed. Still something was troubling her and taking all the joy out of the prospect. She hated to question the subject, but it was up to her to frank with this kindly man, who seemed to be her friend.

"I am still in doubt, Mr. Anderson, about the propriety of my taking this legacy," she began.

"That is rather amazing," said the lawyer, tyrip. Miss Bates!"

She hurried though with it.

"The manner of Mr. Stokes' death—it was murder, wasn't it?"

"Yes—but that need not disturb you. You were in no way accessible of course."

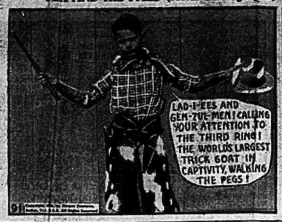
"But they accuse Randall Spencer—and he is innocent, Mr. Anderson!"

"The police seem to be very confident—but I've known police theories to be exploded. I'm not entirely sold on that proposition myself. You are a friend—of Mr. Spencer's?"

"I love him!" Judith confessed defiantly. "And he loves me!"

Mr. Anderson coughed and fingered some papers on his desk.

"This is very interesting," he said. "Did I understand that Mr. Spencer was engaged to another lady."



"He was and is for that matter, I suppose," said Judith contrarily. "But he loves me and we will be married when all this trouble is straightened out. I shall not hesitate about accepting this fortune, Mr. Anderson. To have you say to me through Randall Spencer's lawyer that I wasn't entitled it, if I see," said Mr. Anderson, "it would be extremely unfortunate if Spencer were guilty."

"He's not!"

"I'm, I hope not. The fact the police have worked up against him is, of course, based upon purely circumstantial evidence. I have seen men convicted of murder on the trial with a single pin-prick. The thing is to find the pin."

TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

Daily Short Story

The Girl on Page One

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Friday last said Dick Dooley "Pete has a new girl friend. Her name is Dorothy Dare and she's the girl from Dare and Dare, Dress Designers, Fifth Avenue. Her picture's in the paper."

Funny how you'll read the most unlikely items when you're interested in something. Dooley's last sentence was the clincher. I'd never paid much attention to the society page before, never had cause to, but now I was interested. Pete was a swell guy and I'd been trying to get him a date with a girl for months. Pete, bashful as a schoolboy, never had enough self-confidence to make a play for anyone he admired from afar. Dorothy Dare was the girl for him. Pete was a handsome, well-built chap with a good job and a future. Besides, he was a regular fellow, and I knew he'd treat Dorothy right.

I found the picture in the Evening Courier. The dizzy page had been given over to the doings of the Four Hundred, and there was a picture of Dorothy Dare, a beautiful girl, with her name, address and telephone number. Pete lived in a boarding house on Lexington Avenue, and I knew he'd be home at that hour. I called him up.

"Pete," I said, "I've got a swell girl for you. Her name is Dorothy Dare and she's a peach. Her picture's in the paper. Get a load of it and then call her up. I'll bet you'll be glad you did."

"Dorothy Dare?" Pete's voice was puzzled. "Is she the girl on page one?"

"Sure," I said. "She's the girl on page one. Her father's a millionaire, but she's a regular girl. Get a load of her picture and call her up. You'll be glad you did."

"Thanks, Bill," Pete said, and hung up.

I was glad I'd done Pete a good turn. He was a swell guy and he deserved a break. I knew he'd call Dorothy Dare and I knew he'd like her. I was sure they'd hit it off. I was glad I'd done it.

Pete called me up the next day. "Bill," he said, "I'm in a jam. I've got a date with Dorothy Dare tonight and I'm broke. Can you lend me a couple of bucks?"

I could and I did. Pete thanked me profusely and hung up. I was glad I'd helped him out
